PANCHAYAT.

—District panchayat.—Mad. Reg. XII of 1816.—Mad. Reg. VII of 1816.—Madras Civil Courts Act, III of 1873.—Neither the total repeal of Regulation VII of 1816 by Act III of 1813 (Madras Civil Courts Act) nor the partial repeal of Regulation XII of 1816, so far as it contained words of reference to Regulation VII of 1816, abolished the jurisdiction of district panchayats. A Collector cannot order a reference to a district panchayat under Regulation XII of 1816 unless there has been (1) an inquiry as to whether the parties will submit to the jurisdiction of a village panchayat; (2) an objection from either party to such reference, and a request in writing by one of the parties that the matter be referred to a district panchayat *CHIKATI ZEMINDAR (ZEMINDAR OF CHIKATI) v. PARDANASHIN WOMEN—continued.

1. —Dealings with parda women.—Onus of proof.—Evidence of bona fides.—A Hindu parda woman is entitled to receive in the Courts of this country that protection which the Court of Chancery in England always extends to the weak, ignorant and infirm, and to those who for any other reason are specially likely to be imposed upon by the exertion of undue influence, which is presumed to have been exerted unless the contrary be shown. In all dealings, therefore, with persons so situated, it is incumbent on the party interested in upholding the transaction to show that its terms are fair and equitable; the most usual mode of discharging such onus being to show that the lady had good independent advice in the matter, and acted therein altogether at arm's-length from the other contracting party. RUKHUN v. AHMED HOSSEIN . . 22 W. R., 443

2. —Execution of deed by pardanashin.—Registration of deed.—Evidence of execution.—In cases of transactions by parda women, mere registration does not go far to corroborate the proof of their validity, unless a mutation of names takes place, which, if done under a mooktearnama, has not the same effect as against a parda woman as it has against a person capable of transacting his own business and acting for himself. Where the conveyance by a parda woman is impeached, there ought to be clear evidence, not of the mere signature by the party, but that the secluded woman had the means of knowing what she was about. FUZZUL HOSSEIN v. AMJUD ALI KHAN . 17 W. R., 523

3. —Registration.—Registration.—Evidence of genuineness.—The mere registration of a lease is no proof of its genuineness, especially in the case of a lease which was first produced as a valid instrument nearly nine years after its execution, and which was alleged to have been granted by a pardanashin lady, but no satisfactory evidence was given that she had put her signature and seal to it, and that she did so with a knowledge of the nature and

4. Explanation of document.—In order to charge a pardanashin woman upon an instrument or power purporting to have been executed by her, it is requisite that the person relying on such a document should give satisfactory evidence that it has been explained to and understood by her. SUDISHT LAL v. SHEOBHARAT KOER . . . I. L. R., 7 Cal., 245

5. Onus probandi—Evidence of deed being explained—Pardanashin without legal assistance.—Where the defendant, who was shown to be an illiterate pardanashin lady, denied on her oath that in executing a wakfnama she had any intention of creating an absolute wakf, or that she understood the effect of the deed when she executed it, the onus was on the plaintiffs to show that she was fully aware of the character of the document and its legal effect, and that she had proper professional advice at the time of its execution. In the absence of such proof,—Held that the deed was not binding on her. DELROOS BANOO BEGUM v. ASHGAR ALLY KHAN . . . [15 B. L. R., 167: 23 W. R., 453

Held, in the same case, on appeal to the Privy Council, who affirmed the judgment of the High Court. A Court, when dealing with the disposition of her property by a purdah woman, ought to be satisfied that the transaction was explained to her, and that she knew what she was doing; especially in a case where, without legal assistance, for no consideration, and without any equivalent, she has executed a document, written in a language she does not understand, which deprives her of all her property. In the case of a pardanashin woman who has no legal assistance, the ordinary presumption, that if a person of competent capacity signs a deed, he understands the instrument to which he has affixed his name, does not arise. ASHGAR ALI v. DELROOS BANOO BEGUM [I. L. R., 3 Cal., 324

6. Death-bed disposition.—Proof of bona fide intention.—Where a deed purports to have been executed by a parda woman, the Court should see that it was fairly taken from her, and that she was a free agent and duly informed of what she was about. When the disposition is in the nature of a death-bed disposition, the Court that upholds it ought, from whomsoever it proceeded, to be satisfied that it was the free voluntary act of the party by whom it purports to have been executed and expressed her real intention. GRISH CHUNDEI LAHOREE v. BHUGGOBUTTY DEBIA [14 W. R., P. C., 7: 13 Moore's I. A., 416

7. Mooktearnamah Validity of.—The issue being as to whether a certain mooktearnamah, which purported to have been signed by the respondent, was valid or not, the validity of the mooktearnamah was pronounced against as there was no legal proof of its execution, and the absence of legal proof was not compensated by any legitimate inference arising out of or by any of the facts disclosed by the other parts of the case, the whole of the transactions relative to the execution thereof being of a very questionable character. SEE TUL PERSEHAD v. DOOLHIN BADAM KONWUR [8 W. R., P. C., 22: 11 Moore's I. A., 266

8. Document obtained by chief male member of family.—A document obtained by the chief male member of a family from a parda woman should receive a strict construction. SOOKYABOYE AMMAL v. LATOHMI AMMAL [13 W. R., P. C., 3

9. Contract with pardanashin woman.—Proof as to knowledge of transaction before execution of document.—Where two Nambudri females—a mother and daughter (plaintiff)—executed a document in favour of defendant, a male relative (nephew of the former), which purported to divest the plaintiff and her mother of the entire property of the illom of which they were the sole proprietors, and to vest it in the defendant in consideration of his promise to marry and raise up heirs to the illom to which the plaintiff and her mother belonged, and to maintain the plaintiff and her mother till death, and it was proved that plaintiff was well aware of what she was doing, and had subsequently clearly recognised the defendant as absolute proprietor of the property and was contented with his having assumed the position pointed out in the document,—Held that the transaction was valid, and could not be called into question on the suggestion that plaintiff was placed at a disadvantage and was not fully cognisant of the irrevocable nature of the deed; and that the rule laid down by the Privy Council in Ashgar Ali v. Delroos Banoo Begum, I. L. R., 3 Cal., 324; and in Tacoordeen Tewarry v. Ali Hossein Khan, L. R., 1 I. A., 192, had been complied with, and that defendant had discharged the burden of proof upon him. TAMARASHERRI SIVITHIRIS ANDALJANOM v. MARANAT VASUDEVAN NAMBUDEIRIPAD [I. L. R., 3 Mad., 215

10. Variances between pleading and proof.—Judgment of the High Court dismissing a plaintiff's suit confirmed on the evidence, in a case in which plaintiff sought in the lower Court to set up a deed of alleged sale from a Mahomedan pardanashin lady in favour of her niece, which position he abandoned before the High Court, where he suggested that although it was not good as a deed of sale it would be good as a deed of bounty, the sale being colourable for the purpose of giving effect to a gift which otherwise it might be difficult to make under the Mahomedan law. KUMEROONISSA BEGUM v. SYUFFOOLLAH . . . 16 W. R., P. C., 32

Affirming S. C. KUMEROONISSA BEGUM v. SYUFFOOLLAH KHAN . . . 5 W. R., 198

11. — Gift by Hindu lady to mooktear.—Onus.—Where a mooktear sued his client, a Hindu widow, upon a purwannah bearing the clients' seal and purporting to give away valuable properties without any substantial consideration,—Held that the onus was on the plaintiff to satisfy the Court fully as to the circumstances under which the clients' seal was obtained, and to prove that the gift was made advisedly. RAM PERSHAD MISSEER v. PHOOLPUTTER . . . 7 W. R., 98

12. — Gift by Mahomedan lady to one in a fiduciary position.—Where a Mahomedan lady conveyed to her confidential adviser and two other persons the house in which she dwelt by deed of gift, which (though read over and explained to her by a clerk who acted both for the donees and her) was executed by the lady without independent professional advice, and without the advice of the heads of her caste, it was decreed, at the instance of her heirs after her death, that the deed should be set aside. RUJABAI v. ISMAIL AHMED [7 Bom., O. C., 27

13. — Proof of execution.—Evidence of knowledge of contents and of free agency.—A suit was brought upon a bond purporting to have been executed on behalf of two Mahomedan pardanashin ladies by their husbands, and to charge their immoveable property. The bond was compulsorily registrable, and it was presented for registration by a person who professed to be authorised by a power-of-attorney in that behalf. The only proof given by the plaintiff that this power-of-attorney was executed by the ladies, or with their knowledge and consent, was the evidence of a witness who deposed that he was not personally acquainted with them nor did he know their voices; that he went to their residence; that there were two women behind a parda whom the executants of the bond said were their respective wives, and that these women acknowledged they had made the power-of-attorney. There was nothing to show that the ladies had ever benefited in any way from the money advanced under the bond. Held that, even if the ladies behind the parda were in fact the two defendants, this evidence would not be enough to bind them, and that it was for the plaintiff, who sought to bring their property to sale on the strength of a transaction with them, to show that they were free agents in the matter, and, having a clear knowledge of what they were doing, accorded their consent to it. Buzloor Raheem v. Shumsoonissa Begum, 11 Moore's I. A., 551; Ashgar Ali v. Debroos Banoo Begum, I. L. R., 3 Cal., 324; and Sudasht Lal v. Sheobarat Koer, I. L. R., 7 Cal., 245, referred to by MAHMOOD, J. BEHARI LAL v. HABIBA BIBI . . . I. L. R., 8 All., 267

14. — Want of legal advice.—Misapprehension.—A deed conveying the interest of a native married woman in land will not be set aside on the ground of want of legal advice or misapprehension, where the husband is aware of the alienation, and it is not shown that there is a gross inadequacy of price. MONOHUR DOSS v. KHOLSTUN BEGUM . . . Cor., 121.

15. — Loan for Mahomedan women on bond executed under mooktear-namah.—Onus on lender.—Necessity.—Where A. wishes to charge Mahomedan ladies under a bond executed in their absence by B under a mooktear-namah, even if there was no collusion between A and B., A. is bound to show that there was no negligence on his part; that the advance was made after satisfying himself that it was taken for their use, and was required by them for the purposes stated in the mooktear-namah (viz., for the payment of their debts); and also that the money was applied to the use of the ladies. GOLAM SOBHAN v. MUDDUN MOHUN PAUL [18 W. R., 257.

16. — Attendance of pardanashin in Court.—Personal attendance of accused person.—Criminal Procedure Code, s. 205.—Held, where a Magistrate had issued a summons to a "pardanashin" woman, alleged to be of good position, who was accused of an offence, that the Magistrate should have dispensed with the personal attendance of the accused and permitted her to appear by pleader, until such time as he had before him clear, direct, and reliable prima facie proof that the accused had a real charge to answer. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF RAHIM BIBI . . . I. L. R., 6 All., 59

17. — Examination of pardanashin.—Witness.—Right to be examined on commission.—A pardanashin woman, summoned as a witness in a criminal case, has a right to be exempted from personal attendance at Court, and to be examined on commission. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF HORRO SOONDERY CHOWDHRAIN [I. 18. — Privileges of, as witnesses.—Attendance in Court.—Privileges of pardanashin ladies when attending Court in palanquins as witnesses considered. The general rule is that the lady should be admitted into Court in her palanquin, and give her evidence in it, after being properly identified. QUEEN ON THE PROSECUTION OF ROOKIA BANU v. ROBERTS . . . 1 B. L. R., S. N., 5

19. — Attendance in Court.—The Court will extend the privileges of parda to women who, though not parda, are not accustomed generally to appear before the public. KISTOMOHUN MOOKERJEE v. ADARMONEY DABEE [2 Hyde, 88

3. ————— Suit for redemption—Parsi defendant.—Bom. Reg. IV of 1827, s. 26—In a suit brought by a Mahomedan to redeem from the defendant, who was a Parsi, certain property that had been conveyed by the ancestor of the latter by a by-al-wafa (deed of conditional sale).—Held that the law to be applied was, under section 26 of Regulation IV of 1827, that of the defendant. That in the absence of any specific law for Parsis in the mofussil, the rule of justice, equity, and good conscience should be observed, and the Court should follow, with certain necessary modifications, the practice of the Courts of Equity in England. MANOHARSHA ASHPANDIARJI v. KAMRUNISA BEGAM
[5 Bom., A. C., 109]

4. ————— Parsis in mofussil of Bombay Presidency.—English law.—Rule in Shelly's case.—Equity and good conscience.—The law applicable to Parsis in the mofussil of the Presidency of Bombay is, in the absence of evidence of any specific law or usage applicable to the particular case, “justice, equity, and good conscience alone.”

In applying “justice, equity, and good conscience” to the facts of any particular case, the Courts will be guided by the general principles of English law applicable to a similar state of circumstances, and so as, if possible, to give effect to the intentions of the parties concerned, where such intentions are clearly expressed, and are not repugnant to any general principle of English law. The Courts will not, in such a case, apply Rules of English law which, though well established and binding on English Courts, are yet so special in their nature and origin as to be inapplicable to the different circumstances of this country. The members of a Parsi family, the heirs of one Framji Cowasji Banaji, deceased, entered into an agreement with one another, bearing date the 24th May 1851, by which they agreed that the remaining income, after paying the deceased's debts, of a certain estate which had belonged to the deceased, called the Poway estate—an estate situated in the Island of Salsette, and, therefore, in the mofussil of the Presidency of Bombay—should be apportioned “to the heirs mentioned in clause 7 (of the agreement)” —i.e., among the various heirs of Framji Cowasji Banaji, deceased, the parties to the agreement—“but, after their death, their shares are to be enjoyed and received by their heirs and children from generation to generation for ever.” It was contended that Parsis being subject to English law, these words conferred an absolute estate in their respective shares upon the various parties to the agreement under the rule in Shelley's case. Held per BAYLEY, J., that the plain intention of the parties to the agreement, appearing on the face of the agreement, was that they themselves should take only a life estate to the extent of their respective shares in the remaining income of the Poway estate; and that the rule in Shelley's case should not be applied so as to defeat that plain intention. Held on appeal (affirming the order of BAYLEY, J.) that, even assuming English law to be applicable, the English law so to be applied could not include the rule in Shelley's case, which is a law of property or tenure based on feudal considerations, and unsuited to the circumstances of India; that the rule of construction to be applied to the agreement must in any case be to give effect to the intention of the parties according to the plain meaning of the language; and that to construe the agreement as giving more than a life interest to the parties thereto, would be to defeat their obvious intention. *MITHIBAI v. 5. ————— Marriage of Parsis.—Act XV of 1865, s. 30.—Bigamy.—Divorce.—A Parsi residing in Bombay after the passing of Act XV of 1865, but before it came into operation, contracted a second marriage during the lifetime of his wife, from whom he had not been divorced, and whom he moreover wilfully deserted for two years. On appeal from an order by the Judge of the Parsi Chief Matrimonial Court rejecting a plaintiff for divorce by the first wife, on the ground that the subject-matter of the plaint did not constitute a cause of action under section 30 of Act XV of 1865, and

Act VIII of 1859, section 32.—Held that the facts alleged in the plaint did not amount to "bigamy coupled with adultery," nor to "adultery coupled with wilful desertion," within the meaning of section 30 of Act XV of 1865, as a second marriage contracted by a Parsi husband during the lifetime of his first wife was not unlawful before the Act came into operation, nor did the provisions of the Act in any way affect the validity or the consequence of such a marriage. *AVABAI v. 6. ————— Act XXI of 1865, s. 8.—Succession Act, s. 42—Advancement.—Statute of Distribution.—In excluding, by section 8 of the Parsi Succession Act, from application to Parsis, section 42 of the Succession Act, which repeals the English rule as to advancement contained in the Statute of Distribution, section 5, it was not the intention of the Legislature to preserve the last-mentioned rule in force for the Parsi community. DHANJBHAI BOMANJI GUGBAT v. NAVAZBAI

7. ————— Parsi succession.—Act XXI of 1865.—Effect of words excluding from inheritance.—Heir-at-law—A., a Parsi inhabitant of Surat, died there on the 13th February 1879, leaving him surviving the following relations, viz.: A daughter J. (the respondent) by his first wife, who had predeceased him; his second wife, Dhanbai, who lived apart from him; his third wife, who had been divorced by him, and whose son A. did not recognise as his own; and his three sisters, D., S., and G., the first-named of whom had been married to K., and whose son, E., was the appellant. By his will A. expressly directed that neither his daughter J. nor his widow Dhanbai should take any share of his property, the whole of which he bequeathed to his brother R., who, however, predeceased him. On the 6th September 1879 J. applied to the District Court of Surat, that letters of administration to A.'s estate might be granted to her husband as her attorney, alleging that A. died intestate. Her application was opposed by E., D., and S. (the nephew and two sisters of A.), on the ground that J. was expressly excluded by A. from inheriting his property, and that neither she nor her husband resided permanently within the Presidency of Bombay. The District Judge granted limited letters of administration to J.'s husband as her attorney, under section 214 of Act X of 1865. On an appeal to the High Court by E. alone,—Held that A. had died intestate, not having made any bequest or devise of his property which could take effect, inasmuch as his sole devisee (R.) had predeceased him, and that the estate must, therefore, go in accordance with the law of succession. The use of mere negative words, unaccompanied by any effective disposition of his property, could not exclude his daughter J. or his widow Dhanbai from succeeding to their shares of the estate. Under the Parsi Succession Act (XXI of 1865), widows and children rank before brothers and sisters. Section 7, schedule II, article 2, of the Parsi Succession Act is applicable only where the deceased leaves neither lineal descendants, nor a widow or widower. ERASHA KAIKHUSRU v. JEEBAI

8. ————— Act XXI of 1865.—Childless widow of intestate son of Parsi.—It is not a condition precedent to the application of section 5 of Act XXI of 1865 that the predeceased son of an intestate Parsi shall have left a widow and issue. Where an intestate Parsi left him surviving a widow, sons, daughters, children of a predeceased son, and the widow of another predeceased son, who had died without issue, and a posthumous daughter was afterwards born to the intestate,—Held that such last-mentioned widow was entitled to one moiety of the share in the intestate's estate which her husband would have taken had he survived the intestate, and that the other moiety of such share devolved on the surviving issue of the intestate, including the posthumous daughter, and the children of his other predeceased son. MANCHERJI KAWASJI DAVUR v. MITHIBAI

[I. L. R., 1 Bom., 508]

9. ————— Parsi will.—Evidence of genuineness of—Adoption.—An adoption made by a Parsi immediately before his death would render extremely improbable the execution of a will by him a very short time previous thereto, and therefore calls for very clear proof to establish its existence. HOMADHAR v. PUNJEADHAR DOSADHAR

[5 W. R., P. C., 102]

10. ————— Usage among Parsis.—The will of a Parsi in favour of his wife and daughter upheld, notwithstanding a rule or usage, set up by a brother of the testator to the effect that among Parsis no disposition could be made by will to the total disinheritance of the heir, such rule or usage not being proved. *MODER KAIKHOOSROW HORMUSJEE v. 18. ———— Bonds, Suits on.—Suit by assignee of bond, after death of obligee.—Representation of obligee.—In a suit by A. on a bond in favour of B., the plaintiff may show by oral evidence that the money secured by the bond was his own, but where B. has died, A. must either entitle himself as B.'s personal representative, or make B.'s personal representative a party to the suit. DEVA RAU v. VENTESA ACHARIYAR . . . 1 Mad., 452

19. ———— Indemnity bond.—A bond of indemnity was given to five persons to secure the fidelity of a naib. The naib was afterwards employed by three only out of the five obligees in the bond.—Held that, on the naib misconducting himself, the three obligees could not sue alone on the bond. Semble.—Neither in such case could the five obligees have sued, as the faithful service intended to be secured by the bond was service to five persons and not to three only. PARBUTTINATH ROY v. TEJOMOY BANERJI . . . I. L. R., 5 Calc., 303

20. ———— Suit by assignee on bond.—Liability of obligee.—The obligee of a common money-bond, of which a bond fide valid assignment has been made, is not liable to be made a defendant in a suit by his assignee to enforce payment of the bond, and to a decree against himself jointly with the obligor. ANONYMOUS v. MUTTUSAMIYA PILLAI . . . 1 Mad., 140

21. ———— Contracts, Suits on.—Suit for specific performance.—Stranger to contract.—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), ss. 28 and 45.—A stranger to a contract of which specific performance is sought, cannot be a party to the suit. Where, therefore, the plaintiff sued as against one defendant for specific performance of a contract to sell land, and as against another for a declaration that he was not entitled to any charge upon the said lands.—Held that the latter defendant was improperly made a party to the suit. LUCKUMSEY OOKERDA v. FAZULLA CASUMBHOY . . . I. L. R., 5 Bom., 177

22. ———— Suit for specific performance.—Receiver.—Where the receiver in a suit had, by order of Court, sold certain property in the suit, and had executed the contract of sale in his own name, a plaintiff paying for specific performance against the purchaser for refusing to complete the contract was admitted with the receiver as co-plaintiff, he having obtained leave to sue. WILKINSON v. GANGADHAR SIKKAR . . . 6 B. L. R., 486

23. ———— Suit for specific performance.—In a suit for specific performance of a contract,—Held that the principle laid down in the cases of DeHoughton v. Money, L. R., 2 Ch., App., 166, and Luckumsey Ookerda v. Fazullah Cassumbhoy, I. L. R., 5 Bom., 177,—viz., that a stranger to the contract cannot be a party to the suit,—is only applicable where from the plaintiff's case it appears that a third party, not a party to the contract, has a distinct interest from that of the other parties to the contract, which interest is sought to be declared null and void. MOKUND LALL v. CHOTAY LALL
[I. L. R., 10 Calc., 1061]

24. ———— Suit by mortgagee without co-sharers.—Where a mortgage-bond was executed in favour of the plaintiff alone, the fact that there were other persons members of the joint family co-sharers with the plaintiff did not render it necessary to make them parties to a suit on the mortgage, as the plaintiff might be regarded as contracting on behalf of himself and the other members of the family as undisclosed principals. BUNGSEE SINGH v. SOODIST LALL . . . I. L. R., 7 Calc., 739

25. ———— Co-sharers.—Joinder of parties.—Right of co-sharer to sue alone.—Unless there is a special provision of the law, co-owners are not permitted to sue through some or one of their members, but all co-owners must join in a suit to recover their property. The defendant cannot be deprived of his right to insist on the other co-owners being joined on the record by the fact that they approve of the suit being brought by the plaintiff alone. BALKRISHNA MORRISHVAR KUNTE v. MUNICIPALITY OF MAHAD . . . I. L. R., 10 Bom., 32

26. ———— Suit for arrears of rent.—Appeal, Amendment on.—In a suit for arrears of rent of the plaintiff's share of a talook, it appeared that, in the year 1279, a butwarra was effected of the zemindar in which the talook was situated, and that the talook ceased to be held exclusively by the plaintiff, but was divided between him and certain other persons, who were not made parties to the suit. Held that all the co-sharers should

27. — Lease.—Suit by one of several joint lessors for his share of rent.—One of several joint lessors of certain land sued the lessee for his share of the rent payable under the lease to all the lessors, making the other lessors defendants. Held that the suit was not maintainable, and the making of the other lessors defendants did not cure the defect in the suit. MANOHAR DAS v. MANZUB ALI . . . I. L. R., 5 All., 40

28. — Suit for ejectment.—Landlord and tenant.—Possession, Suit for, by one of several proprietors.—The owners of a 13-anna share of a julkur sued to eject a lessee on his refusal to pay an enhanced rent. Held that he could not be ejected by a suit brought by one only of several proprietors. A lease granted by all the proprietors cannot be varied or terminated at the suit of one. BOLLYE SATEE v. AKBAM ALLY

29. — Suit for possession.—Lessors.—Plaintiff sued to recover possession of certain land said to have been included in a talooka pottah given him by the zemindars, alleging that defendants were obstructing his possession. For the defence it was averred that these lands fell within a 9-anna share which belonged to one D., and that by process of sale they became the right of other parties under whom defendants held as lessees. Held that it was unnecessary to make the lessors on either side parties in the case. NAGUR CHAND v. 31. — Debtor and creditor, Suits between.—Bond.—Suit for a share of a debt.—A., B., and C. were uterine brothers, Mahomedans, to whom jointly a sum of money was due on a bond. A., the elder brother, sued the debtor for recovery of the debt, and, after successfully resisting the claim of B.'s widow to be made a party to the suit, obtained a decree for the principal and interest to the date of decree, together with subsequent interest and costs. A. realised the decree for the principal and interest to the date of decree only. B.'s widow, on behalf of herself and two minor sons, sued A. for the share of the decretal moneys which belonged to her husband's estate. She refused to join her daughters as parties. Held that she was entitled to recover a third share of the amount realised under A.'s decree, minus the share of her two daughters. NURUNNISSA v. ROUSHAN JAN . . . 2 B. L. R., Ap., 1

32. — Trustees for benefit of creditors.—The creditor of an insolvent who has assigned all his property to trustees for the benefit of all his creditors generally, sued him for his debt, joining the trustees as defendants, on the ground that they had refused to register his claim. Held that they were rightly joined as defendants in the suit. ACUDHIA NATH v. ANANT DAS

33. — Suit by trustees of deed for benefit of creditors to set aside attachment.—To a suit by the trustees of an assignment for the benefit of his creditors by an insolvent trader to set aside an attachment by an execution creditor who did not assent to the assignment, it is not necessary to make all the creditors parties. STEPHENSON v. BAUMGARTNER . . . 3 Agra, 104

34. — Declaratory decrees.—Suit to declare pottahs forgeries.—Interested parties.—In a suit by a superior holder (representing the zemindar by whom certain pottahs were alleged to have been granted) for a declaration that the pottahs were forgeries, against a party holding a portion of land by a title derived from lessees under those pottahs, it was held that all the parties interested in, and holding under, the pottahs should be made parties to the suit, on the principle that all persons who are interested in the question must be made parties to a suit in a Court of Equity. DUKIBENA MOHUN ROY v. AMBEROODERN MAHOMED . . . 12 W. R., 247

35. — Suit for declaration of right against proprietor.—Agent.—In a suit for declaration of right against a proprietor of an estate, it is necessary that the proprietor himself, and not his karindah only, be made a party to the suit. A decree against the karindah cannot bind the proprietor. MADHO RAO APA v. THAKOOR PARSAD . . . 3 Agra, 127

36. — Endowments.—Parties to suit on behalf of temple.—The samudayi of a temple is not competent to bring a suit on its behalf. The proper parties to sue are the uralers (trustees). KAMA VARAE v. KRISHNEN NAMBUDEI

37. — Suit to redeem lands belonging to temple.—Agent.—Persons in whom temple is vested.—Plaintiff, alleging himself to be "karanna samudhiyan" of the Mulamal Ayyappan devaswam, sued to redeem lands which had been mortgaged by the devaswam. Held that he was not entitled to maintain the suit; that the uralers are the persons in whom the estate and pro-

39. ————— Suit for property belonging to.—Joint mutwallis.—Joint trustees—Where property belonging to an endowment is sought to be recovered from a third party, who asserts that he is the owner thereof, all the mutwallis of the endowment should be made parties to a suit instituted for the recovery of such property. Such of the mutwallis as refuse to join as plaintiffs should be made defendants. BECHU LAL v. OLIULLAH

40. ————— Non-joinder of a necessary party.—Suit to set aside alienation of debuttur lands.—Trust for religious purposes.—The representatives of three out of four Hindus, who were joint sebaits, managing debuttur property, sued to have an alienation, made by the fourth sebaith alone, set aside. They did not make the latter a party to the suit; nor did the plaintiffs ask the assistance of the Court to make him one, under section 73 of Act VIII of 1859. Held that he was a necessary party. It was not enough that he was a member of the body of sebaits; and although indirectly he might have gained advantage from the suit brought by the other sebaits, this did not suffice to connect him with the suit as a party to it. No ground for making an exception to the general rule was presented. RAJENDRONATH DUTT v. MAHOMED LAL

49. ———— Suit for possession and declaration of right to participate in a permanent settlement of a mehal resumed under Reg. II of 1819.—Chur land was held by the proprietors of the adjoining estate. The chur was resumed by Government in 1835, and declared to be liable to assessment under Regulation II of 1819. The recorded proprietors of the adjoining permanently-settled estate, to which the chur was a contiguous accretion, refused to make a permanent settlement with Government at the rent demanded. The chur was then held khas by Government for some time, and subsequently leased out for temporary periods to strangers. In these temporary leases Government reserved the proprietor's rights to come in and take a permanent settlement on the expiry of the temporary settlements, and also reserved an allowance of 10 per cent. on the rent as malikanah on their account, which sum had been kept in deposit in the Collectorate treasury. In 1867 the Government made a permanent settlement with the defendant, one of the recorded proprietors of the contiguous estate, of the entire chur, and refused the application of other shareholders in the estate to be joined in the settlement. The Collector, at the request of the defendant, applied the deposit in his treasury in satisfaction of the Government revenue. An unsuccessful shareholder brought a civil suit against the defendant for possession, and a declaration of his right to participate in the settlement. Held that it was not necessary to make the Government a party. *KRISHNA CHANDRA SANDYAL CHOWDREY v. 58. ————— Contract made by member of joint family in individual capacity—Right to sue alone.—The firm of S. & Co., the partners of which were W. S. and F. E., took a contract from Government on 12th November 1877 to construct a barrel-house at the Gunpowder Manufactory at Kirkee, and on the 28th November 1877 the plaintiff agreed to advance money "up to Rs15,000" for the purpose of enabling the firm to carry out the contract. Under the agreement the plaintiff was to receive all sums to become due from the Government on the contractors' bills, and to pay the balance to the firm after repaying himself all advances with interest. On the same day the firm executed a power-of-attorney to the plaintiff, authorizing him to receive from the Government Engineer all such sums to become due to the firm under the contract, which power-of-attorney was deposited by plaintiff in the office of the Executive Engineer at Poona. In March or April 1878 W. S. left for England, up to which time Rs4,900 had been advanced by the plaintiff, and a balance of Rs14,942-5-10 still remained due to him after giving credit for the sums received on the bills passed by the Executive Engineer. On 24th July 1878 the plaintiff entered into a fresh agreement with F. E. similar to the former one, to make further advances to the firm up to Rs16,000 in addition to Rs15,000 on the same terms as those mentioned in the previous agreement; and by means of these advances the contract was completed at the end of 1879. In 1878 the defendant obtained a decree against W. S., and attached the right, title, and interest of W. S. in a sum of Rs5,034-11-9 in the hands of the Executive Engineer, which was then due to the firm on the contract. The plaintiff, who alleged that Rs13,700-1-11 were due to him from the firm, applied to have the attachment removed, which application was refused on 30th September 1879, and the sum attached was paid to the defendant. The plaintiff sued the defendant to recover from him Rs5,034-11-9. Held that, although the plaintiff might be a member of an undivided Hindu family, still, as the contract was entered into with the plaintiff in his individual capacity, and as there was nothing on the face of the contract to show that the plaintiff was acting on behalf of the family, the plaintiff was entitled to sue alone. JAGABHAI LALLUBHAI v. M. brought a suit against the executors of K.'s will, which was compromised on the payment by them to her of a certain sum. This sum she deposited with N., one of the members of a firm, to be invested in N.'s own name, he paying her such interest as it yielded him. On the dissolution of the firm the sum deposited by M. was made over to N. alone, and on the death of N., his estate, and with it the sum deposited by M., came into the hands of the sons of N. On the death of M., the plaintiff and two others were the heirs of K. In a suit brought by the plaintiff against the sons of N. for a third share of the sum deposited by M.,—Held that such a suit was not a "suit for a distributive share under an intestacy, or of a legacy under a will," within section 32, Act IX of 1850. 102. ———— Suit to recover possession under Specific Relief Act, s. 9.—Necessary parties.—Principal and agent.—Suit for ejectment by partly dispossessed—The plaintiffs sued, under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877) to recover possession of certain land which they alleged had been in their possession since 1856. They alleged that while retaining possession of the said land through care-takers appointed by them, they had been in the habit of yearly selling the grass of the land to purchasers who themselves cut the grass so purchased; that in 1878 the grass of the land for the ensuing year was sold to T, that in the month of August 1879 the defendants forcibly dispossessed the plaintiffs of the said land, and prevented them and their servants and T from entering the same. Defendant No 2 denied the dispossession, and disclaimed any interest in the land. Defendants Nos 1 and 3 denied that the land in question belonged to the plaintiffs, and alleged that it was the property of A., of whom defendant No. 1 was manager, and No. 3 the lessee of the said land. They also alleged that the plaintiffs had tried to take forcible possession of the said land, and that defendant No 1, acting on A's behalf, prevented them. They submitted that A was a necessary party to the suit. Held that the three defendants were properly made parties to the suit, and that A was not a necessary party. Defendant No 1 (the lessee) had the physical occupation of the land sued for; but all three defendants not having made any declaration, in taking possession, that it was taken for one or two of their number, acquired it jointly, and handed on a derivative possession to the actual occupant, which as against third parties ranked as their own. If it was properly assumed, they all had a right to defend it, if not, they might all be called on for restitution. As to A, he was not actually in possession, and had taken no personal part in the dispossession. He was said to be owner, but that did not imply that he committed the alleged acts of defendants, or insisted on his ownership. As he had not the physical possession of the land, it could not be assumed that he had the jural possession merely on the assertion of the defendants. He, therefore, having done no palpable wrong, was not a necessary party. Held, also, that defendant No. 2 was properly made a defendant, and that, in case the dispossession should be established, he should be retained as a defendant notwithstanding his disclaimer. It was possible that No. 3 held the land on terms beneficial to No. 2, and the disclaimer in the present suit would not estop No. 2 from enforcing these terms in a subsequent suit against No. 3. Where under a contract between A. and B. an exclusive occupation of immoveable property is given to A., he is the proper plaintiff in a suit for possession brought under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877). If B. desires to sue immediately on the possessory right, he should sue in A.'s name, though for an injury to the reversion he (B.) may properly sue in his own name. The intention of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), section 9, is not to be frustrated by any private arrangement under which the ejector has acted, or by which he may consent to hold on behalf of some other person. As between him and that person, his possession may be that of an agent, but to the former holder he is the dispossessioner: possession derived from him cannot be superior to his, and (the right of suit being given in general terms) is equally subject as his to the result of proceedings taken within the prescribed six months. A person who has been ejected from his property, in suing to recover it under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), may sue the actual ejector, or the person under whose orders or by whose authority the actual ejector has acted, or he may sue both; but the wrong-doer who has taken possession is the one from whom primarily it is to be reclaimed. If a third party desire to maintain the expulsion as an act done on his behalf, it is for him to come forward and avow it. He may claim to be admitted as a defendant; but if he had himself a right to do what his agent has done, his right and his authority may be pleaded by the agent, and will be an effectual answer. The alleged owner or principal, therefore, is not a necessary party for the protection of the agent. The suit against the latter will fail if he acted on due authority where that authority is shown. VIRIVANDAS MADHAVDAS v. MAHOMED ALI KHAN . . . I. L. R., 5 Bom., 208

If a question of title legitimately arises between the parties to a rent suit, the Court is not compelled to dismiss the suit, but is bound to determine the question for the purposes of the suit. CHOWRASEE KOORE v. BOKHOORE SINGH [24 W. R., 350

116. ————— Title of third party alleged by defendant.—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s. 25.—Per FIELD, J.—Where a person sued for rent sets up the title of a third party, and alleges that he holds under and pays rent to him, such third party ought not to be made a party to the suit, so as to convert a simple suit for arrears of rent into one for the determination of the title to the property in respect of which the rent is claimed. Such a suit raises only two issues, viz.: (1) Does the relation of landlord and tenant exist between the plaintiff and defendant? (2) Are the alleged arrears of rent due and unpaid? And these are questions in which the plaintiff and defendant are alone concerned, and no third party claiming a title adverse to the plaintiff can properly be made a party to the trial of these issues. Section 28 of the Civil Procedure Code is not imperative, but allows a discretion to be exercised, and in such a suit it is better, both in the interests of Government and for the proper adjudication of the question of title, that it should be tried by a competent Court in a suit directly framed and brought for that purpose. LODAI MOLLAH v. KALLY DASS ROY [I. L. R., 8 Cal., 238; 10 C. L. R., 581

—An intervenor in a suit for rent has no right to be made a defendant, or to introduce into the suit an entirely new issue,—e.g., one concerning title between himself and the plaintiff; still less is he entitled singly to appeal against the judgment in the case. BIRESSUR PANREY v. JOGENDRO CHUNDER DEB . . . 24 W. R., 261

118. ————— Adding parties in rent suits.—Where Act X of 1859, section 77, was no longer in force, the effect of adding a party, under Act VIII of 1859, section 73, in a rent suit, was the same as in any other kind of suit. Whatever be the class of suit, the party added cannot raise an issue which would entirely change the nature and scope of the suit; the Court being bound to limit its inquiry to the issues necessary in order to try the plaintiff's right to the special relief sought;—e.g., where the relief sought is the recovery of arrears of rent, the intervenor is competent to raise all questions, whether of title or otherwise, which bear upon the issue, is the plaintiff entitled to recover the rent claimed? TILLESUREE KOORE v. On appeal the Judge tried the question of title. Held that the Judge was wrong in raising the question of title at all, and thus proceeding on a basis other than that on which, whether right or wrong, the parties had chosen to litigate the matter, and which the original Court had accepted. Quere,—Is the Munsif's procedure in this case the right one, now that Act X of 1859, section 77, has been repealed, and not re-enacted in the new law? AULUCK MONEE DEBER v. Whilst this suit was pending, certain parties intervened and asked to be made parties under section 73, Code of Civil Procedure, on the ground that plaintiffs' vendors were not entitled to the full share claimed, as they themselves had purchased a portion thereof. Held that the Court exercised a wise and proper discretion in allowing the intervenors to be made parties, for a decree in plaintiffs' favour, though not legally binding on them, would nevertheless have caused them great difficulty in all matters of rent. SALIGRAM SINGH v. They prayed for a declaration of their right and an injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with it. Held that the plaintiffs could maintain the suit for the personal injury alleged to have been suffered by themselves by the pollution of their sanctuary, whether under the Civil Procedure Code of 1859 or that of 1877, section 30 of the latter being merely regulative, not constitutive. Whether or not it could be contended that they and the defendants so represented their respective castes that the decree in this suit should bind all members of the two castes, would be open to argument in any future case; but it might well be consistent with general principles to hold that certain judicial proceedings taken by or against a select number as representing a large class, might, if fairly and honestly conducted, bind or benefit the whole class. *ANANDRAV BHIKAJI v. The three brothers at the hearing expressed their willingness that A. should sue alone. Held that such assent did not obviate the necessity of joining all the proper parties as co-plaintiffs, and that the suit therefore, as framed, would not lie. Held, further, that A. would have been in no better position had he joined his three brothers as co-plaintiffs after the suit was, as regards them, time-barred; since such a suit would have been virtually a suit by himself alone, and therefore bad. *Boydonth Bag v. tiffs were made parties, the suit was, as regards them, barred by limitation. Held that the additional plaintiffs were rightly made parties to the suit, notwithstanding that the suit was, as far as they were concerned, barred. In actions of contract it is the right of the defendant, if he takes the objection in proper time, to insist upon all the persons with whom he contracted being joined as plaintiffs, and if, after the objection has been raised, the plaintiff proceeds with the suit without taking steps to add the person or persons whose non-joinder has been objected to, and the Court finds that the objection is well founded, the suit must be dismissed. Held that, inasmuch as the original plaintiffs could only enforce their claim in conjunction with the added plaintiffs, and the added plaintiffs were barred by section 22 of Act XV of 1877, the claim of the original plaintiffs was also barred. Boydonth Bag v. Grish Chunder Roy, I. L. R., 3 Calc., 26, dissented from. There is no equity, but often much injustice, in allowing one joint contractor out of many to sue a defendant, notwithstanding an objection duly made by the latter; and the Court has no right to allow one contractor to recover under such circumstances, though he may, no doubt, afterwards adjust the sum which he recovers with his co-contractors. *RAMSEBUE v. Notwithstanding that objection to the non-joinder of the other partners was duly taken, the plaintiff contented himself with putting in a petition on behalf of the other partners intimating their willingness that the suit should proceed in the sole name of the plaintiff, instead of applying to the Court to add the other partners as plaintiffs. On appeal the High Court admitted the objection, and refused, under the circumstances, to add the other partners as plaintiffs. DULAR CHAND v. BALRAM DAS I. L. R., 1 All., 453

C., the widow of B., having, with the concurrence of A., taken out letters of administration to B.'s estate, was, on the application of A. at a hearing of the suit, made a co plaintiff under section 32 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that C. ought not to have been joined as a plaintiff in the suit, inasmuch as A. had no right at all to sue. Section 32, as far as the addition of plaintiffs is concerned, only applies to those cases in which the original party who brought the suit had some title to sue. *CHUNDER COOMAR ROY v. The Court, regarding the suit as defective for want of parties, made plaintiff's sister a co-plaintiff under section 73, Act VIII of 1859. Held that the defect was one not to be remedied under that section, and that as there was no right of suit in the plaintiff, the suit should have been dismissed. *SUBBAYAR v. 162. ————— Suit to cancel under-tenures.—Act XI of 1859, s. 37.—On the 13th January 1871 A and B purchased an estate sold for arrears of Government revenue. The original proprietors asserted their right to collect the rents of a portion of the property by virtue of holding two shikam talooks and a howla tenure. This right was affirmed by the High Court in April 1875. B had previously sold his interest to C. On the 29th May 1876 A created a putni of his eight annas in favour of D and E, and on the 4th July 1876 C purchased all the rights of the original proprietors. On the 18th January 1877 A sued under Act XI of 1859, section 37, to cancel or vary the tenures, making the original proprietors, C and various tenants, defendants. C objected that A had no right of suit or cause of action, as he had parted with all his rights to D and E; and that as his entire interest in the estate was only 8 annas, he could not sue to cancel a part only of the sub-tenures. D and E then applied to be added as parties, and were made plaintiffs. Held that A had no cause of action, as he had previously parted with all his rights as zemindar, to cancel these tenures in favour of D and E, nor could D and E sue, as they were not "purchasers of an entire estate." That A having no cause of action, it was not competent to the lower Court to add D and E as plaintiffs, and so introduce a right of action which did not previously exist. *DWARKANATH PAL v. 172. ———— Likelihood of being affected by result of suit.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 73.—Raising unnecessary issues.—Section 73 of the Civil Procedure Code enables the Court to bring in as parties to the suit any person whose rights appear to be involved, and who may be affected by the result of the suit. It does not enable parties who are not liable to be affected by the result, to come in and raise altogether new issues which do not properly arise. Where the parties, however, all acquiesced in the irregularity, and the suit went to trial on the issues raised by the added defendant, the High Court did not think it necessary to quash the proceedings. PADMALOHAN SEN v. Code, 1859, s. 73.—Discretion of Court.—Suit for possession.—Form of decree.—In a suit to recover possession of a certain mouzah claimed by the plaintiff as a portion of his dur-putni talook, which was brought against several defendants, four other persons applied to be made defendants, on the ground that they were co-shares with the defendants on the record in the property in dispute. The application was granted; the added defendants were found to be possessed of the share which they claimed, and on the proofs which they adduced the plaintiff's claim was dismissed. The plaintiff's claim as against the original defendants, who made no opposition, was decreed. In special appeal, on the ground that they should not have been made defendants, and that the plaintiff was not bound to prove his case against anybody else but the person against whom he had brought the suit,—Held that section 73, Act VIII of 1859, leaves to the Courts of original jurisdiction a discretion in such cases, that the section is not limited entirely to cases where the suit as framed cannot proceed; that the words "persons who may be likely to be affected by the result" do not mean persons on whom the result would be legally binding. KALUPRASHAD SING v. They were accordingly added as defendants under section 73, Civil Procedure Code. It then appeared that the possession sought by plaintiff was khas possession. Held that, although it was prima facie necessary for these intervenors to be made defendants, yet, after the intention of the plaintiff became apparent, nothing would be gained by removing them from the record, even if the Court had power to do so in special appeal. *KEWUL SARKOO v. This decree was confirmed on appeal, and K made liable for the costs of those defendants in respect of whom his claim had been dismissed. Meantime B, an old judgment-creditor of K's father, took out execution against R, and applied for sale of K's rights in the estate, which were accordingly sold, the purchaser being K himself. Subsequently one of M's daughters, a successful defendant in the suit brought by K, took out execution of her decree for costs, and put up K's rights for sale. The sale was opposed, under section 246, Civil Procedure Code, 1859, by R, a son of B, whose claim was summarily rejected, and K's rights were bought by one A. R then brought a suit within one year to set aside the sale, and to have his own title declared. The suit was against the purchaser and against the representatives of the zur-i-peshgi dars, but on the petition of L, one of M's heirs, her name was added to the list of defendants. The first Court gave R a decree, but the lower Appellate Court found that his claim was barred by limitation against L, on the ground of non-possession within twelve years, and in respect of the zur-i-peshgi dars because K's decree had lapsed by delay in execution. Held that L was interested in the result of the suit, and the lower Courts committed no error in law in admitting her to be a defendant under section 73, Civil Procedure Code, 1859. RAM SURUN SINGH v. H. The Appellate Court made A a respondent to the appeal, under section 559 of the Civil Procedure Code, and, exempting B, gave the plaintiff a decree against A. Held that, inasmuch as section 559 does not empower an Appellate Court virtually to make an appeal for an appellant, who has refrained from availing himself of his privileges under the law, by introducing for him other respondents than those he has included in his petition of appeal, and it could not be said that A was "interested in the result of the appeal," as, having the unappealed decree of the Court of first instance behind him, his position was secure, the Appellate Court had improperly made A a respondent to the appeal and given a decree against him. *ATMA RAM v. On the termination of the above suit, which had been brought by K. A. in forma pauperis, he was required to pay the Court fees. For that purpose he procured an advance of Rs290 from the applicant on the security of the moiety of the property which was awarded to him by the decree. He passed a deed of sale to the applicant, on the understanding that the property should be reconveyed to him by the applicant on the repayment of the advance with interest. In the meantime cross appeals were filed against the above-mentioned decree passed in favour of K. A., and at the hearing of the appeal the lower Appellate Court varied the decree of the Subordinate Judge, holding that K. A., was entitled to the possession of the property as sought for. From this decree the opponent preferred a second appeal to the High Court, which, at the time of this application, was still pending. Before the hearing of the appeal, K. A., died, and the applicant thereupon applied to have his name placed on the record as respondent. Held that the applicant was entitled to be made a party. The analogy of section 368 is to be extended generally to appeals, and the party appealing may choose his own respondent as representative of deceased. The more specific rule prescribed in that section must prevail, in the cases to which it is exactly applicable, over the more general rule in section 372. But the rule in section 368 may well be intended for the case in which the death, and death only, of the defendant constitutes the change of circumstances for which it was thought necessary to provide, but where there has been, not only the death of the respondent, but an alleged prior conveyance to him of the property awarded by the decree appealed against, there is a fact in addition to the fact contemplated by section 368, and the rule in section 372, being alone sufficiently inclusive, must apply. An appellant may determine who shall be respondent, but not that any particular person shall not be a respondent. The choice of respondents made by the appellant may be defective through ignorance or fraud, and the real representative of the decree-holder cannot justly be refused an opportunity of maintaining the decision which it is sought to upset. *RAJARAM BHAGVAT v. 217. ——— Making a defendant plaintiff and making the plaintiff a defendant.—Partnership suit—Civil Procedure Code (X of 1877), s. 32—The plaintiff in a partnership suit to which there were twenty-one defendants, applied to the Court for leave to withdraw the suit, or that the suit might be dismissed. Ten of the defendants supported the plaintiff's application. Two of the defendants objected, and applied, under section 32 of the Civil Procedure Code (X of 1877), that they might be made plaintiffs and that the plaintiff might be made a defendant. The Court granted their application. EDULJI MANCHERJI WACHA v. VULLEBHOY KHANBHOY I. L. R., 7 Bom., 167

218. ——— Making parties defendants into plaintiffs against their consent—In a suit for arrears of rent certain parties intervened alleging that they were co-sharers with the plaintiff. They were placed by the first Court on the record as defendants and the suit was dismissed. The lower Appellate Court transferred the intervenors against their will to the side of the plaintiffs and remanded the case for re-trial. Held that this proceeding was without authority or jurisdiction, as a person cannot be made a plaintiff against his will, unless there is such an equity on the part of another as to compel him to be such. *BEHARIE LALL DOSS v. 224. ——— Objection by defendant to want of parties.—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 34.—Section 34 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) limits the time within which a defendant may object for want of parties, but it does not so limit the right of the plaintiff to add parties. In some cases section 34 would not prevent even a defendant from objecting to the want of a proper party after the first hearing,—e.g., where, after the first hearing and before decree a coparcener or remainderman or reversioner is born, or where a woman (who is a party) is married to a man who is not a party to the suit. The objection did not exist at or before the first hearing, and therefore could not have been made or waived by the defendant; and if he made it at the earliest opportunity after it came into existence, he would have satisfied the spirit of section 34. MODHE v DONGRE

The Deputy Collector, without examining the general agent, dismissed the suit, on the ground that the suit ought to have been instituted by the general agent, and that the Rajah himself was bound to obey his citation. Held that the Deputy Collector was bound to receive the evidence of the general agent and to decide the case upon the evidence which was tendered; and that the refusal of the Rajah, who had the privilege which he claimed, and his appointment of a special agent or mooktear for the purposes of the suit, instead of his general agent, were no grounds for dismissing the suit JUGGUD INDRU BUNWAREE v. 1. FORM OF PARTITION.

1. ——— Imperfect partition.—Sanction to partition.—Act XLIX of 1863.—Partition depending on consent of parties.—Courts in their judgments should bear in mind the very distinct character of the several kinds of partition, and until it has been ascertained with what description of partition they have to deal, the question of the sufficiency of the sanction or confirmation given to it cannot be determined. In certain cases the Commissioner's sanction is required, in others that of the Collector. There are partitions known as imperfect partitions depending upon the conduct of the parties, and effected from first to last only with their consent. MUMUMBER BEG v. HOSSEIN ALI . . . 2 N. W., 26

2. ——— Informal partition.—Partition by finding of Court in suit.—Where plaintiff sued for certain land in dispute as his own, and the lower Court found that it was his share, and that defendant held his separately, no further formal partition was held to be necessary. *MODHOOSOODUN CHATTERJEE v. 8 ——— Beng. Reg. XIX of 1814, s. 30.—Power of Collector.—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—It is not correct to say that, under section 30 of Regulation XIX of 1814, the Collector is not at liberty to make any partition where the owners have already partitioned the lands amongst themselves. The true meaning of the section is that the Collector must be guided by the nature of the estate in applying the rules contained in the preceding sections of the Regulation; and that where estates are not held in common tenancy, only a portion of those rules will apply. If the parties have divided the lands without agreeing as to the shares of the Government revenue to be paid by them, respectively, all the Collector has to do, when a partition has been applied for, is to make an assignment of the revenue in proportion to the interest of each shareholder. If they have divided the lands and arranged amongst themselves as to the portion of the Government revenue which each is to pay, it is open to the Collector to accept or reject that arrangement. The Civil Court has nothing to do with the matter. AJOO-DHIA LALL v GUMANI LALL. 2 C. L. R., 134

26. ——— Partition between owners of separate shares in permanently-settled estate.—Effect of, as against Government.—In the year 1226 F. (1819) a four-teen-anna eight-gunda share of a certain mouzah was permanently settled. The remaining one-anna twelve-gunda share was permanently settled in 1861. This share was sold for arrears of Government revenue in 1873, and purchased by the plaintiff, who subsequently applied to the Collector for partition under the Butwarra Act. The Collector refused to partition, upon the ground that the Act was not applicable to the partition of a mouzah held jointly by the proprietors of two separate estates. The plaintiff then brought the present suit, to which he made the Collector a party, to obtain a declaration that he was entitled to have his share separated from the fourteen-anna eight-gunda share by metes and bounds, and also for a decree directing a partition of the whole mouzah into two parts. Held that so far as the plaintiff on the one hand, and the owners of the fourteen-anna eight-gunda share on the other were concerned, the mouzah could be partitioned, but that such partition would not be binding upon the Government unless by consent. AROODHYA PERSAD v. 28. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 265.—Revenue-paying estate.—Beng. Act VIII of 1876, Part II, and s. 4, cls (8) and (9).—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 265.—In 1851 an estate was brought under butwarra under the provisions of Regulation XIX of 1814. At such butwarra a portion of the estate being covered with water and unfit for cultivation was not divided, but left joint amongst all the co-sharers, the land-revenue payable on account of the whole estate being apportioned amongst the several estates into which the portion divided was split up. Subsequently, on the portion remaining joint becoming dry and fit for cultivation, an application was made by one of the co-sharers to the Collector to partition the same under the provisions of Bengal Act VIII of 1876, but that officer refused to do so, on the ground that the land "did not bear an assessed revenue and was not shown in the towzi." In a suit brought under the above circumstances to compel the Collector to make the partition and in the alternative to have it made by the Civil Court, Held that though the reason given by the Collector for refusing was an erroneous one, he was not bound to make the partition under the provisions of Bengal Act VIII of 1876, as the land in suit was not liable for the payment of one and the same demand of land-revenue, and was therefore not a joint undivided estate within the terms of section 4, clause (9) of that Act. Held also, that the word "estate," as used in section 265 of the Civil Procedure Code, must not be construed in the same limited and defective sense in which it is used in Act VIII of 1876, but must be taken to be there used in its ordinary signification, and that consequently the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for partition under the provisions of that section. Chundernath Nundy v. The plaintiff sued V and the purchasers under R's decree to recover his mortgage debt by a sale of the property mortgaged to him. Held that R's decree not being for partition of the family property, or for the separate possession of a share, was not one contemplated by section 265 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The proceedings of the Collector were without jurisdiction, and the plaintiff was entitled to ignore them, and assert his claim, under the mortgage. NARAYAN NAGARKAR v. VITHU JAKHOJI. I. L. 47. ——— Suit for partition.—Suit by purchaser of share of lakhiraj estate.—The purchaser of a share in an undivided lakhiraj estate can sue his coparceners for a partition of his share, and the Civil Court has jurisdiction to carry out the partition. FATEH BAHADUR v. JANKI BIBI

48. ——— Division to prevent encroachment where enjoyment is distinct.—The Civil Court has jurisdiction in a suit between joint owners of talooks, who have been occupying and using separate and distinct parts of premises within the estate, where the object is to prevent encroachment by defendants upon the part occupied by plaintiffs, without any division of the Government revenue or alteration of joint liability to pay that revenue. KALEB MOHUN SEN v. RAM SOONDER SEN
[24 W. R., 243]

49. ——— Dispute with regard to shares.—Parties.—Where two or more proprietors of a joint estate held in common tenancy, desirous of having separate possession of their respective shares, apply each and all to have that estate divided in exactly the same proportionate shares, and no other sharers oppose the butwarra, the Collector may at once comply with the application, and if no objection is raised when the parties have opportunity of raising objection, the shares cannot again be re-united by a suit in a Civil Court. But if the Collector has judicial notice of a dispute with regard to a share, it is questionable whether he has jurisdiction to make a partition of that share. In any suit, however, to do away with the partition as regards that share, the Collector must be made a party. JOYMONEE DEBIA v. IMAM BUKSH TALOOKDAR . 13 W. R., 471

shareholder, A, claimed from another shareholder, B, 2½ bighas of land as having been allotted to him by B, under a prior agreement, in lieu of certain lands originally held by him which fell into B's putti. The Collector left the parties to settle the matter between themselves, and A brought a suit against B for his claim in the Civil Court. Held that, in a case of this kind, the only principle that can be adopted is that the Court should ascertain the relative value of the lands originally made over by the defendant to the entire lands of the defendant, and that it should assign, out of the present share of the defendant, lands bearing the same relative value to the whole that the former lands bore. This to be done without interference with the proceedings of the Collector under the butwarra law, and the plaintiff (if successful) to be brought in as a co-sharer to a limited extent in the land assigned by the defendant. *OOMA DUTT CHOWDHRY v. To this the third coparcener objected, but her objection was overruled by the lower Courts, and it was directed that the property in question should remain undivided. Held that the Court would be disinclined to order the property to be divided without giving the coparcener or coparceners who might wish to keep it entire an opportunity of doing so. Held per WHITE, J., that having regard to the form of the decree, it was not open to the Court executing it to order that any part of the property should remain joint, except with the consent of all the coparceners who were parties to the suit. Semble, per MITTER, J., that the lower Courts were not precluded by the decree from dealing with the property in the mode in which they had done. *RAMCOOMARSEE DASSEE v. 66. ——— Mortgage by one owner of undivided share of estate.—Rights of mortgagee and other sharers on partition.—Where the owner of an undivided share in a joint and undivided estate mortgages his undivided share, he cannot by so doing affect the interests of the other sharers, and the persons who take the security, i. e., the mortgagees, take it subject to the right of those sharers to enforce a partition and thereby convert what is an undivided share of the whole into a defined portion held in severalty. Where such a partition is effected under the provisions of Regulation XIX of 1814 before the mortgagees have completed their title by foreclosure, and the consequential decree for possession, the mortgagees of the undivided share of one co-sharer who has no priority of contract with the other co-sharers would have no recourse against the lands allotted to such co-sharers, but must pursue their remedy against the lands allotted to the mortgagor, and, as against him, would have a charge on the whole of such lands. *BYJNATH LALL v. 67. ——— Easement.—Partition of houses one of which has continuous easement over the other.—Where two houses are held jointly by several owners deriving their title from a common source, and one of such houses enjoys a continuous as distinguished from an occasional easement over the other, such easement will, upon a partition of the premises, pass to the dominant tenement, both by implication of law, and under the usual general words contained in the deed of partition. *KATANJI HORMASJI v. 68. ——— Mode of division.—Beng. Reg. In a suit in 1873 by the representatives of one of the shareholders to recover portions of the three villages, the only evidence that the partition had been completed was an istahar of the Deputy Collector, dated October 1864, directing the Nazir to require the ryots to pay their rents according to the extent of the shares as set forth in the first-mentioned column of the goshwara, that is, according to the quantity instead of according to the quality and value which were the basis of the partition. Held (affirming the judgment of the High Court) that the plaintiff, having failed to prove any order for partition drawn out under section 13 of the Regulation, by the Collector, was not entitled to recover according to the quantity of the land, but, if at all, according to its value as ascertained in the column of the goshwara in which the assessed jumma was set forth. *HURRO SOONDARI DEBIA v. 8. EFFECT OF PARTITION.

69. ——— Decree for partition.—Nature and effect of decree in partition suit.—A decree for partition is not like a decree for money or the delivery of specific property which is only in favour of the plaintiff in the suit. It is a joint declaration of the rights of persons interested in the property of which partition is sought, and such a decree, when properly drawn up, is in favour of each shareholder or set of shareholders having a distinct share. KHOORSHUD HOSSEIN v. NUBBIA FATIMA [I. L. R., 3 Cal., 551: 2 C. L. R., 187]

74. ——— Extinguishment of title.—Effect of partition on others than allottees.—The allotment of land to one person by partition extinguishes another's right altogether, his subsequent possession is either that of a trespasser or a tenant-at-will, his dispossession is not illegal, and he has no legal right of suit for recovery of possession. *NOWAN BEGUM v. 76. ———— Extinguishment of rights.—Tenant rights, Effect of partition on.—A butwarra does not extinguish rights of tenants, and the mere circumstance that one of the proprietors of the estate was himself the tenant does not destroy his tenant right, because another of the proprietors has had the land allotted as part of his share of the divided estate. NUTHOO LALL CHOWDHRY v. SAADAT LALL W. R., 1864, 271

77. ———— Co-sharers.—Ryoti and proprietary rights.—Plaintiffs sued their co-heirs to recover huq-elagaun,—that is, the half share of the produce of trees planted on a portion of the land by their ancestor before his death,—on the ground that although by a butwarra entered into by the heirs the trees fell to the share of the defendants, plaintiffs were entitled as succeeding to the ryoti rights of the person who planted them. Held that as the ancestor was the only proprietor, his heirs were co-proprietors, and the butwarra was a division of the proprietary right, and that no ryoti right existed. AMBERUN v. SUNJEDA 11 W. R., 226

78. ———— Proprietary right in sir land.—When an estate in which the proprietors have sir land is partitioned, such partition among the co-sharers is no way affected by any cultivating rights which may be possessed by cultivators not co-sharers in the estate; but it is also a well-understood effect and consequence of partition, that co-sharers retain no right of occupancy in respect of any sir land which may have passed under the partition into the share of other co-sharers, as a sir-hold proprietor has no cultivating right distinct from and independent of his proprietary character. When, therefore, by partition he loses his proprietary title to any particular land, any cultivating right which he had in virtue of his proprietary character necessarily ceases. AMAN SINGH v. JYEGOPAL SINGH . . . 3 Agra, 164

79. ———— Right of holder of mokurrari lease.—A joint and undivided estate having been subjected to private partition, 4 bighas which were in the portion held by A. were granted by him in mokurrari. Subsequently, on the application of the parties, the Collector made a regular partition, by which 2 bighas of the mokurrari land were allotted to the other sharers, who refused to recognise the grantee's mokurrari rights for that portion of the land, contending that, as under the private partition all the 4 bighas were in the share of the grantor, the loss of rent should be on him, and that the Collector's butwarra could not transfer 2 bighas with the mokurrari or smaller rental to the other sharers. Held that the grantor's mokurrari title could not be got rid of by the butwarra, and that he was entitled to recognition by the other sharers. *AHMEDOOLAH v. the co-sharers, a butwarra redistributing the shares was made by the Collector. 84. ———— Suit for confirmation of possession.—*Beng. Reg. In a suit for a declaration of his right to the share claimed by him, and for confirmation of possession thereof, both the lower Courts gave a decree for the plaintiff. On special appeal an objection was taken that the suit would not lie, no application having been made in it for the annulment of the partition proceedings by which the property sued for was included in the plaintiff's share. Held that the suit would lie; that there was no necessity for the plaintiff, who claimed to be in possession of his proper share, and sued only for a declaration of his title thereto, to include in his plaint an application for the renewal of the partition proceedings; and that those proceedings were final. *INDRABATI KUNWARI v. In a suit by C. against B. for obtaining possession of his share in Kishoopore,—Held that there was no cause of action. 1 WHAT CONSTITUTES PARTNERSHIP.

1. ———— Participation in profits.—Application of English law—M. M. & Co. merchants in London, carrying on business with W. N. W. & Co., merchants in Calcutta, sought to make the defendant liable as a partner in the latter firm, under a particular memorandum of agreement between the members of the firm of W. N. W. & Co. and the defendant. Held that such agreement did not constitute the Rajah a partner in or with the said firm.
Participation in profits does not constitute a partnership. The question is, not whether the person sought to be made liable participated in the profits, but whether the trade has been carried on by persons acting on his behalf. There is no rule of law which imposes partnership liability upon a man who advances to others money for the purpose of carrying on their business, and in return secures to himself a share of the profits which may arise from the employment in the business of the money so advanced by him.

On appeal to the Privy Council,—Held, although a right to participate in the profits of trade is a strong test of partnership, and there may be cases where,
from such participation alone, it may, as a presumption, not of law but of fact, be inferred, yet whether that relation does or does not exist must depend on the real intention and contract of the parties. To constitute a partnership, the parties must have agreed to carry on business and to share profits in some way in common, but where a contract is entered into between differ from those in England, ought to be borne

2. ———— Agreement to share profits.

Money paid as rent to one party—The parties had entered into a contract of partnership to work certain supposed mines, plaintiff to receive a bonus and also six-monthly payments as "rent" for the land, both parties to share the profits and bear the losses, it being stipulated that in case coal should not be discovered, the bonus, and any sum paid as rent, would be refunded. Held that this was a partnership arrangement, and the payment of the money which went by the name of rent was not as by a tenant to a landlord, but as consideration-money for land forming a portion of the capital. *SREEMUNJEE DOSSEE v. POOR-

5. ———— Account

—There is no analogy in respect of the manager being liable to account between a joint Hindu family and a partnership. Where it was arranged amongst the members of a joint Hindu family that the accounts of a banking business carried on by them should be kept, on the understanding that the profits when realised should be divided amongst the individual members in certain proportions, and that the expenses of each member should be credited and charged in the name of each member,—Held that this was in the nature of a partnership, and an account was decreed. *RANor surviving has many, but not all, of the elements existing in an ordinary partnership. 8. ——— Continuing firm.—Partnership for a fixed term.—Death of partner.—Power of partner to nominate a successor.—General devise not an exercise of power.—Effect of default in exercising power of nomination.—Good-will.—Valuable asset.—V., J., and S., being large shareholders in the Great Eastern Spinning and Weaving Mills, Limited, entered into an agreement in October 1873 to cause the said company to be wound up and to form a new company to take over its assets and liabilities, and to cause themselves to be appointed agents of the new company under the firm of V., J., S., & Co., and under that name to act as agents of the new company, subject to the terms of the agreement. The agreement provided that the firm of V., J., S., & Co. should take the agency of the new company for a period of thirty years; that of the profits to be derived by the said firm out of the agency V. should receive 39 cents, J. 31 cents., and S. 30 cents., that, in case of a vacancy in the firm of V., J., S., & Co., caused by the death or retirement of any of the partners, the nominee of the dying or retiring partner should be admitted into partnership, and should receive the share of such partner, and should exercise all his authority. In pursuance of this agreement, the Great Eastern Spinning and Weaving Mills, Limited, was wound up, and a new company called "The New Great Eastern Spinning and Weaving Company, Limited," was formed and registered. Both the memorandum and articles of association of the said new company contained clauses providing that the firm of V., J., S., & Co., or whatever member or members that firm for the time consist of, should be agents of the company so long as the said firm should carry on business in Bombay, or until they should resign. The firm of V., J., S., & Co., having been constituted under the said agreement, became the agents of the said company, and continued to act as such down to the date of the present suit. No other business was done by the firm, and the three partners divided the profits realised by the firm out of the agency business in the shares specified in the agreement as above mentioned. V. died in 1874, leaving a will whereby, in exercise of the right vested in him by the agreement, he nominated and appointed his wife K. as his successor in the firm, and she accordingly became and was recognised as a partner therein. In August 1875 she assigned her interest in the firm to H., and he thereupon became a partner and received 39 cents of the profits. In November 1876 J. assigned his interest in the firm (31 cents) to H. and S., of which 21 cents. became the property of H. and 10 cents. the property of S.,—the firm henceforth consisting only of these two partners, of whom the former received in all 60 cents. of the profits and the latter 40 cents. In November 1882 H. died, leaving a will whereby he appointed his wife B. his executrix, and left all his property to her for life, and after her death to his son. The will did not refer to the firm, or nominate any successor in the partnership. In the present suit B. as executrix claimed to be entitled to 60 cents. or shares in the firm of V., J., S., & Co., up to the date of the testator's death, and to a like share in the profits earned subsequently to his death, or to be earned by the firm so long as it continued to carry on the said agency business of the company. The defendant admitted the right of the plaintiff to the share claimed in the profits earned prior to the testator's death, but resisted her claim to any portion of the subsequent profits. Held (1), on the authority of Beamish v. Beamish, Ir. Rep., 4 Eq., 120, that the testator's will did not operate as an exercise of the power of nominating a successor in the firm so as to make the plaintiff a partner. (2) That, having regard to the nature of the duties of the firm as agents and to the language of the agreement constituting the firm, coupled with the fact that there was no capital employed in the business, it must have been intended that, in default of nomination of a successor by a retiring or deceased partner, the agency should be carried on by the continuing or surviving partners in the name of the firm, and that the interest of the testator in the firm upon his death therefore survived to the defendant. Held, also, that although the plaintiff was entitled to an account up to the date of the testator's death, she was not entitled to a share of the good-will as an asset of the firm. The good-will of a firm is attached to the name, and in the present case, by the partnership agreement itself, the name was to be used by the surviving partners or partner for their own benefit. That arrangement took away all value from the good-will, if, indeed, it was consistent with its being an asset at all. BACHUBAI v. SHAMJI JADWJI commission on dissolution—By an agreement, made on the 10th of January 1857, between K. N. and several other persons, it was agreed that they should form a co-partnership for the purpose of erecting a mill for the manufacture of yarn. The capital of the partnership was fixed at Rs. 3,00,000, divided into 100 shares of Rs. 3,000 each. By the 4th clause of the agreement it was provided that, in return for the trouble K. N. had been at in establishing the factory, "whatever cotton had to be purchased for the factory K. N. was to purchase, and whatever yarn should be made in the factory K. N. was to sell, and for whatever he should sell on account of the factory he was duly to receive from the co-partnership his commission at the rate of 5 per cent. during his lifetime;" and it was also provided that though the purchases and sales by the co-partnership should not be made through K. N., "yet upon the whole amount of the sales the co-partnership was duly to pay 5 per cent. to K. N. during his lifetime." The factory was built, and its machinery procured and set up, by K. N., and both financially and otherwise the factory was wholly managed by him. Shortly after it commenced to work, it was found that the co-partnership had expended all its capital and was heavily involved in debt—incurred by K. N. without the sanction of his co-partners, and that the factory was working at a loss, and at the suit of some of them, but against the consent of K. N. and a minority of the co-partners, the co-partnership was ordered to be dissolved. K. N. then claimed to be entitled to compensation for the loss of the commission he should have earned upon the sale of the yarn of the factory during his lifetime. Held that he was not so entitled, that as between his co-partners and K. N. there was no obligation on the former to subscribe more capital after the original capital of the co-partnership had been exhausted, and that there was no implied covenant on the part of the co-partnership to continue to work the factory in order that K. N. should be in a position to earn his commission during his lifetime. Distinction between right to compensation for loss of fixed wages, and right to compensation for loss of commission, pointed out. When a partnership is wound up by the Court, all questions arising between the partners out of the partnership transactions should be disposed of in the winding-up suit. *LALBHAI VALLABHBHAI v. —Presumption.—Dissolution of partnership.—Payments made by the different partners of a firm are presumed to have been made out of the funds of the firm where the contrary is not proved by any satisfactory evidence, and when a firm consisting of two members is dissolved by the death of one partner, the presumption is that the deceased was entitled to a moiety of the existing assets. *KESHAV GOPAL GINDE v. 11. ——— Dormant partner, Liability of.—Bond executed by one of several partners — Right of creditor—The doctrine that a dormant partner, when discovered, is liable for every debt incurred for the partnership by the active partner, is not absolute in the Courts in England, and is not to be followed by the Courts of this country, unless found in particular cases to be consonant with justice, equity, and good conscience. Where money was lent on a bond to a "mahik and mooktear" of a factory on his personal credit and the security of the entire factory, and it was afterwards discovered that other parties had a share in the factory, it was held that the lender was not entitled to go beyond his contract and recover from those other parties personally. *NUNDEPUT MAHATAH v. Subsequently, the goods were taken to C.'s house, and, together with certain private property belonging to C., were sold by auction, and the whole proceeds of the sale were paid by C. to a bank in Calcutta to the partnership account with that bank and were eventually remitted to B. in England as from the partnership funds, and applied in payment of certain bills of the firm then due. B., on coming to Calcutta, took over the management of the business from C. In a suit brought against B. and C. for the price of the goods purchased from the plain-money, in execution of which his rights and interests in the estate were put up for sale on the 20th June 1877 and were purchased by the Bank, which obtained possession of the estate in August 1877. In August 1879 B. and W.'s executor sued T. and the Bank, claiming a declaration that they were or had been partners with T. in the estate, that if the partnership should be held to be subsisting, it might be dissolved, or that if it had ceased to exist, the date of its termination might be fixed, and that in either event a liquidator might be appointed to take an account, and, after realising assets and discharging liabilities, might be ordered to pay them each one-third of such balance as remained. Held that as the effect of the purchases by T. in 1871 and 1873 was to relieve the estates of H., E., I., and R. of all past and future liabilities of the partnership, in respect of which B. and W. still continued as liable as T., and to which they would have to contribute to discharge, such purchases should be regarded and treated as made on behalf of the partnership; and therefore, at the time of the execution of the mortgage of the estate, B., W., and T. were interested in the estate to the extent of one-third each: that, although T. was not authorised, either actually or impliedly, by B. and W. to mortgage the estate, and the mortgage therefore was not binding on them, yet, as they allowed him to conduct the business of the estate in such a manner as to make it appear that the control and management of it rested with him, and he was for all ordinary business purposes their representative, B. and W. were bound, in any accounting that might take place, to recon the defendant Bank for such advances as were made to T. for the necessary purposes of the estate, in the same proportion as they must discharge debts due to other creditors: that T. was entitled to be reimbursed such moneys of his own as he had expended within the legitimate scope and for the proper purposes of the partnership as originally contemplated by the parties. business, but no formal dissolution of the partnership ever took place. In 1869 the defendant R. filed a suit (No. 461 of 1869) in the High Court of Bombay in his own name and that of H. J., his former partner, against the firm of N. K. & Co., for an account of the dealings of that firm with the firm of Hormusji and Rustomji, and by a decretal order dated 19th March 1870, the suit was referred to the Commissioner to take the accounts as prayed for. On the 17th December 1872 H. J. died at Hongkong intestate. On 22nd February 1873 the defendant R. assigned to the second defendant W. for Rs20,000 the claim of the firm of Hormusji and Rustomji against the firm of N. K. & Co. The plaintiff did not know of this arrangement, and he only became aware of it in 1880. The plaintiff alleged that of the said sum of Rs20,000 the second defendant W. paid to the first defendant R. Rs10,000 in 1878, and for the remaining Rs10,000 gave a promissory note payable in July or August 1881. The plaintiff took out letters of administration to his father H. J., and brought this suit on 16th July 1880, claiming a moiety of the Rs10,000 already paid by the defendant W. to the first defendant R., and praying that he might be declared entitled to a moiety of the remaining sum of Rs10,000 payable by the defendant W., and that the same might be paid over to him. The defendant R. alleged that he had assigned the claim against the firm of N. K. & Co. to the defendant W., and had received the consideration for such assignment in February 1873, and contended that if the plaintiff had ever any claim to any portion of the said money (which he denied), such claim was barred by limitation. He also alleged that he had carried on the suit No. 461 of 1869 without any assistance from the plaintiff's father H. J., or from the plaintiff, who, although applied to, refused to assist him, and he submitted that under no circumstances was the plaintiff entitled to any of the moneys claimed by him without giving credit to the defendant for his (plaintiff's) share of the expense of prosecuting the said suit, and for the amount of proper remuneration to the defendant for the time and labour bestowed by him in the said suit. He also claimed that the partnership accounts of the firm of Hormusji and Rustomji should be taken, and alleged that on such accounts being taken a large sum would be found due to him from the partnership. The second defendant W. paid into Court the Rs10,000 due on the promissory note above mentioned, and was dismissed from the suit. At the hearing the Judge found that, of the other moiety of the consideration for the assignment of February 1873, a sum of Rs1,000 was paid by the defendant W. to the defendant R. on January 23, 1878, and a sum of Rs6,000 on September 13, 1879. Held that the suit was not barred by limitation in respect of the said sums of Rs1,000, Rs6,000, and Rs10,000, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover a half share of these sums from the defendant R., deducting all sums expended by the defendant in the prosecution of the suit No. 461 of 1869,—no allowance, however, being made to him as remuneration for conducting the suit. Held, also, that the defendant might deduct the amount (if any) which might be found due to him on taking the partnership accounts, although a separate suit for such account would be barred by limitation. *MERWANJI HORMUSJI v. If no assent is given by the other partners to the assignment, the assignee is on dissolution at liberty to sue for an account and for distribution, not as a partner, but as assignee of the right of his assignor in the partnership property. PASTURAGE, RIGHT TO———— Grazing.—Bombay Act I of 1865, s. 32 —“ Village cattle.”—Plaintiff erected a hut on public ground in a village in the district of Thana, and lived there annually for a few months while his cattle grazed on the public grazing ground in that village. He was not the owner or lessee of any land in the village. On being prevented by the Collector of Thana from thus grazing his cattle, plaintiff brought a suit against that officer for a declaration of his right to graze his cattle within the limits, not only of that village, but of any other village in the district of Thana. Held that plaintiff was not entitled to any such right. The phrase “village cattle” in section 32 of Bombay Act I of 1865 does not include the cattle of any roving grazer who may choose to squat for a few months on the public ground of a village. That Act does not vest the right of sanctioning such a diversion of the village grazing ground in the villagers themselves, but in the Revenue Commissioner, whose consent must be obtained. *COLLECTOR OF THANA v. invention within section 25, Act XV of 1859. Cannington v. Nuttal, L. R., 5 H. L., 205, followed as to the test of “novelty” in an invention. In deciding whether a machine, patented as an entire invention, is an imitation and piracy of another machine previously patented as an entire invention, the question is, Is the latter patented machine substantially the same as the earlier one? The fact of considerable differences existing in the several parts of the two machines will not prevent the later machine from being as a whole a copy of the earlier one, even where an exclusive privilege might have been acquired had the alterations in the later machine been claimed as improvements on the earlier one. Clark v. Adie, 2 App. Cas., 315, followed. Where a patent has been obtained for a machine which the patentee subsequently somewhat improves, a subsequent specification claiming the improved machine as a novel combination is bad, though the improvement might be claimed and protected as such. Where a new arrangement of the parts of a machine is claimed as an improvement, the arrangement must be clearly described in the specification. The mere substitution of one mechanical equivalent for another already in use will not protect it. Where a case of infringement of a patent has been made out, an injunction will follow as a matter of course. A plaintiff cannot pray for an account of profits and for damages. He must elect between the two remedies. If the plaintiff elects to take an account of the profits, such accounts will only be carried back to the period of one year before the filing of the plaint, in accordance with Act IX of 1871, article 11. KINMOND v. JACKSON. KINMOND v. LAWRIE . I. C. L. R., 66

2. ——— Act XV of 1859, s. 23.—Measure of damages.—Evidence of particulars.—Held by the Court, in a suit under Act XV of 1859 for the infringement of a patent, where the plaintiff had been in the habit of licensing the use of his invention, that the loss of the amount paid for such license was the measure of damages. Per SPANKIE, J.—The meaning of the words “publicly or actually used” in section 23 of Act XV of 1859 discussed. Held per SPANKIE, J.—That, where the defendant did not allege in his written statement that the invention was publicly used at certain places prior to the date of the petition for leave to file the specification, but was allowed to give evidence that the invention was so used at such places, the plaintiff was not bound before trial to have called upon the defendant to supply the particulars as to such places, and such evidence was not admissible. *SHEEN v. 3. ——— Particulars of infringements, Sufficiency of.—Practice.—Act XV of 1859, s. 34.—In a suit for the infringement of certain inventions the plaintiff did not, as required by section 34 of Act XV of 1859, deliver with his plaint particulars of the breaches complained of in the suit. In his plaint, after describing his inventions, he alleged generally that the defendant had made and used them at a certain place without his license. Held that, as required by section 34 of Act XV of 1859, the plaintiff should have delivered with his plaint particulars of the breaches complained of, that the general allegation as to infringement contained in the plaint did not amount to such particulars, and that under these circumstances the plaintiff came into Court with a case which could not be tried PETMAN v BULL . . . I. L. R., 5 All., 371

In the same case, on appeal to the Privy Council,—Held, the sole object of Act XV of 1859, section 34, corresponding with section 41 of the English Patent Law Amendment Act, 1852, is to give the defendant fair notice of the case which he has to meet, and it is quite immaterial whether the requisite information be given in the plaint itself or in a separate paper. Particulars of breaches must be distinguished from particulars of objections for want of novelty. In the latter case the particular instances may not be within the knowledge of the patentee and must be specified in the former the defendant must know whether and in what respect he has been guilty of infringement. Where three patents of the plaintiff all related to one article,—a kiln for burning bricks,—and the second and third in date were for improvements upon the invention specified in the first, and the plaintiff alleged a particular kiln constructed and used by the defendant, and in his plaint not only referred to his patents, but indicated in the case of each of them the infringements of which he complained,—Held, reversing the decision of the High Court, that this was a sufficient compliance with the Act. *Talbot v. of suit.—The plaintiff applied by petition, on 20th February 1873, to the Subordinate Judge of Meerut for leave to sue in forma pauperis. The petition contained a statement of the claim and such particulars as are required in a plaint, and a prayer that, as part of the immoveable property claimed was situated in the Punjab, the Subordinate Judge would seek the necessary sanction to give him jurisdiction. The Subordinate Judge, considering that the suit should be instituted in the Delhi district, rejected the application. On 3rd March the plaintiff presented the petition to the Deputy Commissioner of Delhi, and was admitted by that officer to sue as a pauper. The Deputy Commissioner having applied for sanction to try the suit, the High Court, North-Western Provinces, and the Chief Court of the Punjab, considered it advisable that the suit should be tried at Meerut, and on 10th June 1873 the Deputy Commissioner returned the petition for presentation in the proper Court in the North-Western Provinces. On 19th July the plaintiff presented it to the Subordinate Judge of Meerut, who received and registered it as a plaint. On 10th November the defendants filed written statements, wherein they urged that the plaintiff ought not to be allowed to sue in forma pauperis until he had proved his pauperism in the Subordinate Judge's Court. Upon this the Subordinate Judge threw out the suit, holding that he had no jurisdiction to admit it. Held that the Subordinate Judge, if he regarded as ineffectual the order of the Deputy Commissioner admitting plaintiff to sue as a pauper, should himself have entered into an inquiry into the plaintiff's pauperism, and not have thrown out the suit. Held, also, that the provisions of section 340 of Act VIII of 1859 were not applicable to the order of the Subordinate Judge refusing to allow the plaintiff to sue as a pauper, as he pronounced no opinion on the point. Held, also, with reference to the question of limitation, that the time during which the suit was pending in the Delhi Court should be deducted in computing the period of limitation. Semble,—That the order admitting the plaintiff to sue as a pauper, which was made by the Delhi Court, became ineffectual when the plaint was returned by that Court; and that it became the duty of the Meerut Court, when the petition was again presented to it, to pass orders de novo on the subject. *SKINNER alias MIRZA v. ter of the suit, and that they could not, therefore, be allowed to sue as paupers. The inquiry into pauperism under sections 408 and 409 takes place before any suit is in existence, for, until an application to sue as a pauper is granted, there is no plaint, and, consequently, no suit (see section 410). Any property, therefore, found at such inquiry not to be really in dispute cannot be regarded as part of the "subject-matter of the suit," although it may be entered in the particulars of the application for leave to sue as a pauper. The ground for excluding the "subject-matter of the suit" under section 401 is because such property is presumably out of the petitioner's reach, and cannot be made use of by him to carry on his litigation. In the present case the articles deposited in Court were freely at the disposal of the petitioners, and could not, therefore, be excluded from consideration. DWARAKANATH NARAYAN v. 17. ———— Ground for rejecting petition.—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 407—Rejection of application to sue as a pauper.—The terms of section 407 (e) of the Code must not be read as limiting the Court's discretion to merely ascertaining whether the "right to sue" arose within its jurisdiction, but have a more extended meaning,—namely, that an applicant must make out that he has a good subsisting cause of action, capable of enforcement in Court, and calling for an answer, and not barred by the law of limitation or any other law. Also per MAHMOOD, J.—The provisions of section 407 must be interpreted strictly, inasmuch as they operate in derogation of the right possessed by every litigant to seek the aid of the Courts of Justice, and an exercise of jurisdiction under that section, when such exercise of jurisdiction is open to the objection of illegality or material irregularity, would form a proper subject of revision by the High Court. *Har Prasad v. His suit was dismissed, the decree directing that he should pay the costs of the defendant. On the defendant's application certain immoveable property belonging to N. was attached in execution of this decree, and was sold. Held that the Crown was entitled to be paid first, out of the proceeds of such sale, the amount of the Court fees N. would have had to pay if he had not been allowed to sue as a pauper. 27. — Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 412.—Order for costs.—Jurisdiction.—A Subordinate Judge admitted a plaint in formâ pauperis, but, holding that he had no jurisdiction to try the suit, returned the plaint to the plaintiff for its presentation in the proper Court, and ordered each party to pay his own costs. After the presentation of the plaint in another Court, and before the termination of the suit, the Collector applied to the Subordinate Judge for execution of the order as to costs, by seeking to recover the amount of the stamp duty from the plaintiff. The Subordinate Judge refused to execute the order, on the ground that the pauper suit was still pending in another Court. His order was affirmed by the District Judge on appeal. On second appeal to the High Court,—Held that, under section 412 of Act X of 1877, the Subordinate Judge had no jurisdiction to make the order for payment of Court fees by the plaintiff. The High Court, accordingly, in the exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction, annulled the Subordinate Judge's order about costs, and all the subsequent proceedings consequent upon that order. COLLECTOR OF RATNAGIRI v. Before such sale, but after the above mortgage, the property was attached by the first defendant, in execution of a decree of 1865 (ie, J. D.'s equity of redemption was attached), and a part of the property was sold. The sale was set aside for irregularity, but the attachment remaining, the first defendant resumed proceedings in execution and got an order for sale, when the plaintiff released it from liability to such sale by paying into Court the money due, which he now sought to recover. Held that the first defendant had a right to sell the rights and interests of *J. Meanwhile plaintiffs also lent money to S. under a bond by which the same property was pledged, and also recovered a decree in execution of which the property was sold. P. then proceeded to attach the same property in execution of his second decree, when plaintiffs objected under Act VIII of 1859, section 246, but ineffectually, and after that, to protect the property which they had purchased, they paid a sum of money into Court which was subsequently taken out by P. They now sued to recover that money. Held that, under the circumstances, the payment of the money into Court was not a voluntary payment, and the plaintiffs were entitled to recover it. *MUTHOORA MOHUN ROY CHOWDHRY v. 2. ——— Capacity of understanding to commit offence.—An objection that the accused is of such an age as not to have attained sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequences of his conduct, is not one of a preliminary character, but rather a matter of defence to be considered with the other issues arising in the case. Where the accused is over seven years of age and under twelve, the incapacity to commit an offence only arises where the child has not attained sufficient maturity, &c. such non-attainment would have apparently to be specially pleaded and proved. The "consequences of his conduct" mentioned in section 83, Penal Code, are not the penal consequences to the offender, but the natural consequences which flow from a voluntary act. *QUEEN v. 1. ——— s. 172.—Abducting to avoid service of summons.—Evidence.—In order to prove the commission of an offence under section 172 of the Penal Code, the prosecutor must show that a summons, notice, or order has been issued, and that the accused knew, or had reason to believe, that it had been issued. To abscond to avoid the service of process which has not issued is no offence under section 172 of the Penal Code. Absconding does not necessarily imply change of place, but may be effected by concealment. If a person having concealed himself before process issues, continues to do so after it has issued, he absconds. SRINIVASA AYYANGAR v. QUEEN I. L. R., 4 Mad., 398

2. ——— Warrant of arrest.—Absconding offender.—A warrant addressed to a police officer to apprehend an offender and bring him before the Magistrate is not a "summons, notice, or order" within the meaning of section 172 of the Penal Code, and the offence of absconding by an offender against whom a warrant has been so issued is not punishable under that section. QUEEN v. 7. ——— Complaint of giving false information, Prosecution of—No ground for a complaint of giving false information to a public servant under section 182 of the Penal Code exists on the part of any one but the public servant against whom the offence was committed. QUEEN v. HURREE RAM. 3 N. W., 194

8. ——— and s. 211.—Prosecution under s. 182.—Complaint—Rejection with reference to police report.—K made a report at a police station accusing R. of a certain offence. The police having reported to the Magistrate having jurisdiction in the matter that in their opinion the offence was not established, the Magistrate ordered the case to be "shelved." K. then preferred a complaint to the Magistrate again accusing R. of the offence. The Magistrate rejected the complaint with reference to the police report. Subsequently, R. with the sanction of the police authorities, instituted criminal proceedings against K. under section 182 of the Penal Code, in respect of the report which he had made at the police station, and K. was convicted under that section. Held that K.'s conviction under section 182 of the Penal Code was illegal, as the Magistrate had no power to entertain a complaint under that section at the instance of R., the application of section 182 and the institution of prosecutions under it being limited to the public servant against whom the offence has been committed or to his official superior, as mentioned in section 467 of Act X of 1872, and it not being intended that those provisions should be enforced at the instance of private persons. Moreover, if K.'s complaint was false, his offence was against R., and not against the public servant to whom the complaint was made, and fell within section 211 of the Penal Code. *EMPRESS v. convictions for one statement, Illegality of.—An information was given to a police officer in the course of which two persons were named in whose houses stolen property belonging to a certain individual would be discovered on complaint the information was found to be false, and the accused was convicted and punished for two offences under section 182 as affecting two different persons. Held that, although the information related to two different persons the accused could be charged with having made only one false statement, and punished for one offence under section 182. Section 195, Criminal Procedure Code, clearly shows that a complaint directly made by a public servant mentioned therein is quite as sufficient as his sanction. Empress of India v. Radha Kishan, I. 18. ————— Disobedience to order of public servant.—Enquiry as to possession.—Parties to enquiry.—In May 1883 the District Magistrate of Tipperah held an enquiry as to the possession of certain lands claimed by A. and B., and having found on the evidence taken by him that A. was in possession, he passed an order on the 21st of May 1883, declaring that A. was entitled to hold possession of the disputed land until evicted in due course of law, and forbidding B. and all others to disturb A.'s possession until such disturbance should be effected in due course of law. Previously to November 1885 B. sold an 8-anna share of his interest in the disputed land to C., who at the time of his purchase had notice of the order of the 21st of May 1883. In November 1885 B. and others went to the disputed lands, and attempted to turn A. out of possession by force, and to compel the tenants of the lands to pay rent and give kabulats to B. and C. At the time that B. and his companions went to the disputed land, the latter were aware of the order of the 21st of May 1883, though none of them was a party to the enquiry then made by the District Magistrate. In December 1885 they were all tried and found guilty of disobedience to an order duly promulgated by a public servant. Held that the conviction was right. GOLUCK CHANDRA PAL v. KALI CHARAN DE

21. ——— Chairman of Municipal Committee under Act XXVI of 1850.—Public servant—The Chairman of the Municipal Committee appointed under Act XXVI of 1850, though a public servant, has no power to make an order for the attendance of any one before him, and therefore there can be no conviction for disobedience of it. *REG. v. ——— Threat of injury to public servant.—Necessity of proving actual words used.—In a prosecution for an offence under section 189 of the Penal Code, the witnesses differed as to the exact words used by the prisoner in threatening the public servant, though they agreed as to the general effect of those words. The Magistrate, however, considered that the offence was clearly proved, and convicted the prisoner. The Sessions Judge, on appeal, affirmed the conviction, observing that it was immaterial what the words used were, and that the intention and effect of the words were plain. Held that the Judge was mistaken in regarding it as immaterial what the words used actually were, and that, on the contrary, it was most material that those words should be before the Court to enable it to ascertain whether in fact a threat of injury to the public servant was really made by the accused. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 1. ——— s. 201 and s. 218.—Belief and intention of accused.—Where a person is charged (section 218, Penal Code) with framing a report incorrectly, or (section 201, Penal Code) giving false information, with intent to save offenders from punishment, the issue to be tried is, not whether such alleged offenders were in fact guilty or not, but merely the belief and intention of the prisoner in respect to their guilt. QUEEN v. HURDUT SURMA

2. ——— Concealing evidence of crime—False information—Section 201 of the Penal Code does not apply to the case of a criminal causing disappearance of evidence of his own crime, but only to the case of a person who screens the principal or actual offender. Queen v. Ram Soonder Shootar, 7 W. R., Cr., 52, Reg. v. Kashinath Dinkar, 8 Bom., Cr., 126; Empress v. Krishna, I. L. R., 2 All., 713; Empress v. Behala Babi, I. L. R., 6 Cal., 789; and Queen-Empress v. Lalli, I. L. R., 7 All., 749, referred to. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. DUNGAR

[I. L. R., 8 All., 252]

3. ——— Abetment of offence by concealment.—Section 201 of the Penal Code refers to prisoners other than the actual criminals who, by their causing evidence to disappear, assist the principals to escape the consequences of their offences. But the person who commits an offence, and afterwards conceals the evidence of it, cannot be punished on both heads of the charge. QUEEN v. SHAM SOONDER SHOOTAR . . . 7 W. R., Cr., 52

4. ——— Causing evidence of crime committed by oneself to disappear.—Semble.—A person cannot be convicted, under section 201 of the Penal Code, of causing evidence of the commission of an offence by himself to disappear, nor can he be convicted of the abetment of such an act (per LLOYD and KEMBALL, JJ.). REG. v. KASHINATH DINKAR [8 Bom., Cr., 126]

5. ————— Causing disappearance of evidence of offence.—K. and B., having caused the death of J. in a field belonging to B., removed J.'s dead body from that field to his own field with the intention of screening themselves from punishment. K. was convicted on these facts of an offence under section 201 of the Penal Code. Held that that section referred to persons other than the actual offenders, and K. could not therefore properly be punished under that section for what he had done to screen himself from punishment. Also that, as a matter of fact, he did not by removing J.'s corpse from one field to another cause any evidence of J.'s murder, which that corpse afforded, to disappear, and his act, although his object may have been to divert suspicion from himself and B., did not constitute the offence defined in that section. EMPERESS OF INDIA v. KISHNA

6. ————— False information—Exculpatory statements inculcating another.—A woman who, with her infant child, eloped from her husband's house, was afterwards arrested on a charge of murdering the child, which was missing. She made three different statements. (1) that she had left it with her husband, (2) that she had been enticed away by one R., who had taken the child from her, (3) that one H. had drowned the child. The Sessions Judge believed the last statement, and convicted her under section 201 of the Penal Code. Held that the conviction was wrong, and must be set aside. Section 201 of the Penal Code does not apply to a case where the person, who is the probable or possible offender, makes statements exculpating himself by inculcating another. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF BEHALA BIBI. EMPRESS v. BEHALA BIBI

7. ————— Concealing evidence of crime.—Secondary offence, Conviction of.—In a trial upon a charge under section 201 of the Penal Code, the accused made a statement to the effect that he was present at the commission of a murder by two other persons; that he himself took no part in the act; that before the murder was committed, one of the persons named pulled off a razai from the bed on which the deceased was sleeping; and that, in his presence, the razai was subsequently concealed in a stack. It was proved that the razai belonged to the deceased, that it was found concealed in a stack, and that it was pointed out by the accused to the police. The accused was convicted of concealing evidence of the murder, with the intention of screening the offender from legal punishment, under section 201 of the Penal Code. Held that the conviction must be quashed, inasmuch as if the razai had not been concealed or destroyed, its presence or existence would have been no evidence of the murder. A person who is concerned as a principal in the commission of a crime cannot be convicted of the secondary offence of concealing evidence of the crime. QUEEN-EMPERESS v. LALLI

where the act which caused the disappearance of the evidence of the commission of an offence was not done with the intention of screening the offender from legal punishment. It is not sufficient that the disappearance of evidence was likely to have the effect of screening the offender. QUEEN v. TOOL-SHEE RAI

5 N. W., 186

9. ————— Giving false information of offence.—Prisoner was charged, under section 201 of the Penal Code, "for that he, knowing or having reason to believe that an offence punishable with death had been committed, with the intention of screening the offender from legal punishment, gave information respecting the offence which he knew or believed to be false." Held that the proper order of proof on the part of the prosecution in the case, was to prove (1) that A. N. was murdered; (2) that the prisoner gave information respecting the offence, (3) that such information was false and known by him to be so; (4) that he then knew of the commission of the murder; and (5) that his intention was to screen the murderer. Held, also, that it was essential to the completeness of the case for the prosecution to show, not only that the information was given, but also that it was false, and known to be so by the prisoner. Further enquiry directed under section 422, Criminal Procedure Code, 1861. QUEEN v. SUBBHAMANYA PILLAI

[3 Mad., 251]

10. ————— Causing disappearance of evidence of crime.—Proof of commission of crime.—A conviction on a charge of causing the disappearance of evidence of an offence which amounted to culpable homicide not amounting to murder may be good, though there be no proof of who committed the culpable homicide. QUEEN v. MOHDUN MOHUN BOSE

7 W. R., Cr., 22

11. ————— Causing disappearance of evidence of an offence.—Held that it is necessary, in order to justify a conviction under section 201 of the Penal Code, that an offence for which some person has been convicted, or is criminally responsible, should have been committed. EMPERESS OF INDIA v. ABDUL KADIR

12. ————— Causing disappearance of evidence of an offence—Omitting to report a sudden, unnatural, or suspicious death.—Before an accused can be convicted of an offence under section 201 of the Penal Code it must be proved that an offence, the evidence of which he is charged with causing to disappear, has actually been committed, and also that the accused knew or had information sufficient to lead him to believe that the offence had been committed. EMPERESS OF INDIA v. 14. ——— Causing disappearance of evidence.—The accused was attacked by a man whom he found by a hole cut in his house for the purpose of committing a burglary, and struck out at the man a blow which caused his death. Held that the accused simply exercised his right of private defence, and was guilty of no offence. Two other men, who helped him to remove the dead body, and were accused of causing the disappearance of evidence, knowing that an offence had been committed, under section 201, Penal Code, were also acquitted, for, that section contemplates a belief that an offence has been committed; and as the first prisoner was acquitted of all offence, it may be presumed that the other prisoners did not believe that any offence had been committed. *QUEEN v. 1. ——— s. 372.—Selling or hiring minor for purpose of prostitution.—To constitute an offence under section 372 of the Penal Code it is not necessary that there should have been a disposal tantamount to a transfer of possession or control over the minor's person. REG. v. ARUNACHELLAM [I. L. R., 1 Mad., 164

2. ——— Dedication of minor girl to service of temple.—Disposal for purposes of prostitution.—Held that the dedication of a minor girl under the age of sixteen years to the service of a Hindu temple, by the performance of a religious ceremony, where it was shown that it was almost invariably the case that girls so dedicated led a life of prostitution, was a disposing of such minor knowing it to be likely that she would be used for the purpose of prostitution within the meaning of section 372 of the Penal Code. REG. v. JAILI BHAVIN [6 Bom., Cr., 60

3. ——— Disposing of and receiving girls for purpose of prostitution.—The prisoners were convicted, the one of disposing of, and the other of receiving, two children, females under the age of sixteen years, with intent that such females should be used for the purpose of prostitution. The evidence showed that the children were disposed of and registered as dancing girls of a pagoda for the purpose of being brought up as dancing girls. Held that offences under sections 372 and 373 of the Penal Code had been committed, and that the prisoners were properly convicted. EX PARTE PADMAVATI [5 Mad., 415

4. ——— and s. 373.—Obtaining possession of minor for purpose of prostitution.—The prisoner was tried upon a charge of having obtained possession of Dowlath Bee, a minor aged ten years, with intent that she should be used for an unlawful and immoral purpose,—that is to say, for the purpose of illicit intercourse,—and having thereby committed an offence under section 373 of the Penal Code. The evidence showed that the prisoner met Dowlath Bee, a girl eleven years old, in a street at Triplicane, and promised to give her a pice if she would accompany him into an uninhabited house close by and allow him to have sexual intercourse with her. The girl went willingly with the prisoner, and both were detected in the act of having sexual intercourse. The girl had gone out without permission, had not attained the age of puberty, and the evidence tended to show that the girl had not before had sexual connexion. The jury convicted the prisoner. Held by the High Court that the case proved against the prisoner did not make out the offence charged. QUEEN ON THE PROSECUTION OF DOWLATH BEE v. ALI 5 Mad., 473

5. ——— Obtaining possession and disposing of minor for purposes of prostitution.—S., a married Mahomedan girl under sixteen, while living with N., her grandmother, and in the absence of her husband, formed an adulterous intrigue with two Hindus with the knowledge of N. S. and N. were then induced by the Hindus to remove to another village, that S. might take up the trade of a prostitute; they there met J., a public woman with whom they went to reside, and who introduced visitors to S., and received the money paid by them in exchange for the board and food supplied to S. and N. N. was convicted, under section 372, Penal Code, of disposing of a minor for the purpose of prostitution, and J. was convicted, under section 373, Penal Code, of obtaining possession of a minor for the purpose of prostitution. Held per JACKSON, J., that on the facts proved no offence was committed under the Penal Code. Per GLOVER, J.—N. and J. were both guilty under sections 372 and 373 respectively and their appeals should be dismissed. QUEEN v. NOURJAN

6. ——— Buying or selling minor for the purpose of prostitution, &c.—Certain persons, falsely representing that a minor girl of a low caste was a member of a higher caste, induced a member of such higher caste to take her in marriage and to pay money for her in the full belief that such representation was true. Held per STUART, C. J., that such persons could not be convicted on these facts of offences under sections 372 and 373 of the Penal Code. Per OLDFIELD, J., and STRAIGHT, J., that if such girl was disposed of for the purpose of marriage, it could not be said, because the marriage might be invalid under Hindu law, that such persons acted with the intention that she should be employed or used for the purposes of prostitution or for any unlawful and immoral purpose, or that they knew it to be likely that she would be employed or used for such purpose, and consequently they could not be convicted of an offence under those sections. Per PEARSON, J., and SPANKIE, J., that, such girl having been disposed of for the purpose of marriage, although the marriage might be objectionable under Hindu law, it did not appear that it was wholly invalid, and therefore such intent or knowledge could not certainly be presumed, and such persons could not be convicted of offences under those sections. EMPRESS OF INDIA v. 3. ————— Enticing away wife.—Proof of marriage—S. and G. having been convicted of enticing away the wife of the complainant, the conviction was quashed on appeal, on the ground that strict proof of marriage being necessary for a conviction under section 498 of the Penal Code, the evidence adduced (viz., of the complainant, the woman and her mother, who swore to the fact of the marriage) was not sufficient to enable the Court to form an opinion whether the marriage took place as a fact, and if it did take place, whether it was according to law. The accused did not cross-examine the witnesses as to the fact or validity of the marriage or otherwise impugn it. Held that the marriage was sufficiently proved. Empress v Pitambur Singh, I. L. —Upon an indictment under section 498 of the Penal Code, charging that the prisoner took away one A, who was then, and whom he then knew to be, the wife of one M, with the intent that he might have illicit intercourse with the said A.—Held that there was a taking within the meaning of the section, although the advances and solicitation had proceeded from the woman, and the prisoner had for some time refused to yield to her request. QUEEN v KUMARA-SAMI 2 Mad., 331

7. ————— Concealing or detaining.—

In a charge under section 498 of the Penal Code, the words of the section, "conceals or detains," must be taken to extend to the enticing or inducing a wife to withhold or conceal herself from her husband, and assisting her to do so, as well as to physical restraint or prevention of her will or action. Depriving the husband of proper control over his wife for the purpose of illicit intercourse is the gist of the offence, and a detention occasioning such deprivation may be brought about simply by the influence of allurements and blandishments. *QUEEN v. PENSIONS ACT, VI OF 1849.

1. ———— Arrears of pension, Succession to.—Heirs—Succeeding grantee.—Arrears of pension due to the deceased at the time of her death form part of her estate, and the person who is legal heir to the deceased is entitled to recover them. The grantee of the pension formerly enjoyed by the deceased has no right to such arrears which formed part of the deceased's estate. NOUSHABAH SOULTAN BEGUM v. NUBERRAH SOULTAN BEGUM

[3 Agra, 44]

2. ———— Agreement to pay portion of pension.—A pension having been granted by Government to B. P. in lieu of a saranjam held by his grandfather, a claim to share the same by M. P. and his brothers was compromised by B. P. agreeing to pay them a certain proportion thereof yearly. The Agent for Saidars, affirming the decree of the Assistant Agent, found the agreement to be null and void as an assignment of a future interest in a pension. Held that, as the pension was not granted "in consideration of past services and present infirmities or old age," the case did not come within the terms of Act VI of 1849, and that the agreement was a valid one. MADHAVRAY PANSE v. BAPURAY PANSE

4 Bom., A. C., 62

3. ———— Liability to attachment.—Deshmukh allowance.—As the holder for the time being of a deshmukhi watan (an hereditary office) has only a life interest in the allowances pertaining to that watan, such allowances accruing due subsequently to his death cannot be attached as part of his estate. HANMANTRAY KHANDERAY v. BHAVANRAY BAJIRAY

10 Bom., 299

4. ———— Political pension.—An order made by a District Judge, rejecting an application to attach a pension, on the ground that being a political pension it could not be attached under Act VI of 1849, was reversed, on petition, by the High Court, which directed the pension to be attached. [4 Bom., A. C., 67]

5. ———— Requisite proof for exemption from attachment.—On a petition praying that an attachment placed on a pension, of which petitioner was the recipient, might be removed under Act VI of 1849, the High Court declined to interfere, as it had not been shown that the pension was one enjoyed in consideration of past services and present infirmities or old age. EX PARTE VITHALRAY ESEWANTRAY

PENSIONS ACT, XXIII OF 1871.

1. ———— Operation of Act—Retrospective operation.—The Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871) is not retrospective. JAMNADAS v. LALITARAM

2. ———— Construction of Act.—Grant by Government.—Ownership in the soil.—Though, as stated in Krishnarav v. Rangrav, 4 Bom., A. C., 1, "sanad grants in ilam, saranjam, &c. are, generally speaking, more properly described as alienations of the royal share in the produce of the land (i.e. of land revenue) than grants of land, although in popular parlance occasionally so called," yet such is not invariably the case. If words are employed in a grant which, expressly or by necessary implication, indicate that Government intends that, so far as it may have any ownership in the soil, that ownership shall pass to the grantee, neither Government, nor any person subsequently to the date of the grant deriving under Government, can be permitted to say that the ownership did not so pass, unless there are in the grant such detailed provisions as show that such words are limited in their operation. An enactment of a character so arbitrary as Act XXIII of 1871 ought to be construed strictly, and the Courts should not extend its operation further than the language of the Legislature requires. RAJVI NARAYAN MANDLIK v. DADAJI BAPUJI

3. ———— Suit for declaration of right to officiate as patil of village.—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.—A suit for a declaration of the plaintiff's eligibility to officiate as patil of a village is not prohibited by Act XXIII of 1871. That Act should receive a strict construction, as being in derogation of the right of the subject to resort to the ordinary Civil Courts. Babaji v. Rajaram, I. L. R., 1 Bom., 75, distinguished. GURUSHIDGAYDA BIN RUDRAGAYDA v. RUDRAGAYDATI KOM DYMANGAYDA

I. L. R., 1 Bom., 531

4. ———— Political pension in lieu of grant of land resumed.—Impartible property.—A saranjam is ordinarily impartible, and semble that a political pension granted in substitution of a resumed saranjam is so likewise. The Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871) prevents a Civil Court from declaring such a pension to be partible, unless the Collector should authorise it to do so, and the fact that the Collector authorises a suit for maintenance out of such a pension affords no ground for presuming that he authorises a suit for the partition of the pension. RAMCHANDRA SAKHARAM v. SAKHARAM GOPAL

1. ———— s. 3.—"Grant of money or land revenue"—Grant of proprietorship of soil.—The meaning of the expression "grant of money or land revenue," extended by section 3 of Act XXIII of 1871 to include "anything payable on the part of Government in respect of any right, privilege, perquisite, or office," is not of so wide a range as to include a grant of the proprietorship of the soil, or any suit involving the rights of a proprietor of the soil. *Krishnarav v. 2. ————— s. 6.—“Right.” Meaning of.—Toda garas haks—Mortgage of hak.—Toda garas haks are within the scope of the Pensions Act, XXIII of 1871, and a suit in respect of them cannot be instituted without the certificate required by section 6 of the Act. Where a mortgagee of such haks had, before the date on which the Act came into operation, obtained a decree for the recovery of his mortgage-debt from the mortgaged haks and from the mortgagor personally, and a fresh suit was necessary to enforce execution of that decree against these haks,—Held that the Act did not apply to such fresh suit. Semble,—That the word “right” in section 3 of Act XXIII of 1871 is equivalent to the word “hak” in its restricted sense of “allowance” or “fee” PARBHUDAS RAYAJI v. MORIRAM KALYANDAS I. L. R., 1 Bom., 203

1. ————— s. 4.—Toda garas hak, Suit for money in lieu of.—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.—Act XXIII of 1871, section 4, prohibits the Civil Courts from entertaining a suit against Government upon an alleged agreement by it to pay moneys from its treasury in lieu of toda garas haks. MANSANG v. GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY

2. ————— Toda garas hak, Suit for money in lieu of.—In part of Western India annual payments, known as toda garas hak, made by village communities and commuted by them into liabilities to garasias, have been recognised as a species of property, however unlawful their origin. In 1862 a resolution of the Government of Bombay described the position of the garasias at that time, and gave them the option of resuming the collection of the toda garas hak formerly levied, resorting only to legal proceedings to enforce their claims, or of receiving, from the Government, allowances of an equivalent amount; the collections, in the latter case, being discontinued on all hands. The ancestors of the adoptive father of the plaintiff formerly levied toda garas hak; and after 1862 the Government in respect thereof made payments, under the resolution, to three brothers, of whom one was the plaintiff's father; the latter receiving a one-third share, which, on his death in 1865, was no longer paid. Held that a suit against the Government for payment of this third share with arrears fell under the Pensions Act, XXIII of 1871, section 4, which prohibits cognisance, save as in the Act provided, “of any suit relating to any pension or grant of money or land revenue conferred or made by the British or any former Government, whatever may have been the consideration for such pension or grant, or whatever may have been the nature of the payment, claim, or right for which such pension or grant may have been substituted.” Held that there was no reason, either in the language of the Act itself or in any antecedent legislation, for constru-

[I. L. R., 6 Bom., 208]

4. ————— Jurisdiction of Civil Court.—Suit relating to grant of money or land revenue.—A plaintiff, alleging that, as the hereditary deshmukh of certain melhals, he was entitled to be paid directly by the ryots of these melhals a percentage on the revenue thereon assessed, sued to recover a portion of such percentage which had been collected along with the revenue and retained by the Government. Held that the claim was “a suit relating to a grant of money or land revenue,” and as such excluded from the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts by section 4 of the Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871). VASUDEB SADASHIV MODAK v. COLLECTOR OF RATNAGIRI

5. ————— Rent-free grant of land from Government.—Section 4 of the Pensions Act, XXIII of 1871, debars the Civil Court from taking cognisance of any suit, whether the Government is a party to it or not, which relates to any pension or grant of money or land revenue conferred or made by the British or any former Government, without a certificate from the Collector or other authorised officer. Section 5 prescribes a remedy for the claimant of such pension or grant, and section 6 enables the revenue officer to refer the parties to the Civil Court for the determination of their respective interests in the income or other benefits, which the executive will, however, still, as against either or both of the litigants, be at liberty to allow or withhold. Lands held free of assessment under a grant from Government which bestows on the grantee the lands themselves, and not merely the Government revenue arising from them, do not fall within the provision of the Pensions Act. BABAJI HARI v. RAJARAM BALLEL I. L. R., 1 Bom., 75

6. ————— Grant of land revenue.—Former suit for money.—The plaintiffs formerly sued for a sum of money, and, obtaining a decree, attached, in 1861, two villages, the land revenue of which had been granted in mam. The attachment continued down to 1875, when the last holder of the villages died, and the Government having resumed the villages, the attachment was raised. The plaintiffs now sued to have their right declared to satisfy their decree from the revenues of the villages. Held that the former suit was not a suit in respect of a pension or grant of money or land revenue, and that an attachment placed in pursuance of an ordinary money-decree before the date of the Pensions Act, XXIII of 1871, could not be treated as a suit in respect of a pension, grant of money, or land revenue instituted before such date, so as to exclude the operation of the Act under section 1. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL v. 8. ——— Gratuitous pension—Suit for share of annual grant made by Government.—One S., a servant of the Delhi Emperor, having been killed in Burdwan while fighting for his master, the Emperor built a tomb over his remains, and made a grant of land (five mouzahs) to his family for the purpose of maintaining it in the manner usual amongst Mahomedans. This grant was subsequently confirmed to a descendant of S. and his heirs. Some years later the land came into the possession of the Rajah of Burdwan, who paid to the grantees a certain sum of money annually. When the perpetual settlement was made, the British Government continued the payment on account of the Rajah, in whose zemindari four of the five mouzahs were incorporated. Owing to disputes in the family, a reference was made to Government, who reduced the money payment and appointed a mutwalli for the tomb. One of the descendants of S then sued the Government and the mutwalli for a share of this annual payment. Held that the grant to S's family was not a gratuitous pension or allowance, and that the money payment by the zemindar of Burdwan was rent justly due to them for the use and occupation of their land, and that the fact of the payment being continued by Government did not alter its nature. Accordingly, the suit was not barred by Regulation XXIV of 1793, or Act XXIII of 1871. HAZARA BEGUM v. COLLECTOR OF BURDWAN

1. ——— s. 11.—Toda garas hak.—Liability to attachment.—Attachment—A toda garas hak is not exempted from attachment under a decree of a Civil Court by section 11 of the Pensions Act of 1871. The word "pension" in section 11 of the Pensions Act is used in its ordinary and well-known sense,—viz, that of a periodical allowance or stipend granted, not in respect of any right, privilege, perquisite, or office, but on account of past service or particular merits, or as compensation to dethroned princes, their families and dependants. 1. ——— Pleadings in Courts in India.—Pleadings in Indian Courts should not be construed with the same strictness as they are in the English Courts. NAWAB NAZIM OF BENGAL v. AMRAO BEGUM 21 W. R., 59

2. ——— Primary and secondary relief.—Z and his three minor sons were joint owners of a village which Z hypothecated by deed of simple mortgage to J. Subsequently Z executed another deed of mortgage to J, part of the consideration whereof was the cancellation of the former bond, which was paid off and extinguished accordingly. J, however, fraudulently caused it to appear from the novating document that the former mortgage was still alive, and after the death of Z put the bond in suit against Z's widow, who, being ignorant of the fraud, confessed judgment as guardian of her minor sons; and the entire right and interest of Z's heirs were sold in execution of the decree obtained by J. Subsequently the fraud was discovered and Z's sons brought a suit to set aside the execution sale and to recover possession of the property first mortgaged. In regard to three fourths of this property they prayed that "possession might be awarded to them by establishment of their right and share by amendment of the revenue papers." In regard to the remaining one fourth, they prayed for possession "by right of inheritance to Z," by cancellation of the execution-sale and of the fraudulent decree. Held that pleadings in the Indian Courts must not be construed with the same strictness as in English Courts, that although in an informal and loose way, what the plaintiff substantially set out, as the primary relief sought, was the entire avoidance of the decree and the proceedings resulting therefrom as vitiated by fraud, and, as secondary relief, to be granted, if the Court should not see its way to setting aside those proceedings, a declaration that they took effect only as regards one fourth of the property. *Nawab Nazim v. 3. ——— Holiday.—Stamp duty—The reception of a plaint for arrears of rent by the Collector on Good Friday, although by the Circular Order of the Board of Revenue such day is an authorised holiday, is not illegal. There is no illegality in the reception of a plaint engrossed on insufficient stamp paper, if the full amount of the stamp duty has been paid at the time. GOBIND KUMAR CHOWDHURY v. HARGOPAL NAU

PLAINT—continued.3. FORM AND CONTENTS OF PLAINT.*(a) DATE OF CAUSE OF ACTION.

4. ——— Limitation.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 26.—In a suit to recover possession, plaintiff is bound, under section 26, Act VIII of 1859, to give the date on which he was dispossessed as accurately as possible, especially where one of the issues is whether he has been in occupation of the land within twelve years of suit. BOYDONATH SURMAH v. OJAN BIBLE . . . 11 W. R., 238

5. ——— Plaint not showing when cause of action arose.—A plaintiff is bound by the Civil Procedure Code, to show on the face of the plaint that his cause of action accrued within the period of limitation. Where an assignment to himself is a material part of a plaintiff's cause of action he ought to allege the fact in his plaint. BROOKE v. GIBBON . . . 21 W. R., 47

6. ——— Objection to cause of action being barred.—Section 32 of Act VIII of 1859 imposes upon the Court of first instance the duty of taking any legal objection apparent on the face of the plaint, see Balava kom Basangouda v. Shigouda vidad Kadapa, 7 Bom., A. C., 99; and the fact that a portion of the claim is evidently barred by the law of limitation from which no ground of exemption is stated, is an objection which ought to be noticed by the Court when receiving the plaint; or if not taken, notice of then it may be at any subsequent stage of the suit. SALUJI KESRAJI v. RAJ-SANGJI JALMSANGJI. 2 Bom., 169; 2nd Ed., 162

7. ——— Taking plaint off the file.—Indefiniteness.—Omission to show suit not barred.—A plaint which merely stated that the cause of action arose previous to 21st August 1869 and which did not show that the suit was not barred by limitation, was ordered to be taken off the file. SONAMULL v. SUNARAM ROTTY

8. ——— Plaint not showing when cause of action arose.—The fact of A's plaint not showing when the cause of action arose, is ground for rejecting the plaint, but no ground for finding on the trial that the suit is barred upon an issue raised as to limitation. KALLYNAUTH SHAW v. RAJEEBLOCHUN MOZOOMDAR

[2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 343

9. ——— Omission to state when cause of action arose in plaint.—Amendment of plaint.—A suit, in which the plaint discloses a cause of action falling within the period of limitation, should not be dismissed after the framing of issues merely because the Court considers that an erroneous date has been assigned in the plaint as the cause of action. The plaint should be amended. SHROFAS SINGH v. NUB KHAN . . . 7 N. W., 364

Company, Limited, and in the body of the plaint several allusions were made to the “plaintiff-company,” and the claim made in the plaint was a claim made on behalf of the Company. It was not suggested that the X. Company was a Company authorised to sue or be sued in the name of an officer or trustee, nor was it shown that it was registered as a corporation under section 41 of the Indian Companies Act. Held that the suit was badly framed and that it should be dismissed. CAMPBELL v. 26. ——— Description of plaintiff.—Objection to frame of suit.—In a suit brought on behalf of a minor by his next friend it is not necessary for the next friend to have a certificate under Act XL of 1858, provided he have in fact permission of the Court to sue. Where a suit was brought in the name of A. for self and as guardian of her daughter B., a minor, and it was objected that it should have been brought in the names of A., and of B., a minor by her next friend and guardian, Held that, as no one was misled or injured by the improper form of the plaint, the objection ought not to be held fatal, but the decree must be taken to be in favour of A. and of B. suing by A. as if the suit had been properly framed. ALIM BUKSH FAKIE v. 29. ——— Misdescription of plaintiff.—Suit for rent.—Plaintiff sued for rent, describing herself as holding a dar-mirasi jote, and the lower Appellate Court treated that description of her jote as misdescriptive, because the jumma-wasil-baki papers called her a mirasi-ijardar, and other papers showed her to be a dar-mirasi talookdar. Held on special appeal that the misdescription, if there were any, was an utterly insufficient ground for throwing out plaintiff’s claim. BRUODUN MOYEE DASSER v. 52. ——— Ground for not verifying personally.—Duty of Court on presentation of plaint.—It is incumbent on all Courts, without regard to rank or station, to see that plaints and written statements are subscribed and verified by the parties in person, except when unable to do so by reason of absence or other good cause, when they may be allowed to be subscribed and verified by competent persons only. KENNOO SINGH ROY v. ESHAN CHUNDER ROY [6 W. R., 213]

on presentation of plant.—A Court ought never to allow a person other than the plaintiff to verify the plant, save strictly under the exception which the law permits,—namely, where the plaintiff, by reason of absence or other good cause, is unable to subscribe it (see Act VIII of 1859, section 28). Whenever the plant is not presented by the plaintiff in person, the Court should satisfy itself that the verification is actually signed by the plaintiff. NURSING DEB v. Section 52 does not require the verification of a plaint to be made in the presence of an officer of the Court; but, having regard to the necessity of satisfying the Court that the person, other than the plaintiff, who verifies the plaint, is acquainted with the facts of the case, it is desirable that a verification by such a person should be made in the presence of the Court, unless the Court be satisfied that there is sufficient ground for dispensing with his attendance. *KASTALINO v. the deposit of R100, with interest. The Judge of the Court of Small Causes at Broach, being of opinion that the contract was in its nature a sutta, or wagering contract, rejected the plaintiff's claim. The plaintiff applied to the High Court, under its extraordinary jurisdiction, to set aside the lower Court's decision. Held that, in the first instance, the plaint, as framed, not disclosing any cause of action, ought to have been returned for amendment. It should either have alleged a mistake common to both parties to the contract, or should have contained an allegation of fraud, on the defendant's part, inducing the plaintiff to enter into the agreement. The mere circumstance that the contract was "caused by one of the parties to it being under a mistake as to a matter of fact" would not, under section 22 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872), have made the contract voidable. The High Court reversed the lower Court's decision in order that the plaintiff might be given an opportunity to amend his plaint so as to show that his action was one for deceit. DAYABHAI TRIBHOVANDAS v. 102. ———— Alteration of claim on appeal.—Right founded on agreement.—Custom.—Where the existence in a certain village of the right of pre-emption was recorded in the village administration paper as a matter of agreement and not of custom, and a suit was brought to enforce such right founded on the agreement, and was tried and determined in the lower Court as so founded, the plaintiff could not on special appeal claim such right as a matter of custom in virtue of the entry. A claim to the right of pre-emption founded on a special agreement does not exclude a claim to such right founded on Mahomedan law. MARATIB ALI v. ABDUL HAKIM . . . I. L. R., 1 All., 567

103. ———— Suit for property misappropriated.—Omission of allegation of demand and refusal.—In 1874 plaintiff sued to recover certain property, or its value, "dishonestly misappropriated" on the 21st January 1872 by first defendant, assisted by the other defendants. The lower Court held that the right to sue did not accrue until the property had been demanded and refused; that the plaint contained no allegation of such demand and refusal; that the plaint could not be amended by the insertion of such an allegation after answer filed; and that, therefore, the suit could not be maintained. Held, reversing the decree, that even if the present case were one in which the provision as to demand could have any application at all, still the suit ought not to have been dismissed on that technical ground, when the defendant by his answer traversed the whole of the allegations in the plaint and pleaded the statute of limitation. MANIKYA ROW LAKSHMAYYAR v. 104. ———— Suit to set aside sale for arrears of revenue and for possession.—Purchase by fraud.—Forfeiture of tenancy.—Trustee for owner in equity.—The plaintiff sued to recover possession of certain land, and prayed to set aside the sale of it by the revenue authorities for arrears of assessment due on the land. He alleged that he had let the land to the defendant, on condition of the latter paying the Government assessment and certain rent in cash and kind to the plaintiff, that the defendant having intentionally made a default in payment of the assessment, fraudulently caused the land to be sold by the revenue authorities and purchased it himself. The defendant traversed the plaintiff's allegations, and stated that he was in possession of the land as purchaser at the revenue sale. The Subordinate Judge rejected the plaintiff's claim, holding that he failed to prove either the defendant's liability to pay the assessment, or any fraud on his part with respect to the sale of the land, and that the sale could not be set aside. His decree was affirmed, on appeal, by the Assistant Judge on the sole ground that the sale could not be set aside. He did not go into the merits of the case. On appeal to the High Court,—Held that the plaint ought not to have contained any prayer for setting aside the sale, but that as it contained a prayer for possession, it might be read as praying (or at least that the plaintiff might have been permitted to amend it so that it might simply pray) that the defendant should, under the circumstances alleged by the plaintiff, be declared a trustee of the land for the plaintiff. Held, also, that if the plaintiff's allegations were true, the plaintiff would be entitled to such a declaration, and the defendant would be discharged of his sub-tenancy in consequence of his conduct, which worked a forfeiture of any right to be continued as tenant. BALKRISHNA VASUDEV v MADHABRAV NARAYAN . —When a plaintiff sues to recover possession of property on the allegation that he had purchased it with his own money, and the suit is dismissed in the Court of first instance, the Court of Appeal is not justified in giving the plaintiff a decree for a portion of the property, on the ground that the whole was the property of a joint Hindu family in which the plaintiff was a co-sharer. MUKHODA SOONDURY DASI v. 106. — Suit for possession of share of joint Hindu family before partition.—Suit for partition.—A, one of three members of an undivided Hindu family, mortgaged his share in the immoveable family property to B. The mortgage recited that the money was raised in order to enable A to sue his coparceners for partition of the family property and possession of his share therein. A subsequently did bring a suit with that object against his coparceners, but allowed it to be dismissed against him for default. B now brought a suit against A and his coparceners for possession of A's share in such family property. Held that B's suit, being a suit for possession, was wrongly framed, and was not maintainable, there never having been any partition of the joint family property. Leave, however, was given to B on certain terms, to amend his plaint, so as to make his suit a suit for partition. KRISHNAJI LAKSHMAN RAJWADE v. SITARAM MURARRAY JAKHI [I. L. R., 5 Bom., 496

110. — Omission to ask for alternative relief—Frame of suit.—Account and discovery.—After parties have come to trial to determine which of two stories is true, the plaintiff cannot be allowed to amend his plaint by abandoning his own story and adopting that of the defendant, and asking relief on that footing for the question, whether on that footing the plaintiff is entitled to relief, is one to which the defendant's attention has not been called, and which he has had no opportunity of answering. In a suit to recover a specified sum for the hire of cargo-boats and not asking for any other relief, the defendant alleged and proved that he was merely the agent of the plaintiff to find hirers for the boats, and that he was not liable for the hire of the boats. Held that, although prima facie a principal is entitled to an account and discovery from his agent, the plaintiff could not obtain such relief in the suit as framed, and that he could not, after coming to a hearing, be allowed to amend his plaint by inserting an alternative prayer for relief, upon the footing of the case set up by the defendant. SHIBKRISTO SIRCAR v. sue for pre-emption.—The plaintiffs in a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption based on the wajib-ul-urz of a village, which gave the right to “co-sharers,” alleged themselves to be jointly interested in the village, and, in their plaint, claimed relief jointly. One of the two plaintiffs was the widow of a co-sharer in the village, who, at the time of his death, was a member of a joint Hindu family, and it was held she could not claim pre-emption. Held, with reference to the manner in which the plaint was framed, that the other plaintiff could not claim pre-emption entirely on his own account without amending the plaint, but that it was too late for him to take such a course. *Damodar Das v. 113. ——— Joinder of causes of action—Same parties suing in different capacities—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, ss. 26 and 31.—By the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the New Dhurumsey Poonjabhoy Spinning and Weaving Company, the plaintiffs’ firm of M. F. & Co. were appointed agents of the company for twenty-five years, and it was provided that they should have the general control and management of the company. Clause 98 of the Articles provided that the said firm, as such agents, should have full power and authority (inter alia) to appoint and employ, in or for the purposes of the transaction and management of the affairs and business of the company, such solicitors as they should think proper. An agreement, dated 26th August 1874, was also entered into between the company and the partners in the firm of M. F. & Co., their executors, administrators, and assigns, for the time being constituting the partnership firm of M. F. & Co., whereby it was agreed that the said firm should be agents to the company for twenty-five years to buy and sell, &c., and particularly to exercise all the powers contained in clause 98 of the Articles of Association. Messrs. C & B. were duly appointed solicitors to the company, and acted as such for a considerable time. M., one of the members of the said firm of M. F. & Co., died in the middle of March 1876. The plaintiffs complained that G., one of the shareholders in the company, became desirous of ousting the plaintiffs from the position of agents of the company, and of becoming the managing director of the company, that in July 1881 he procured his own election and that of certain nominees of his as directors of the company; and on the 8th August 1881 procured the passing of a resolution at a Board meeting to the effect that as Messrs. C & B., the company’s solicitors, were also the solicitors of the agents, it was desirable, for the interests of the company, that a change should be made, and that Messrs. H, C., & L. be appointed solicitors of the company. The plaintiffs alleged that the only object of passing the said resolution was to facilitate the design of G., of ousting the plaintiffs from their agency, and getting the management of the company for himself; that Messrs. H, C., & L. had been for a long time the solicitors of G., and had been advising him in his designs upon the company and upon the plaintiffs, and they contended that the resolution was a breach of the contract between the company and the plaintiffs and a violation of the Articles of Association of the company. The plaintiffs sued G., and two other directors of the company, and the company itself, and prayed for an injunction against the defendants to restrain them from committing any breach of the agreement of 26th August 1874 and in particular from carrying into effect the resolution appointing Messrs. H, C., & L. as solicitors for the company, and to restrain them from doing anything inconsistent with the Memorandum and Articles of Association. The defendants contended that the contract of the 26th August 1874 had been determined by the death of M., and that the powers conferred on the agents by clause 98 of the Articles were, subject to the general powers of management, vested in the directors by the Articles, and that the case was not one in which an injunction could be granted. Counsel on behalf of the plaintiffs sought to obtain the injunction on the ground that the resolution of the 8th August 1881 appointing Messrs. H, C., & L. solicitors of the company, was contrary to the Memorandum of Association, and, therefore, ultra vires; and, in order that this point might be pressed against the defendants, it was proposed that the plaint should be amended by alleging a cause of action in two of the plaintiffs as shareholders as well as a cause of action in all the plaintiffs as parties contracting with the company. Held that, under the provisions of sections 26 and 31 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), the amendment could not be allowed. The plaintiffs, as shareholders and contractors, had not the same cause of action, by which words were meant not only the act complained of, but also the right violated by that act. The rights of the plaintiffs as contractors, alleged to be violated by the resolution, were rights given to them by their agreement; but the rights of the plaintiffs as shareholders were rights secured to them by the Articles of Association. *NUSSERWANJI v. The plaintiff sued the Magistrate to establish his right to the land, alleging that it was his private property, and that the Magistrate's order was wrong. The Assistant Judge who tried the suit dismissed it, holding that it did not lie against the Magistrate. On appeal to the High Court,—Held that the Assistant Judge might have properly permitted the plaintiff to amend his suit by striking out the name of the first class Magistrate as defendant, and substituting in that capacity the Secretary of State for India in Council. There is no provision in the Code for the return of a plaint to a plaintiff after it has been admitted, and the court fee stamps thereon cancelled. Even if the Code allowed the High Court to return a plaint after the court fee stamps have been cancelled, the plaint could not be again legally presented in any Court without new stamps being affixed to it. 138. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 57.—Want of jurisdiction.—The defendants, who resided and carried on business at Bombay, acted as the agents of the plaintiff for the sale, purchase, and despatch of goods to Tellicherry, where the plaintiff resided. To the claim arising out of the agency transactions the plaintiff joined a claim on account of a partnership transaction, which claim was triable by the Court of the District Munsif at Tellicherry. The Subordinate Judge held that he had no jurisdiction to try the claim arising out of the agency transaction, found that nothing was due to the plaintiff on account of the partnership transaction, and dismissed the suit. Held that the plaint ought to have been returned to the plaintiff with the proper endorsement as required by section 57 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882. KHIMJI JIVRAJU SHETTU v. dure Code, 1877, s. 57.—Rejection of plaint.—Cause of action.—N. W. P. Rent Act, XVIII of 1873, s. 29.—The plaintiff in this suit claimed in a Civil Court (1) a declaration of his right to certain land; (2) that certain leases of such land, so far as their terms exceeded the term of settlement, should be cancelled; and (3) arrears of rent for such land. The Court held as regards claim (1) that the plaint did not disclose a cause of action, as it was not alleged that the defendant had disputed the plaintiff's right; as regards claim (2) that, with reference to the terms of section 29 of Act XVIII of 1873, the plaintiff's cause of action had not yet arisen, and as regards claim (3) that it was cognisable in a Court of Revenue;—and it directed that under section 57 of Act X of 1877 the plaint should be returned to the plaintiff to be presented to the Revenue Court. Held that, under the circumstances, the plaint should have been rejected and not returned. *NAGAR MAL v. 140. ——— Return for undervaluation.—Where it appears that the relief sought in a suit has been undervalued, and that the Court is not competent, by reason of the real value of the relief sought, to try the suit, the plaint must be returned to the plaintiff under section 57 of the Civil Procedure Code, although the defendant may have been called upon to enter upon his defence and has filed his written statement. An order dismissing a suit on the ground that, by reason of the value of the relief sought, the Court has no jurisdiction, is an order affecting the merits, and an appeal lies from such order. 141. ——— Civil Procedure Code, s. 57.—Suit filed in wrong Court.—In a suit filed in a District Munsif's Court to recover certain land, the defendants alleged that the value of the land was understated by the plaintiff and exceeded by far the pecuniary limit of the Court's jurisdiction. Upon inquiry the Munsif found this allegation to be true, and directed the plaint to be returned to the plaintiff for presentation in a superior Court. The plaint having been presented in the Subordinate Judge's Court, the Subordinate Judge, on the authority of Jaggwan Javerdhas Seth v. Magdum Ali, 1 L. The plaint was accordingly returned, and additional stamps having been filed, the case was tried by the Principal Sudder Ameen. The Judge on appeal held that the plaint had been illegally returned by the Munsif, and that the act of the Principal Sudder Ameen in proceeding to try the case was illegal. Rules.—Power to make rules—Per BAYLEY, WEST, and LATHAM, JJ.—None but barristers and attorneys have a legal right to practise in the Bombay Court of Small Causes. Neither sections 2 and 36 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act No. XIV of 1882), nor sections 38 and 76 of the Presidency Small Cause Court Act (No. XV of 1882), give the pleaders of the Bombay High Court that right. The provisions of section 47 of Regulation II of 1827, authorising persons holding sanads from the High Court to practise in the mofussil Courts, are still in force. Per

BAYLEY, WEST, PINHEY, and LATHAM, JJ.—Section 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, does not give every pleader a title to appear and plead, it only enacts that "pleader" means every person entitled to appear and plead for another in Court, and includes an advocate, a vakil, and an attorney of a High Court.
Consequently, if pleaders or vakils, who are the same class of practitioners, are not entitled by law to appear or plead for another in Court, the definition of "pleader" gives them no new right or status. The words in section 36 of the Code of Civil Procedure, Act XIV of 1882, "by a pleader duly appointed to act on his behalf" do not simply mean a person duly appointed by the party in the suit, but a pleader duly appointed according to the law regarding pleaders in force in the particular Court. Per PINHEY, SCOTT,

25. ————— Erroneous consent of vakil—Where a vakil upon a mistaken view of the law goes beyond and contravenes his instructions, his erroneous consent cannot bind his client. RAM KANT CHOWDHRY v. BRINDABUN CHUNDER DOSS 16 W. R., 246

26. ————— Statements by vakil out of ordinary scope of his authority—The greatest caution should be exercised by the Courts before acting upon statements out of the ordinary scope of the vakil's authority in the particular matter for which he was employed. VENKATARAMANNA v. CHAVELA ATCHIYAMMA 6 Mad., 127

27. ————— Verbal admission made by pleader—In a suit to set aside a sale in execution on the ground of fraud,—Held, in reference to the terms of certain statements made by the plaintiffs' pleader, from which the lower Appellate Court had inferred that the plaintiffs must have become aware of the fraud at a date earlier than that alleged by them, that verbal admissions made by the pleader of a party to a suit must be received with caution, must be taken as a whole, and must not be unduly pressed. NATHA SINGH v. JODHA SINGH [I. L. R., 6 All., 406]

28. ————— Power to make admissions or statements to bind client—Relinquishment of part of defence—In a suit to recover possession, where defendants' pleader stated before the Munsif that if the thak map (which was not at the time in Court) could show that the lands in dispute had been surveyed as part and parcel of the plaintiff's talook, his client would give up his claim,—Held that the statement was not one which was within the scope of the pleader's authority to make, and was not binding upon the client. CHUNDER COOMAR DEO v. SUDAKUT MAHOMED KHAN 18 W. R., 436

29. ————— Consent of pleader—Effect of admission—The admission of a vakil made with due authority will bind his client though not present at the time of making it. Where, therefore, an order was made for the payment of a certain sum, being the moiety of the profits of an estate founded on the amount for which security had been taken as the rental of a zemindari when possession was given up, and that amount was admitted and assented to by the vakil in Court, and the order made accordingly,—Held by the Judicial Committee, affirming the judgment of the Court below, that such consent was binding on the client, and precluded him from afterwards opening the account. RAJUNDER NARAIN RAE v. BIJAI GOVIND SINGH [2 Moore's I. A., 253]

30. ————— Admission of liability by vakil—A distinct admission of liability made by a vakil, who represented the defendant and whose authority was not questioned, was held to be sufficient to warrant a decree in favour of the plaintiff. DOSSER v. PITAMBUR PUNDAR [21 W. R., 332]

31. ————— Admission by vakil—Evidence of receipt of money—The admission of a defendant's vakil in Court was held to be legal evidence of the receipt of money, and to do away with the necessity for other proof. KALEEKANUND BHUTTACHARJEE v. GIRIBALA DEBIA [10 W. R., 322]

32. ————— Power of pleader—Power to compromise case—Ordinarily a vakil who is employed to conduct the case on behalf of his client has no implied authority to compromise it. In the absence of any express provision in the vakalatnamah, he can make no compromise which will be binding upon his client, except with his consent. PREM SOOK v. PIRTHEE RAM 2 Agra, 222

33. ————— Power to compromise suit—Pleaders, unless specially empowered so to do, have no authority to compromise cases conducted by them. SIRDAE BEGUM v. IZZUT-ODUNISSA 2 N. W., 149

34. ————— Consent to matter beyond scope of suit—A consent by the vakil of a party to a decree being made binding on property other than what the parties to the suit may have an interest in, is a consent to what is beyond the scope of the suit, and can neither be binding on the party nor acted upon by the Court. AYUL KHADAR v. ANDHU SET 2 Mad., 423

35. ————— Relinquishment of defence—Where a pleader authorised only to conduct the defence in the usual way pledged his client to relinquish his defence if the plaintiff would assert on oath that the defendant was not the owner of the property in dispute, it was held that he had exceeded his power, and that his client was not bound by his act. HAKHEEMOONNISSA v. BULDEO [3 Agra, 309]

36. ————— Unauthorised relinquishment by pleader—It is not within the ordinary scope of a pleader's duties to relinquish any portion of his client's case without express authority from the client, who is not bound by such relinquishment, unless it was authorised by himself. GOUR PERSHAD DOSS v. SOOKDEB RAM DEB [12 W. R., 279]

37. ————— Relinquishment of part of claim—A vakil has no authority under an ordinary vakalatnamah to give up a portion of the claim already decreed, and any such abandonment will not be binding on his client. When a case is remanded with the specific declaration that the plaintiff shall obtain "possession of the disputed property," the lower Court has no jurisdiction to debar the plaintiff from any portion thereof by reason of a relinquishment made by the vakil. ABDUL SABHAN CHOWDHRY v. SHIBKISTO DAW [3 B. L. R., Ap., 15]

38. ———— Withdrawal from suit—Vakalatnamah—A vakalatnamah given by a plaintiff, and couched in general terms, suffices prima facie to authorise the vakil to apply on behalf of the plaintiff for leave to withdraw from the suit; and in the absence of anything to show that the vakil acted contrary to his instructions, or otherwise was guilty of misconduct in making the application, the client is bound by the act of his vakil. RAM COOMAR ROY v. COLLECTOR OF BEERBHOOH

[5 W. R., 80]

39. ———— Power of vakil to transfer decree—A vakil by his ordinary employment as vakil enjoys no authority authorising him to transfer a decree. NOHUR v. JAFFER HOSSAIN

[2 N. W., 195]

3. REMUNERATION.40. ———— Amount of remuneration.—

Vakil.—Although a vakil is entitled to whatever charge his client agrees to, yet if he acts under an engagement constituting him his client's mooktear and legal adviser, he is bound by the same rules as an attorney, and is therefore entitled only to such reasonable remuneration as the law allows. USMUT KOOWAR v. TAXLER

2 W. R., 307

41. ———— Suit for fees—

Costs between party and party.—In a suit by a pleader for the balance of vakil's fees where it was found that there was no contract,—Held that, in considering the proper fee to be allowed, the lower Appellate Court had nothing else to guide it but what, according to the practice of the Court, was allowed as costs between party and party. JUDONATH DUTT v. RUSHAD ALI

42. ———— Suit by vakil for fees—Act I of 1846, s. 7—Beng. Reg. XXVII of 1814, s. 25—Costs—In a suit brought by a vakil against his client for the amount of his fees, and instituted after the passing of Act I of 1846, but before the Pleadings and Mooktears Act, XX of 1865, came into operation,—Held that, where the services in respect of which the fees were claimed consisted of the conduct of a suit which was dismissed for a deficient plaint, under section 29 of Act VIII of 1859, the vakil is not entitled to the full amount of costs under Act I of 1846, section 7, or the scale fixed by Regulation XXVII of 1814, section 25; but in the absence of an express agreement he is only entitled to a reasonable sum as remuneration for his work and labour as a pleader. So much of Regulation XXII of 1814 as was before January 1866 repealed, and the whole of Act I of 1864, are repealed by Act XX of 1865, which came into operation on January 1st, 1866. *AMFRUNNISSA v. lation II of 1827, section 52, clauses 1 and 2, and of Act I of 1846, section 7, regarding the award of pleaders' costs by way of a percentage, relate only to costs as between party and party, and (inasmuch as section 52 of Regulation II of 1827 is, by section 6 of Act I of 1846, expressly rendered inoperative for any purpose except for the purposes of section 7 of the latter Act) there is not any statutable provision for costs as between pleader and client, so that, in the absence of an agreement between them, the pleader is left to his remedy on a quantum meruit. GANGJI VITHAL v. SITABAM SHRIDHAR

[9 Bom., 33]

44. ———— Right of suit for fees.—

Cause of action—Uncompleted case—Where a vakil has undertaken the conduct of a suit, he is bound to proceed with it, and cannot sue for his fee, in the absence of a special agreement, until the suit is completed, unless where the client has dispensed with his services. BUCKAPATNAM THATHACHARLU v. KAJA-MITA

6 Mad., 265

45. ———— Right to additional fee.—

Fees of vakil for applications in suit when he is bound to carry suit to its conclusion.—Where, under the practice existing in the Courts, a vakil receiving a fee for prosecuting or defending a suit is bound to carry the suit to an end, and to make all necessary applications in the execution department without further fee, no second fee is allowable to a vakil for applications presented in the execution department, unless it can be shown that the services of the vakil originally employed were not available. TAKEE ALI KHAN v. GOOL MAHAMED KHAN

[1 N. W., 69: Ed. 1873, 123]

46. ———— Agreement for further remuneration in successful case.—Inam patras.

—Act I of 1846, s. 7—Inam patras or agreements, oral or written, made contemporaneously with the vakalatnamahs by clients with their pleaders for the payment of rewards in addition to the regulation fees, provided their cases are decided in their favour, are not nudum pactum, and, having regard to section 7 of Act I of 1846, cannot be considered as illegal. PARSHEAM v. HIRAMAN

a fee from his client when no contract in writing is made. RAMA v. KUNJI. I. L. R., 9 Mad., 375

49. — Division of fee where more than one pleader.—Mad. Reg. XIV of 1816, s. 30.—Fee, Division of, where two vakils appointed.—The rule under Regulation XIV of 1816, section 30, that each of two vakils appointed by a party to a suit shall be entitled to a moiety of the fees payable, applies only to cases where they are appointed by the same vakalatnamah. KISARA RUKKAMMA RAU v. CHIPATA VIYYANNA DIKSHATULU
[1 Mad., 389]

50. — Fee allowed for registration petition.—Act I of 1846, s. 7.—The fee to be allowed to a pleader upon a petition to the Court to establish the right to have a document registered under Act XX of 1866, section 84, was one fourth of the fee allowable in a regular suit, as was provided by Act I of 1846, section 7. COLLECTOR OF THANA v. GANA RAMJI PATIL. 7 Bom., A. C., 132

51. — Fees in suit under Registration Act, 1864, s. 15.—Regular suit.—A suit under section 15, Act XVI of 1864, was not a summary but a regular suit, and full fees were awarded for pleaders. MOWLA BUKSH v. ALI KHAN
[9 W. R., 101]

52. — Fees in suit for judicial separation.—Divorce Act, IV of 1869—Estimation of fees.—In a suit for a judicial separation and alimony decided under the Indian Divorce Act (IV of 1869), the only basis for the estimation of pleader's fees is ten times the amount of alimony for one year. SCOTT v. SCOTT. 7 Mad., 394

53. — Fees in partition suit.—Hearing fee.—The ordinary rule for assessing the hearing fee according to the market value of the property in suit is not applicable to a suit for partition, and the Court in each such case ought to fix the amount of the fee. KIRTEE CHUNDER MITTER v. ANATH NATH DEB. 13 C. L. R., 253

54. — Fees in suit for pre-emption.—Act XX of 1865, s. 37—Pleader's fees on what valuation of property calculated.—Held, in a suit for pre-emption, where it was found by the Court that the actual price of the property was less than the price stated in the deed of sale, and the Court gave the plaintiff a decree with costs, that the amount payable by the defendant in respect of the fees of the plaintiff's pleader ought to be calculated, not on a valuation of the property which was found to be false, nor on the amount on which the Court fee on the plaint was paid, but on the real value of the property as found by the Court. *DEBI SINGH v. power to remove a vakil against his will from a Court to which he has once been allotted, except for a criminal offence, misbehaviour, or neglect of duty. IN THE MATTER OF VAMANAJI KONERA
[1 Bom., 136]

56. — Removal of pleader from one Court to another.—A Zillah Judge has no authority to oblige a pleader to leave a Court in which he has been practising and to proceed to another. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF MAHOMED MANAFF. 10 W. R., 332

57. — Suspension.—Act XX of 1865.—Power to suspend pleader.—A Zillah Judge has no power, under Act XX of 1865, to suspend a pleader of the High Court from practising in the Courts of his district on the ground of incompetency. His proper course is to make a representation to the High Court. IN THE MATTER OF KISHORREE LALL SINGH. 14 W. R., 217

58. — Act XX of 1865.—Improper conduct.—The omission of a pleader to examine the record of the case before making an application to stay execution proceedings upon the ground of a compromise, was held not to amount to grossly improper conduct and his not verifying the statement of the parties who came to him and made their statements (one of them being a mooktear) was considered at the most to amount to carelessness, but not grossly improper conduct, whilst his omission to obtain the authority or concurrence of the senior pleader in the case could not be said to be improper conduct within the meaning of Act XX of 1865—certainly not such grossly improper conduct as to call for the punishment of suspension for six months. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF SREENATH ROY
[17 W. R., 405]

59. — Unprofessional conduct.—Commission to mooktears—Act XX of 1865—Criminal offence.—A, a pleader, was engaged by B, who was acting on behalf of C, to defend certain persons charged with the offences of rioting and of having caused grievous hurt. Two of the accused persons were relatives of C. A. agreed with B. that, if all the accused were acquitted, his fee was to be Rs500; if the two who were the relatives of C. were acquitted, then he was to receive Rs250; but in the event of none of the accused being acquitted, he was to receive only Rs40. Before the trial B. paid A. Rs475; this having come to the knowledge of C, he telegraphed, saying that the fee was exorbitant, and A., upon being remonstrated with, handed over Rs250 to a banker to be placed to his (A.'s) credit. A. alleged that, out of Rs225 which remained with him, he paid Rs140 to B. as commission, and that Rs25 were paid to his mookhurir. Held that A. was guilty of fraudulent and grossly improper conduct. He was suspended from practising for the period of one year. Per PONTIFEX, J.—If a mook-

IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF GANGA DAYAL. I. L. R., 4 All., 375

62. ————— Refusal to argue case after signing memorandum of appeal.—Semble.—Where a pleader who has signed the memorandum of appeal refuses to argue the case on the ground of being unable and unprepared, he is liable to be either dealt with by the Court for neglect of duty, or sued by the client for neglect of his interests. BULDEO MISSEER v. AHMED HOSSEIN

[15 W. R., 143]

63. ————— Omission to examine record before certifying appeal—A pleader is not guilty of grossly improper conduct, but substantially and sufficiently complies with the 2nd of the Rules of 23rd May 1871, if he examines copies of the record, and not the original record, before he draws the grounds of appeal and certifies them. IN THE MATTER OF NOOR AHMED. 17 W. R., 338

PANCH COWREE PORAMANICK* [25 W. R., 366]

66. ————— Striking pleader off the rolls—Act XX of 1865, s 16—Case in which the High Court declined on the facts to strike a pleader off the rolls for using improper expressions during the argument of a case before a Zillah Judge, who recommended, after observing the requirements of section 16, Act XX of 1865, that such punishment should be awarded. The Zillah Judge should have called the pleader to order, and required him to apologise. IN THE MATTER OF CRUISE

67. ————— Power to suspend pleader.—Act XX of 1865—A Zillah Judge had no power after the 1st January 1866 to make an order under Act XVIII of 1852 dismissing a pleader. He should have proceeded under section 10, Act XX of 1865, and referred the matter, with his report, to the High Court. Even under Act XVIII of 1852, under which the Judge erroneously acted in this case, a pleader was liable to dismissal only on proof of conviction of a criminal offence by a competent Court, or on proof of a declaration or finding by a competent Court (in a suit or proceeding to which the pleader was a party) that he was guilty of a breach of trust, or for fraudulent or dishonest conduct in the discharge of his professional duty, and this also after notice and adjudication as prescribed by section 4. The violation there intended must be wilful intentional violation of some clear duty or other. QUEEN v. BOLAKI LALL 19 W. R., Cr., 7 permission—The failure of a police constable to resume his duty on the expiration of his leave does not constitute an offence under section 29, Act V of 1861. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF JANOKINATH GUPTA. EMPRESS v JANOKINATH GUPTA [I. L. R., 6 Calc., 625 : 8 C. L. R., 56

5. ————— Police officer withdrawing from the duties of his office without permission—Police officer overstaying leave.—A police officer obtained leave of absence for one month, a substitute being appointed, and overstayed his leave twenty-nine days. Held that such absence without leave did not amount to "withdrawal from the duties of his office without permission," within the meaning of section 29 of Act V of 1861. QUEEN-EMPRESS v SALIG RAM I. 6. ————— Submitting incorrect report.

Penal Code, s 218—A police officer negligently or improperly submitting an incorrect report of a local investigation may be punished under section 29 of Act V of 1861, in cases where the proof is insufficient to bring the case under section 218 of the Penal Code. QUEEN v. 7. ————— Offence committed by police officer while under suspension—A police officer was suspended by the District Superintendent and ordered to remain in the police lines, which he did not do. He was arrested and convicted under section 29, Act V of 1861, for disobeying the orders of his superior officer, and withdrawing from his duties without permission. Held that his conviction was illegal, after suspension he was no longer a police officer under section 8 of the Act, and therefore could not be legally convicted under section 29. QUEEN v DINANATH GANGOOLY

8. ————— Neglect to act on information while on other duty—A police officer charged under section 19, Act V of 1861, with a violation of his duties in not acting on information given to him of the likelihood of a breach of the peace, which afterwards actually occurred, set up in defence that he was, when he received the information, engaged bona fide in duties as a police officer in regard to another offence. He was, however, found guilty and convicted. Held the conviction was illegal. For a conviction under section 29, more than mere neglect of duty must be shown a deliberate and intentional violation of his duty is necessary. QUEEN v RADHU SINGH

9. ————— Power to depute subordinate—Police officer—Neglect of duty—A police officer being authorised by law to depute his subordinate to proceed to a place where a crime is reported to have been committed, cannot be supposed to have contravened the law by not proceeding to the spot himself, and therefore the conviction of the prisoner on the charge of wilful violation of duty was illegal. GOVERNMENT v. KARAMUT KHAN . . . 1 Agra, Cr., 1

10. ————— Police constable,—"Neglect of duty"—"Lawful order"—Extra drill—A District Superintendent of Police directed his constables to cut down the jungle in the vicinity of their lines, and on their refusal to comply ordered them extra drill every day. One of such constables not turning out to such extra drill was thereupon prosecuted and convicted of neglect of duty under section 29, Act V of 1861. Held that section 29 provided for no such offence, and that any neglect of duty short of a violation of duty does not amount to an offence under that section. Held, further, that the omission to attend such extra drill did not amount to an offence under that section, as the words "lawful order" used in the section mean an order which the authority mentioned therein is competent to make, and it did not appear that a District Superintendent of Police was competent to order his constables to cut down the jungle in the vicinity of their lines, and, on their refusal to do so, to order them extra drill. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF BHOLA NATH DAS [I. 1. EVIDENCE OF POSSESSION.

1. ——— Statement as to fact of possession.—Evidence.—A statement by a witness that a party was in possession is, in point of law, admissible evidence of the fact that such party was in possession. MANIRAM DEB v. DEBI CHARAN DEB
[4 B. L. R., F. B., 97; 13 W. R., F. B., 42]
2. ——— Acts of ownership.—A witness's statement that a party "is in possession" is no evidence of the fact. The question of possession is a mixed one of law and fact, and the evidence produced must give the various acts of ownership which go to constitute possession, so that the Court may arrive at its own conclusion. ISHAN CHUNDER BEHARA v. RAM LOCHUN BEHARA
[9 W. R., 79]

3. ——— Visiting and making use of house.—Possession as of right—Occasionally visiting and making use of a house is ample evidence of possession, unless shown to have been done by the claimant in the capacity of a visitor, and not in his own right. UNUNTO RAM SEAL v. BROJO BULLUB SEAL 11 W. R., 136

4. ——— Acts of ownership.—Omission to show acts of ownership—In special appeal, the High Court held that evidence which did not allude to any specific acts of ownership was not sufficient evidence to prove possession. The finding of the fact of possession by the lower Appellate Court upon such evidence reversed on special appeal. JAGABANDHU DAS GAJENDRA MAHAPATRA v. DINABANDHU DAS GAJENDRA MAHAPATRA

5. ———— Suit for recovery of forest land from Government.—Where a tract of land with a defined boundary has been throughout claimed by a person as owner, and acts of ownership have been done on various portions of it, such acts may be accepted as evidence of the possession of the whole tract Bhaskarappa v. Collector of North Kanara, I L R, 8 Bom, 452, distinguished SIVA-SUBRAMANYA v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA [I. L. R., 9 Mad., 285]

6. ———— Thakbust award.—Boundary, Question of—A thakbust award of boundary would in any case be material evidence of possession PRAHLAD SEN v. RAJENDRA KISHORE SINGH [2 B. L. R., P. C., 111 (137): 12 W. R., P. C., 6 11 Moore's I. A., 293]

7. ———— Survey proceedings.—Survey by revenue authorities.—Records in Government maps—Plaintiff sued in 1876 to recover certain alluvial lands which had been in existence over twelve years, together with recent accretions thereto which he alleged appertained to his talook. The alluvial lands had been surveyed by the revenue authorities in 1863, as appertaining to no permanently-settled estate, and claimed by the Government. The plaintiff's predecessor, however, subsequently, in 1864, laid claim to the lands, and the Collector, abandoning the claim of Government, recorded him in the Government maps and papers as proprietor in possession. Held that, although the fact of the land having been measured by the revenue authorities as appurtenant to a certain talook is prima facie evidence of possession of that land at the time of the survey, no presumption from the survey proceedings could arise in favour of the plaintiff in 1863. KUSSESSUR ROY v. JOGGODISHURI 7 C. L. R., 269

8. ———— Measurement of land by Government officers—The evidence of Government having sent its officers to measure the land, and to surround it with pillars, is the very best evidence of possession of a lately-formed chur. COLLECTOR OF FURREEDPORE v. KALEE DOSS HAZRAH [17 W. R., 195]

9. ———— Decree for rent.—Subsequent suit for possession—A decree against the registered tenant, in a suit for rent against him and another, is not conclusive evidence of the possession of such tenant, as between him and the other, in a subsequent civil action. HURRO NATH BHUTTACHARJEE v. HARVEY 25 W. R., 23

10. ———— Receipt of rent.—Failure to show collection of rent for portion of property.—Receipt of rent is good evidence of possession, but it does not necessarily follow that a party in possession has been disturbed because he cannot prove that he has collected rent of a particular portion of the property. PUDAE BINDOO MAHANTEE v. MOHESH CHUNDER SEN 20 W. R., 183

12. ———— Registration of tenure.—Suit for possession.—Registration under Beng Act VII of 1876.—Quære.—Whether, in a suit founded upon possession alone, or in which the relief sought depends solely upon possession, registration under Bengal Act VII of 1876 ought not to be treated as prima facie evidence of actual possession at the date when the registration was effected. RAM BUSHAN MAHTO v. JEBLI MAHTO . I. L. R., 8 Calc., 853

13. ———— Decision of Collector.—Beng Act VII of 1876, s. 55.—Per GARTH, C J.—Semble.—That section 55 of Bengal Act VII, of 1876 constitutes the Collector a competent Court under particular circumstances for determining as between two disputants the question of possession, and his recorded decision upon that question in the register might be evidence of the fact of possession as between those two parties. Ram Bushan Mahto v. Jebli Mahto, I L. R., 8 Calc., 853, explained. SARASWATI DAS v. DEANPAT SINGH [I. L. R., 9 Calc., 431: 12 C. L. R., 12]

14. ———— Finding as to possession.—Mamlatdar.—Magistrate.—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 530.—Irregularity in taking possession—A Mamlatdar's finding as to the point of actual possession is not conclusive. A Magistrate's finding is conclusive under section 530 of Act X of 1872. LILLU v. ANNAJI PARASHRAM [I. L. R., 5 Bom., 387]

15. ———— Dispute as to possession between purchaser from heir and grantees from widows.—Effect of decision of Magistrate as to possession—In a former suit appellant sought as purchaser from the heir to a former proprietor, to establish her mokurrari right to certain lands as against the grantees from the widows of such proprietor, upon the death of the last surviving widow. She obtained a decree establishing such right, and, on proceeding to take out execution, was opposed by the respondents, who claimed the lands as being a putni tenure which had been sold by auction for arrears of rent due by B. S, the former putnidar, and which had been purchased by K. B and H. B, who had granted a dur-putni of the same to the respondents, in 1849. In 1841, there was a proceeding before the Magistrate as between the grantees of the dur-mokurrari right under the widows and B. S, the putnidar, the result of which investigation was that the Magistrate quieted the former in possession as dur-mokurrari-dars under the widows, and ordered the putnidar to institute a suit in the Civil Court to enforce his claim, which suit was never brought. The claim of the respondents was tried as a regular suit between the objectors (respondents) as plaintiffs and the decree-holder (appellant) as defendant, and was decided in favour of the respondents in the lower Courts. On appeal to the Privy Council, their Lordships held that the proceeding in 1841 was conclusive of the present case, as showing that the actual possession then was in the grantees of the widows, that it was in the highest degree improbable that they, having established their possessory right against B. S., would, without a struggle, have allowed themselves to be turned out of possession by their relatives as purchasers of the same B. S.'s right, that the possession of the grantees was obtained and continued under the widow's title, and was referable solely to the title which was now vested in the appellant, and that the right of the appellant should in no wise be affected by the acquisition of the putni title in 1849. *SHEEROOCHOMAREE DEBIA v. 29. ———— Limitation.—Unoccupied and uncultivated land.—Where land, the right to which is disputed, has been uninhabited and uncultivated, and no acts of ownership by any person can be proved to have been exercised over it, it is often necessary, for the purpose of deciding the question of limitation, to rely upon slight evidence of possession, and sometimes possession of the adjoining land, coupled with evidence of title, such as grants of leases, and the Courts are justified in presuming, under such circumstances, that the party who has the title has also the possession. But where the land has been occupied, it is generally proper, for purposes of limitation, to deal with the question of possession as distinct from the question of title, for while the title may be in one person, a twelve years' possession may have barred that title. MOHIMA CHUNDER DEY SIRCAR v. 11 W. R., 378

34. ———— Onus of proof.—In a suit for possession of property the plaintiff relied on his previous twelve years' possession, and gave no further evidence of his title. Held that a previous possession for twelve years of the property sought to be recovered did not dispense with the necessity which lay on the plaintiff to prove his title to that property. He is not on that fact alone entitled to be replaced in possession of the property without regard to any right which may be alleged by the defendant. LAKHI KUMAR v. RAM DUTT CHOWDHRY

36. ———— Onus of proof.—Suit for possession.—Where a plaintiff seeks to recover possession upon a title recently acquired, he is not invariably required to prove the origin of his vendor's title. Long and undisturbed possession on the part of the vendor, when positive evidence of title cannot be had, may in many cases constitute proof of title. In a suit to recover immovable property in the possession of the defendant, a plaintiff cannot ordinarily succeed merely by showing that the title has accrued to him. JOYKISHEN MOOKERJEE v. 37. ———— Limitation Act, 1859, s. 15 —Wrong-doer.—In considering the subject of possession as creating title, irrespective of section 15 of Act XIV of 1859,—Held that possession for a period of sixty years and upwards is sufficient to create a title in the possessor which no one in the world can question or repudiate; that adverse possession for any period sufficient under the Limitation Act is itself a title, even against the rightful owner himself, that prior possession, however short, is itself a title against a mere wrong-doer. ENAMTOOLLAH CHOWDHRY v. 38. ————— Lost records.—Proof of long possession.—The plaintiff claimed a right of pre-emption as safee-sharikh, or partner in the thing sold. The Court of first instance gave him a decree on the ground of long possession as proprietor. The lower Appellate Court reversed the decision on the ground that the plaintiff's title depended on a deed of purchase, which it was admitted had been set aside in a former suit in 1855, and that the plaintiff had failed to show that the decision in that suit had been reversed. The plaintiff proved that he had preferred an appeal from that decision, and alleged that it had been overruled; but there was no proof of the result of the appeal, as the records of that suit had been burnt in the Mutiny. Held on appeal to the High Court that, under the circumstances, proof of long possession as proprietor was sufficient. TURANI SINGH v. DURGABAI. 4 B. L. R., Ap., 21

39. ————— Undisturbed possession.—Held, on the evidence in the case, that defendants' long possession was confirmatory of their title based on a mortgage-bond of old date, and that plaintiff's suit for possession was rightly dismissed. DEVAJI GAYAJI v. GODABHAI GODBHAI

40. ————— Limitation.—Act XIV of 1859, s. 15—Dispossession.—In a suit for recovery of possession of certain brahmattar land, of which the defendant had dispossessed the plaintiffs by virtue of an award passed under section 15, Act XIV of 1859, declaring his right by purchase, the defence set up was that the deed of purchase was a forgery, and that the suit was barred by lapse of time. Held that, although the plaintiffs failed to prove their title-deeds, yet their title was sufficiently established by oral evidence of long possession prior to their dispossession two or three years previous to suit RAM CHANDRA CHOWDERY v. BRAJANATH SARMA. . . . 3 B. L. R., Ap., 109

41. ————— Long possession.—Limitation Act, IX of 1871, s. 29—Limitation Act, XII of 1859.—Bom. Reg. V of 1827, s. 1.—Prescription.—Adverse possession.—Some lands in the village of Shrasgam in the Puna Collectorate, commonly called "Kholhati Bawas Inam," originally belonged to His Highness Scindia. Plaintiff's family were proved to have been in actual possession of them from 1841 to 1854, and in constructive possession during their attachment by the Inam Commission from 1854 to 1863, when, by a mistake in carrying out the orders of the British Government, the lands passed into the possession of Scindia, and remained with His Highness till 1872, in which year the British Government, by exchange of lands, came into possession. In a suit brought on 29th July 1872,—Held that the plaintiff's possession, not extending over thirty years, gave him no proprietary title under section 1 of Regulation V of 1827, which as a law of positive prescription, was not repealed by Act XIV of 1859. Under the former Limitation Act, twelve years' adverse possession barred the suit without extinguishing the title so that if a proprietor who had been out of possession for more than twelve years happened to regain it, the person who had been in adverse possession must fail in any suit to eject the proprietor, unless he sued within six months under section 15 of the Act. The effect of Act IX of 1871, section 29, however, is not merely to bar the remedy, but to extinguish the title of the original proprietor after twelve years of a possession adverse to him. RAMBHAT AGNIHOTRI v. COLLECTOR OF PUNA

42. ————— Mirasidars.—Long possession.—Local nam and custom.—Sanad.—Where a plaintiff claimed to hold certain lands in miras and under a right of perpetual cultivation by the custom of the country, and sought to recover the lands from the defendant, who claimed as purchaser, at a Court sale, of the right, title, and interest of the mamdar of the said lands, and the lower Court dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiff had failed to prove any right of perpetual cultivation, the District Court, on appeal, observing that no term of occupation as a tenant of inam land would confer a right of perpetual cultivation, and that nothing short of a regular sanad would confer on the plaintiff his alleged right in the lands, the High Court on special appeal reversed the decrees of the Courts below, and remanded the case for a new trial on the point whether the plaintiff as a mirasidar or by local usage in virtue of his long possession and uniformity of payment of rent or assessment or otherwise, previously to the Court sale to defendant, had acquired the right to hold the lands in perpetuity on payment of a fixed or other rent ascertainable by local usage. BABAJI v. NARAYAN

43 ————— Long possession, as evidence of title—Pottah found to be forged.—Permanent tenure.—Service tenure.—Presumption of title.—The plaintiff purchased a miras talook at a sale in execution of a decree obtained against the talookdar for arrears of rent of the talook, and then sued to recover possession of certain lands held by the defendants within the talook. The defence was that the lands in question were held by the defendants under a pottah which had been granted to their ancestor in 1733 by the then talookdars in respect of certain services to be performed by the grantees and their descendants. The Court of first instance found that the pottah was genuine, and dismissed the plaintiff's suit. On appeal, the Subordinate Judge found that the pottah was a forgery, and that although the lands had been granted to the defendants' ancestor in respect of services, yet the plaintiff was entitled to khas possession, as he did not require the services to be performed. He therefore decreed the plaintiff's claim. Held that the decree was right, for having found that the pottah on which the defendants chiefly relied was a forgery, the Subordinate Judge was not bound, as a matter of law, to presume that the tenuro

45. ——— Buildings on land occupied under zemindars without evidence of grant.—Evidence of reservation of interest—Where there was no evidence of any grant, and the owner of buildings had been for upwards of twelve years in possession of the plots of land on which the buildings were situated without in any way paying rent to or acknowledging the title of the zemindars, he was prima facie entitled to the sites, and the mere fact that the sites were situated within the area of a permanently-settled mehal did not justify the presumption that the zemindars reserved to themselves reversionary right in the sites. GUR PARSHAD v. UMRAO SINGH

[7 N. W., 218]

3. NATURE OF POSSESSION.

46. ——— Possession under deed afterwards set aside as fraudulent.—Effect of decree setting it aside.—Where a person was in actual possession of property from the time when a deed conveyed it to him, a decision which declared that deed to be fraudulent did not have the effect of putting another claimant in possession, nor could possession be considered as having ceased in consequence of the decree, unless the holder were actually dispossessed under it, for the fact of the decree did not prevent the statute of limitation from running, and, in the particular case under consideration, the decree in question was still under appeal. MUKBOOL ALI v. WAJED HOSSEIN

. . . 25 W. R., 249

47. ——— Possession in execution of decree.—Possession otherwise than by Court.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss 230, 264.—Act VIII of 1859, section 230, did not limit the applicant to any particular manner of obtaining possession; and section 264 contained nothing to prevent the purchaser at an execution sale from obtaining possession if he could without the assistance of the Court. OBHOYA CHURN DEY v. RAJENDRO COOMAR GHOSE

[22 W. R., 406]

48. ——— Possession without executing decree for possession—So long as a plaintiff obtains possession after a decree establishing his right to it, it is immaterial for the purpose of limitation whether he obtained it by executing his decree, or whether possession was yielded to him. If

49. ——— Possession irregularly taken—Possession actually taken by a person having a right to it is not the less effective, as perfecting his title, by reason of an irregularity in taking it. Subsequent ouster will give rise to a new cause of action. LILLU v. ANNAJI PARASHRAM

50. ——— Possession in execution of decree.—Proclamation of sale.—Suit for possession—Limitation—In a suit for possession of certain lands purchased by plaintiff at a sale in execution of a decree of the Sudder Ameen's Court, the lower Court held that "possession by proclamation of sale, through the Sudder Ameen's Court, was possession through the Court," and that the suit being brought within twelve years of that proclamation was in time. Held on appeal that such imaginary possession was no possession at all, and that the suit was barred by limitation. JOWHER ALY v. RAM CHAND

51. ——— Proclamation of sale.—Possession of auction-purchaser—The possession of an auction-purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree runs from the date of delivery, as provided by section 246, Act VIII of 1859,—i.e., by publication of sale certificate and proclamation by beat of drum,—and not from the date of his possession. ASUDOLAH v. 59. ————— Formal possession—Fresh period of limitation.—Act VIII of 1859, s. 224.—Delivery of possession by going through the process prescribed by section 224 of Act VIII of 1859 is the only way in which the decree of the Court awarding possession to the plaintiff can be enforced, and as, in contemplation of law, both parties must be considered as being present at the time when the delivery is made, such delivery must, as against the defendant, be deemed equivalent to actual possession. As against third parties such symbolical possession is of no avail, because they are not parties to the proceedings. But if the defendant subsequently dispossesses the plaintiff by receiving the rent and profits, the plaintiff will have twelve years from such dispossession to bring another suit. *JUGGUBUNDHU MUKERJEE v. 60. ————— Formal possession—Transfer of possession.—Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859), ss. 223, 224—In a suit for possession, it appeared that in 1863 the plaintiff had sued some of the present defendants for khas possession of the same land. In that suit the defendants pleaded that they were tenants of the plaintiff and entitled to hold under a pottah, which they failed to prove, and the plaintiff obtained a decree. Three years afterwards the plaintiff was put into formal possession by the Court under section 224 of Act VIII of 1859, instead of under section 223. Held that, as the plaintiff was put in possession under his decree by the officer of the Court, the form in which execution was given was immaterial. The formal possession given by a Civil Court under an execution operates, in point of law and fact, as between the parties, as a complete transfer of possession from the one party to the other. LOKESUR KOER v. OBHOY NUND ROY I. L. R., 5 Calc., 331

62. ————— Symbolical possession—Limitation—Fresh cause of action.—Symbolical possession given under a decree does not, as against third parties, entitle the person to whom such possession has been given to count a fresh period of limitation from the date of the possession. A person who prefers a claim to property attached under a decree, but whose claim is disallowed, is not a party to the decree; and the decree-holder, on obtaining symbolical possession, will not be entitled to count a fresh period of limitation as against him. *DOYANIDHI PANDA v. 108. ————— Adverse possession.—Possession of tenant paying rent to stranger.—In December 1853 certain lands were let by the plaintiff to B under a kabulhat, by the terms of which the lease expired in December 1863. In March 1875, less than twelve years from the expiration of such lease, the plaintiff brought a suit for possession against B and the talookdars of the estate of which the lands in dispute formed part. The latter alleged that the lakhiraj title of the plaintiff was invalid; that although no proceedings, as required by the Rent Law, had been taken to invalidate the plaintiff's title, they, the talookdars, had resumed possession of the land by receiving the rents from B from 1859, and that the suit was barred by reason of their possession since that date. Held that the suit was not barred, inasmuch as nothing had occurred to determine the tenancy which existed between the plaintiff and B, and that the possession of the latter was in law the plaintiff's possession. *PARBUTTI DASSI v. In a suit brought by R against the heirs of K to recover possession of the house, Held that K occupied the house as tenant-at-will of R; that such tenancy was, on the death of K, as of course, converted into an adverse occupation by the heirs of K, in the absence of proof of the intention of the parties to that effect, and in the absence of anything to show that R did not assent to the heirs of K continuing to hold on the same terms as K had done. *RADHABHAI v. In the meantime he had acquired possession of the estate under a farm from Government. Held that from the date of the decree R.'s possession became adverse possession as far as the vendors and their representatives were concerned, although he continued to hold possession of the estate as a farmer. *DHUNDI v. The plaintiff having been found to be out of possession, the lower Court dismissed the suit. The plant bore a stamp sufficient to cover a suit for recovery of possession. Held that, inasmuch as the effect of the refusal of the Collector to register the plaintiff's name under section 78 of the Land Registration Act (Bengal Act VII of 1876) was to prevent the plaintiff recovering the rent of the estate, and that such refusal was alleged in the plaint, the suit might be taken to be, in substance, a suit for recovery of possession, and ought not to have been dismissed. AMIR HOSSEIN v. 126. ————— Suit on sanad.—Evidence.—In a suit for recovery of possession of certain land which the plaintiff claimed under and by virtue of a sanad (grant) from the zemindar, and from which he had been dispossessed by the defendants, the lower Appellate Court held that the execution of the sanad was not satisfactorily proved, but that it was not a forgery, and that there was the corroborative evidence (such as the dakhilas produced before it) to prove the case of the plaintiff. Held that, when a claim is based upon a sanad, and the plaintiff fails to prove the execution of the sanad itself, he may prove his claim by other means. In a suit for mere possession it is unnecessary to state or prove a particular title. RASH BEHARI LAL SING v. NABATI PODDAR [3 B. L. R., A. C., 99 : 11 W. R., 465]

130. ————— Suit for declaration of right—Right to possession—Right of person with good title ousted by person who had none.—Plaintiff sued to establish his right to a dharmakartaship and to the hereditary office of pooja stanika in a pagoda. He alleged that he held the office of pooja stanika hereditarily, and that the dharmakartaship was assigned to him by the original dharmakartas by deed (No. I), but that he was afterwards forcibly dispossessed by defendants. Defendants denied plaintiff's hereditary right to the office of pooja stanika, and declared that he was removed from the dharmakartaship for neglecting his duties, and that they were appointed instead (by document No. IV). The District Judge gave judgment in favour of plaintiff. The defendants appealed. An issue was sent to the lower Court whether, assuming exhibit I to be revocable, did the persons who executed exhibit IV constitute the collective body entitled to revoke it. The lower Court found this issue in the negative. Held (by the High Court) that this was not properly a suit for a declaration. The object of the suit and the effect of the declaration would have been to put the plaintiff in possession of that from which he had been ousted, that as to the claim to the dharmakartaship, document I showed that the plaintiff was a mere appointee as agent, and that, as the authority given by it was not revoked by IV, the case was that of one ousted from a possession which he held upon a good title by those who had shown none, that on the principle of such cases as Asher v. Whitlock, L. R., 1 Q. B., 1, the plaintiff had a right to the restoration of that possession. NARAYANASAMI MUDALI v. KUMARASAMI GURUKKAL 7 Mad., 267

131. ————— Proof of joint possession—In a suit to recover possession it was proved that plaintiffs had purchased shares in a joint property and had held possession. The lower Appellate Court, thinking they had done so separately, without being at the time aware of their joint rights, held that it could not decree to them the joint possession sought for. Held that it matters not what position plaintiffs considered themselves to have occupied originally whilst in possession. If they can establish their right, they are entitled to recover possession, whether that possession were originally joint or separate. RAJBULLUB SHAMMEE v. WARIS MAHOMED 8 W. R., 450

Julkur—A originally owned two zemindaris between which lay a bil, or marsh, of which he also owned the fisheries. One of the zemindaris was sold and purchased by B, but the bil fisheries still continued with the remaining zemindari held by A. After the sale, certain lands reclaimed from the bil were for some years held by B as part of his purchased zemindari. A instituted a summary suit under Act IV of 1840, and was by an order of the Magistrate put in possession of these lands. B brought a regular suit against A to recover the lands and set aside his order. Held (reversing the decisions of the Courts below) that it was necessary for B to show a better title to the land than A could produce. It was not enough for him to prove possession anterior to the Magistrate's order under Act IV of 1840. The presumption was that the land of the bil belonged to A, who had admittedly owned both estates before, and had retained the fisheries of the bil after the auction sale. B ought to have shown when and how, if at all, the right to the fisheries and the right to the soil were severed. *BARADA KANT ROY v. finding that the judgment-debtor was in actual possession of the hat, made an order maintaining him in such possession until ousted by a Civil Court. Held (setting aside that order) that the Magistrate had no power, under section 530 of the Criminal Procedure Code, to direct the judgment-debtor to be retained in possession until ousted by a Civil Court, but was bound to see that the possession, as given by the Nazir, was maintained, leaving it to the debtor to substantiate his claim as shebait in a Civil Court. In a dispute between the wife of a lunatic and the manager of his estate with regard to the possession of certain property, the Magistrate attached the property under section 531 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, on the ground that he was unable to satisfy himself as to who was in possession. It had been proved before him that the wife was in actual possession, but there was a doubt as to whether she was not in possession merely as the agent of her husband. Held that section 530 has only to do with actual possession, and that the Magistrate should have decided that the wife was in possession. IN THE MATTER OF JUGGODESHABY CHOWDHRAIN. . . . 3 C. —Suit for exclusive possession.—The Magistrate had, on the complaint of the defendant, passed an order, under section 320 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, forbidding the plaintiff to retain possession of a piece of land to the exclusion of the public until he had obtained the decision of a competent Court adjudging him to be entitled to such exclusive possession. The plaintiff accordingly brought his suit in the Munsif's Court to recover possession of the land. The Munsif gave him a decree for exclusive possession of the land. On appeal, the Judge held that the Munsif had no jurisdiction to try the question whether the public had a right of way over the land. The Judge's decision was reversed on special appeal, and the case remanded to the Judge to try the issue whether the plaintiff was entitled to the exclusive use of the land. MAHES CHANDRA MOOKERJEE v. 3. ————— Power to sue given to an agent, Extent of.—Vakil, Reasonable remuneration to, under such power.—A mere power to sue does not authorise an agent to do more than employ a vakil on the terms of paying him a reasonable remuneration. KESHAV BAPUJI v. NARAYAN SHAMRAY [I. L. R., 10 Bom., 18

4. ————— Authority to enter into special agreement with vakil—Agreement to remunerate according to proportion recovered.—The defendant, on behalf of her minor son, gave to S. M. a power of attorney by which she authorised S. M., "for her and in her name and on her behalf to appear in or sue or defend . . . any suit, appeal, or special appeal, . . . and to act in all such proceedings in any way in which she might, if present, be permitted or called on to act" Held that the above power did not authorise S. M. to enter into a special agreement with a vakil, under which the vakil (in an appeal which he was employed to conduct for the defendant on behalf of her minor son) was to receive for his services a minimum reward of Rs. 4,000, and, in cases of success, a reward proportional to the amount awarded by the Appellate Court. *RAY SAHEB V. upon bonds, and to sign their names or his name on their behalf, and to pledge the whole or any part of the estate by such bonds, the attorney executed a bond on behalf of three of the proprietors. Held that under the power of attorney the manager was not authorised to execute a bond on behalf of any one or more of the proprietors making him or them responsible for the whole money borrowed to the exclusion of the rest. Held, further, that in a suit upon a bond so executed, the plaintiffs were not entitled to rely upon the general power which the manager might have, as the manager's authority must be considered as strictly confined to the terms of the power of attorney. BUDH SINGH DUDHURIA v. DENENDRA NATH SANCUL 11 C. L. R., 323

6. ————— Mooktearnamah.—Execution of bond to secure barred debt.—Contract Act, s. 25—A mooktearnamah empowering the mooktear to execute bonds in lieu of former debts does not authorise the mooktear to execute a bond to secure a debt already barred by limitation. Where, however, a suit is brought upon a bond executed to secure a former debt, it must be shown by the person alleging it that such debt was barred. HUBBAL SIKUL v. RAM GOTI DEY ROY 11 C. L. R., 581

7. ————— Mooktearnamah.—Authority of agent.—Power to make gift.—A mooktearnamah merely gave the mooktear power to grant tecca ijara leases and, when advisable, to sell, mortgage, and make gift of the whole or portion of the property of the principal. Held that the mooktear had no power to create a permanent tenure. The power of making a gift given by the mooktearnamah authorised the mooktear formally to execute a deed of gift only when the disposing power had been exercised by the principal. TYEBUNNESSA v. KANIZ FATIMA 13 C. L. R., 247

8. ————— Power to "sell, endorse, and assign" negotiable securities.—The payee of promissory notes of the East India Company, by a power-of-attorney, authorised his agents at Calcutta to "sell, endorse, and assign" the notes. These notes were transferable by endorsement payable to bearer. The agents, in their character of private bankers, borrowed money of the Bank of Bengal, offering, as security, these promissory notes. The Bank made the advance, and the agents endorsed the notes, such endorsement purporting to be as attorney for their principal, and deposited them with the Bank, by way of collateral security for their personal liability, at the same time authorising the Bank, in default of payment, to sell the notes in reimbursement of the advances. The agents afterwards became insolvent, and default having been made in payment, the Bank sold the notes and realised the amount of their loan. Held that the endorsement of the notes by the agents of the payee to the Bank was within the scope of the authority given to them by the power of attorney, and that the payee could not recover in detinue against the Bank. The rule laid down in the case of Gill v. Cubitt, 3 B. & C., 466, and Down v. Halling, 4 B. & C., 330,

9. ————— Power to sell or mortgage.—Under a power-of-attorney containing a clause empowering A. to sell or mortgage the donor's property for the payment of his debts, A. executed a simple money-bond to one of the donor's creditors, for payment of the sum due and interest. Held that the act was extra vires, and did not bind the donor. *POORNA CHUNDER SEN v. 10. ————— Principal and agent.—"Purchase, sell, endorse, and transfer"—Meaning of "Power to sell."—N. & Co. having a joint and several power-of-attorney from the plaintiff, authorising them "to purchase, sell, endorse, and transfer for the plaintiff, and in the plaintiff's name and on the plaintiff's behalf," all shares standing in his name in the books of any public company or society, entered into a contract embodied in bought and sold notes, agreeing to sell by order and on account of N. & Co., to the defendant, twenty-five Muir Mill Cotton shares, and agreeing to buy, by order and for account of N. & Co., from the defendant, twenty-five Muir Mill Cotton shares in three months' time at an advanced rate; the bought and sold notes bearing the same date and being one transaction. The transfer deeds were signed by a partner in the firm of N. & Co. as attorney for the plaintiff, and N. & Co. received the purchase-money of the shares. Previous to the time fixed for the sale of twenty-five Muir-Mill Cotton shares by the defendant to N. & Co., the latter became insolvent. The plaintiff then brought a suit to recover the shares from the defendant. Held by GARTH, C. J., that the transaction between N. & Co. and the defendant was not justified by the power-of-attorney, the contract not having been entered into "for and on behalf and in the name of the plaintiff" within the meaning of the power, and that the transaction was either an actual loan, or a transaction in the nature of a loan, for the purpose of raising money. Per WILSON, J., that the defendant took no title to the shares for two reasons, viz : (i) because a power to sell is only a power to sell in the ordinary course of business,—e., for a money price, (ii) because it was the duty of the defendant, seeing that the shares were sold to him under a power, to see that he paid the price to the plaintiff or his attorney. JUMNA DOSS v. ECKFORD I. L. R., 9 Calc., 1

11. ————— Meaning of the word "negotiate" with reference to Government securities.—W. gave to A. and B. a power-of-attorney authorising them jointly and severally to "negotiate, make sale, dispose of, assign and transfer," amongst other things, certain Government securities standing in his name. B. pledged the securities for an advance of Rs. 19,000, and at the same time executed a promissory note for the amount of the loan, the promissory note being signed "B. as attorney for W." In a suit by W. to recover the Government securities,—Held, in the Court below, that the power-of-attorney was sufficiently wide to cover the transaction; that the transaction was a fraud on the part of B., but that the transferee (the defendant) had no notice of the fraud, and therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to succeed. Held, on appeal, per WHITE, J.—(i) That the words of the power were to be read disjunctively, and the powers conveyed by the words were to be treated as joint and several; (ii) that even supposing the word "negotiate" to be applicable to transactions with Government securities (which was doubtful), and that such Government securities stood in the same position as ordinary commercial notes, the word "negotiate" did not authorise B. to do more than put the Government securities in the market, or to put them in circulation in the ordinary way in which such a transaction takes place in the market, and if necessary to endorse them in the name of W.; (iii) that the loan, which was the principal transaction, being irrecoverable from W., because unauthorised, the defendant could not retain the Government securities, which were deposited as security for the loan, he not having taken the precaution to ascertain whether B. had authority to enter into the transaction. Per GARTH, C. J.—That although, on the authority of The Bank of Bengal v. Fagan, 5 Moore's I. A., 27, a power to negotiate Government securities would authorise the negotiation of Government securities by way of pledge, yet W. was entitled to a decree, on the ground that A. and B. had no power, under the power-of-attorney, to borrow money in the name of W.; and that, therefore, the defendant was not entitled to retain the security given for the advance (viz, the Government promissory note). WATSON v. JONMENJOY COONDoo . I. L. R., 8 Calc., 934

On appeal to the Privy Council,—Held that, with regard to the general objects of the power, B. had under it no authority to pledge, and that the lender of the money acquired no title to the note as against W. The power-of-attorney was not in the same form as that in the Bank of Bengal v. Macleod, 5 Moore's I. A., 1, and Bank of Bengal v. Fagan, 5 Moore's I. A., 27, not containing, in express words, power to indorse. Had it done so, the question would have been whether there was anything to prevent it from being a power, in the discretion of the donee of it, to indorse the note, and convert it into one payable to bearer, whenever he thought fit to do so, for any purpose. It was not laid down in the judgment in those cases that the words used in a power-of-attorney, to express its objects, are always to be construed disjunctively, though they may be so construed; and there is no reason why a rule of construction, intended to aid in arriving at the meaning of the parties, should not be applied in construing a power-of-attorney as much as any other document. JONMENJOY COONDoo v. WATSON

12. ———— *Principal and agent—Bank manager acting as private agent.—Transaction for benefit of bank—A. being in uncontrolled management of the National Bank in Calcutta and purporting to act under a power-of-attorney intended to be given to him in his private capacity but addressed to him as “acting manager of the National Bank” by B., a constituent of the Bank, without drawing any cheque on B.’s account and simply by means of transferring in the books of the Bank Rs15,000 from B.’s deposit account with the Bank to the account of one C who was indebted to the National Bank, purported to make an advance of Rs15,000 from B to C, whereas, in fact, the real transaction amounted only to transferring the liability of C. to that extent from the Bank to B. Held that, so far as this transaction was concerned, A. could not divest himself of his character of Bank manager, and that acting as the agent of both parties he acted to the prejudice of B. and to the advantage of the Bank, and that there was in fact a breach of his duty to B to which the Bank was a party. Held, also, that A. was not able under the power-of-attorney to bind B by consenting to any dealings by the Bank or C. with goods in the Bank’s godowns which would prejudice B. BEER v. 9. ————— Application for decree on terms of agreement to compromise suit — Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 375.—After the hearing of the suit had begun, the plaintiffs and defendants came to an agreement by which they settled all the matters in dispute between them in the suit. The agreement was in writing, and dealt in one clause with the dispute, the subject-matter of the suit, and in a second clause, with another dispute of long standing between the parties, with which the suit had nothing to do. The plaintiffs subsequently objecting to consent to a decree being taken in terms of the first clause of the agreement, the defendants took out a rule nisi, calling on the plaintiffs to show cause why the agreement should not be recorded in Court, and why the Court should not pass a decree in accordance therewith, under the provisions of section 375 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The rule was argued on affidavits on either side, the plaintiffs objecting that, in any case, the matter could not be decided on affidavits, but evidence must be gone into. Held that in the circumstances of the case, no definite procedure having been enjoined by the Code, the matter might properly be decided on affidavits. RUTTONSING LALJI v. On attempting to obtain possession, the applicant was obstructed. He applied for removal of the obstruction to the Subordinate Judge, and submitted with his application the unregistered certificate. The Subordinate Judge rejected the application, on the ground that the certificate was not registered. The applicant then applied for a fresh certificate, which was refused. 37. ————— Failure to answer within the time limited.—Dismissal of suit.—Civil Procedure Code, Act XIV of 1882, Ch. X, ss. 121, 126, and 136.—The question as to whether the Courts below have exercised a proper discretion in dismissing a suit under section 136 of the Civil Procedure Code is one into which the High Court will not enter on special appeal. When interrogatories are delivered with the leave of the Court under section 121 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the Court orders such interrogatories to be answered within ten days under section 126, there is virtually an order passed under the provision of Chapter X of the Code; and consequently upon the party interrogated failing to comply with such order the Court has the power to pass an order under section 136. LALLA DABEE PERSHAD v SANTO PERSHAD . . . should be compelled to answer. Where an ex parte order is made in chambers giving leave to interrogate, the party ordered to answer has a right to come into Court to have the order set aside if the case is one in which interrogatories should not have been allowed. When an order for the administration of interrogatories is properly made, a party objecting to the interrogatories administered may, at his peril, omit to answer the interrogatories to which he objects; but the more prudent course is to file his affidavit in answer, stating in it his objections to answer such questions as he objects to. Where interrogatories are scandalous, or in any way an abuse of the process of the Court, the Court may interfere at any stage. 65. ———— Revival of suit.—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s 372—Plaint taken as petition to revive.—A suit was instituted by the trustee appointed under a will, against the executrix, for the purpose of having the trusts of the will carried into execution. A decree was made, and certain directions were given for the purpose of having a scheme settled, by which the trusts were to be carried out, but before the scheme was finally settled and approved, and while the proceedings were pending, the case was struck out of the board for want of prosecution. Subsequently, both the plaintiff and defendant died. The heirs of the plaintiff then instituted a suit against the Administrator General as representing the estate of the defendant for carrying the trusts into execution, and prayed that their suit might be considered as supplemental to the original one. Held that the original suit, though no longer upon the board, was capable of revival, and that if no person were living whose consent might be obtained, or to whom notice might be given, the Court might give leave without any such consent or notice, and that the proper course to pursue was to allow the plaintiffs to amend their plaint by putting it in the form of a petition under section 372 of the Civil Procedure Code, the defendant being at liberty to put in any answer which he might have done if the proceeding had been by petition in the first instance. Per PONTIFEX, J.—The words “pending the suit,” in section 372, relate to a suit in which no final order has been made.

1. ——— Permanently-settled estates in Sylhet.—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 14—Extension of Act—Section 14 of Act XXIII of 1861 was not applicable to permanently-settled estates in Sylhet, nor to estates in any district of Bengal, unless extended thereto ABDUL JABEL v. KHELATCHUNDER GHOSE

2. ——— Right and interest of co-sharer in estate in Sylhet.—Substitution of claimant for actual purchaser.—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 14.—The right and interest of a co-sharer in an estate in Sylhet being put up for sale in execution of a decree, the petitioner claimed the right of pre-emption under section 14, Act XXIII of 1861, and he was thereupon substituted for the actual purchaser.—Held that in such circumstances the Court executing a decree had no authority to substitute the claimant for the actual purchaser without the consent of the latter, and that a party claiming a share under the section cited was simply in the position of a party who, having a right of pre-emption, has observed the requisite formalities to enable him to assert the right, and must resort to a civil suit to obtain the benefit thereof. The orders of the lower Courts were set aside accordingly. ABDOOL JALEEL v. KALEE COOMAR DUTT

10. ——— Lease in perpetuity.—Transfer other than sale.—Pre-emption applies only to sales. A lease in perpetuity, with a rent (however small) reserved is not a sale, and cannot therefore be the subject of pre-emption. MOOROO LY RAM v. HURBE RAM

11. ——— Transfer by lease.—Alienation or transfer of proprietary right—Held that a provision in the wajib-ul-urz securing a right of pre-emption to the sharers in cases of sale or mortgage was not applicable to transfer by lease, which was not such an alienation as was contemplated by the terms of the wajib-ul-urz,—viz., alienation or transfer of proprietary right. *MANICK CHAND v. 12. ——— Transfer to manager on trust.—Alienation giving right to pre-emption—Where shares in a mouzah were by arrangement between the parties made over to a manager upon trust to pay part of the profits to the debtors of the transferors, and the residue of the profits to the transferors, who bound themselves not to alienate until the debts were paid,—Held that it was not such alienation as would confer on the plaintiff a right of pre-emption under the wajib-ul-urz. OUTAR SINGH v. ABLAKHER KOONWER

14. ——— Exchange of property.—Transfer giving right of pre-emption—Consideration—A share in a mouzah, together with the dwelling-house of the proprietor, was exchanged for a share and dwelling-house in another mouzah. Held that the transaction being an exchange of property for property was a sale, and that the right to purchase the land, but not the house, was claimable by a co-sharer by right of pre-emption. The consideration payable by the pre-emptor is the estimated value of the property given in exchange, and not that of the property claimed. SEWA RAM v RISAL CHOWDHRY [1 Agra, 144]

15. ——— Sale and re-sale before confirmation.—Transfer raising right of pre-emption—Where the decree-holder purchased the rights of his judgment-debtors sold at auction in satisfaction of his own decree, but, having received the amount of the decree, re-sold the property to the judgment-debtors before the confirmation of the sale,—Held that the transaction did not amount to an alienation such as would give a right to the co-sharers of the debtors to exercise the right of pre-emption under the terms of the wajib-ul-urz. MAHOMED RAZA KHAN v. JAWAHIR SINGH 2 Agra, 1

16. ——— Transfer under compromise and decree thereon to person claiming pre-emption.—Wajib-ul-urz—An appeal having been preferred from a decree in a suit for pre-emption based on the wajib-ul-urz of a village, the parties to the suit entered into a compromise whereby the plaintiff-pre-emptor relinquished his claim to a part of the property in dispute in favour of the defendants-vendees, and the latter admitted his claim with respect of the remainder of the property. Upon this compromise a decree was passed. Subsequently a co-sharer in the village where the property was situate brought a suit for pre-emption, upon the contention that the compromise and the decree passed thereon amounted to a transfer to the plaintiff in the former suit, within the meaning of the wajib-ul-urz. Held that the suit was not maintainable. HANUMAN RAI v. UDIT NARAIN RAI I. L. R., 7 All., 917

17. ——— Transfer by compromise.—Wajib-ul-urz—"Transfer"—"Sale"—On the 1st September 1881 L. and R. entered into an agreement (which was duly registered) with B that in consideration of their bringing a suit for recovery of a 12-annas share in a village which B claimed by right of inheritance against G, they should receive a moiety of the share. L. and R. found funds for the prosecution of two suits in respect of the share, which on the 5th April 1882 were compromised, B. getting 1 anna and 3 pies out of the 12 annas originally claimed by her. In that compromise B. stated as follows: "I make over 1 anna to L. and R. my partners, in lieu of the prosecution of the two cases. I, the plaintiff, shall remain in possession of the remaining 3 pies." Meanwhile, on the 3rd September 1881, G. had sold 3 annas out of the 12 annas share to M. On the 3rd April 1883,

M brought a suit against L and R., claiming the right of pre-emption in respect of the 1 anna which they had acquired from B. on the allegation that the transfer of the share had taken place on the 5th April 1882. This claim was based on the wajib-ul-urz of the village, which gave a right of pre-emption to the co-sharers of any sharer wishing to "transfer" his share. Held that the compromise of the 5th April 1882 was only a re-adjustment of the amount of the interest in the share between B and L and R.; that the real transfer to L and R was given effect to on the 1st September 1881, and that this having been prior to the acquisition by M of any right in the village, he was not a co-sharer at the time of the transfer, and that he had consequently no right as against L. and R by way of claim for pre-emption. LAOHMT NARAIN v. MANOG DAT I. L. R., 7 All., 291

2. RIGHT OF PRE-EMPTION.

18. ——— Sale in execution of decree.—Act XXIII of 1861, s 14—Share sold in execution of decree—A suit by a person claiming possession by right of pre-emption, under the provisions of section 14 of Act XXIII of 1861, of a share sold in the execution of a decree was held to be premature and unmaintainable. The claimant should have sued to set aside the order of the Court confirming the sale in favour of the auction-purchaser, and to have himself declared entitled to the pre-emption of the property and to be substituted for the auction-purchaser as its purchaser. SHIB SAHAI v THIKA RAM [7 N. 19. ——— Property subject to conditional sale.—Time for making claim—A party alleging a right of pre-emption in respect of property which is the subject of a conditional sale, is bound to make his claim immediately on the expiry of the year of grace mentioned in the notice of foreclosure. AMEER ALI v. BHABO SOONDUREE DEBIA [6 W. R., 116]

20 ——— Rights and interests of mortgagee.—Share of undivided immoveable property.—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s 310.—The provisions of section 310 of Act X of 1877 are not applicable in a case where the property sold is not a share of undivided immoveable property, but the rights and interests of a mortgagee in such a share. JAIRAM DAS v BENI PRASAD I. L. R., 3 All., 15

21 ——— Co-sharer.—Sale in execution of share in immoveable property.—Stranger.—Highest bidder—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s 310.—A co-sharer in undivided immoveable property of which a share is sold in the execution of a decree does not, under section 310 of Act X of 1877, acquire the right of pre-emption as against a stranger to whom such share has been knocked down, by merely asserting such right at the time of sale and fulfilling the conditions of sale required by sections 306 and 307 of that Act. [I. L. R., 2 All., 850]

22. — Sale in execution of share in immoveable property—Manner of claiming pre-emption.—Highest bidder.—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 310.—The requirements of section 310 of Act X of 1877 are not satisfied by the co-sharer preferring his claim to the right of pre-emption before the property is knocked down, and offering to pay a sum equal to that bid by the highest bidder. That section contemplates a distinct bid by the co-sharer in the ordinary manner of offering bids. Tej Singh v. Gobind Singh, I. L. R., 2 All., 850, followed HIRA v. UNAS ALI KHAN. I. L. 23. — Holder of puttidari estate—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 14.—A person holding a share in a puttidari estate as mortgagee was not in a position which gave him a right of pre-emption, under the provisions of section 14 of Act XXIII of 1861, in respect of a share in the estate sold in execution of a decree; nor does he obtain such a position because a share in the estate has been put up for sale and knocked down to him. DWARKA PARSAD v. RAM AUTAR SUKUL. 7 N. W., 281

24. — Right against stranger—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 14.—A share in the mouzah having been put up for sale in the execution of a decree and knocked down to the defendant, a stranger, the plaintiff, a co-sharer of the share, was held to be entitled, under the provisions of section 14 of Act XXIII of 1861, to take the share. RAM AUTAR v. SHEO DUTT. 6 N. W., 243

25. — Puttidari estate.—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 14.—Sale of land for arrears of revenue.—Act XVIII of 1873, s. 177—Act XIX of 1873, s. 188.—The provisions of section 14 of Act XXIII of 1861 were not applicable, where the land was sold in execution of a decree of a Revenue Court. Held, on the assumption that, where land is sold in execution of such a decree, a claim to the right of pre-emption can be preferred under the provisions of section 177 of Act XVIII of 1873 and section 188 of Act XIX of 1873, that such claim can only be preferred where the land is a putti of a mehal, not where it is part only of a putti of a mahal.—Semble, that, where land which is a putti of a mehal is sold in execution of such a decree, a claim to the right of pre-emption can be preferred under the provisions of section 177 of Act XVIII of 1873, and section 188 of Act XIX of 1873.

26. — Requisite of valid claim.—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 14.—Conditions required by Mahomedan law.—If a person claiming pre-emption under the provisions of section 14 of Act XXIII of 1861 fulfilled the conditions of sale respecting the deposit of the purchase-money, the sale could not be held void merely by the failure of the person to whose bid the property was knocked down also to complete the deposit. All that the claimant was bound to do was to establish that he was a puttidari within the meaning of the section in the estate of which the property sold formed part, and that he had fulfilled the conditions of sale. If he established this the sale should be confirmed in his favour, unless some irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale was shown which would justify the setting aside of the sale. The conditions of pre-emption under the Mahomedan law did not apply to a claim brought under the section. DABEE PERSHAD v. BISHESHUR PERSHAD SINGH

27. — Wajib-ul-urz, Claim under.—Conditions required by Mahomedan law.—Held that the person in whose favour a preferential right of purchase is stipulated for, by the terms of the wajib-ul-urz, is entitled to a decree if he comes forward and claims his right, without unreasonable delay, after he hears that a sale has been made without any tender to him, although he may not have proved specially that he has fulfilled all the conditions required in the case of a claim of pre-emption under the Mahomedan law of Shuffa. KOULA PUT v. MAHARAJ DOBBEY. 1 Agra, 278

28. — Act XXIII of 1861, s. 14.—Sale of puttidari estate in execution of decree.—Act I of 1841, s. 2.—Right of co-sharer.—It was incumbent on an officer conducting a sale in execution of decree, of land which was a share of a puttidari estate paying revenue to Government, as defined in section 2 of Act I of 1841, to take notice of a claim made by a person under the provisions of section 14 of Act XXIII of 1861, and to receive the purchase-money as a fulfilment of the conditions of the sale, subject to any question which might be raised by any party interested in the sale as to the claimant's title to advance the claim. When the whole of the purchase-money has been paid by the claimant within due time, the Court executing the decree, unless it is satisfied that he has no right to advance the claim, cannot treat the payment by him as a nullity, but must accept it as a fulfilment of the conditions of the sale respecting the purchase-money, and the sale is not defeasible by the failure of the bidder to complete the deposit of the purchase-money. The sale to the claimant cannot become absolute until it has been confirmed, and until it has become absolute he cannot maintain a suit for possession. If the claimant has fulfilled the conditions of sale, and his right is clear, the Court executing the decree is bound to give effect to the right. TASUDUK ALI v. MUKSUD ALI. 6 N. W., 272

29. — Sale in execution of decree.—During the minority of two out of four brothers an ikarnama was entered into between them to the effect that no separation was to take place without the consent of all, and that if one of them separated without such consent he was to forfeit his share of the family property, and that if any one wished to dispose of his share he was to give his brothers the preference. One F purchased at a private sale the share of M, one of the brothers. On this two of the brothers, A and I, brought a suit against F to set aside the sale as contrary to the terms of the ikramana, and urged their claim to pre-emption. The suit was decreed with a stipulation that the purchase-money should be paid back. This not having been done, F sued M, got a decree, and in execution put up for sale M's rights and interests in the family estate, bought them himself, and took possession. The present suit is by A and I to recover possession on the ground that M had no rights and interests left which could be sold in execution. Held that as M had never separated, his share had not been forfeited, and that the only other privilege left to the plaintiffs under the ikra—viz,—pre-emption, could not be exercised, inasmuch as M had not sold his share, the sale having been the act of the Court. FARZAT ALI v. ASHOOTOSH ROY SINGH

30. ———— Right of auction-purchaser as against party whose claim to pre-emption is allowed—The auction-purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree of a share in a puttdari estate seeking to establish his right as against a person whose claim to the right of pre-emption under the provisions of section 14, Act XXIII of 1861, has been allowed, and in whose favour the sale has been confirmed, cannot maintain a suit for possession of the share, but should sue for a declaration that the person claiming the right of pre-emption has no such right and to set aside the sale. FARZAND ALI v. AZIMULLAH I. L. R., 1 All., 272

SANGAM RAM v. SHROBART BHAGAT

31. ———— Condition for assertion of right.—Wajib-ul-urz.—Offer of property.—Notification that property is for sale and offers will be received.—Acquiescence—In order to entitle a co-sharer to assert a right of pre-emption based on the wajib-ul-urz, there must, as a condition precedent to such assertion, be a sale of a share already negotiated with a stranger, and a price fixed with the stranger by the co-sharer desiring to sell. The only mode in which a pre-emptive claim can then be defeated is by proof of a distinct intimation to the co-sharer seeking to maintain such claim, of the contemplated sale, and of the price agreed to be paid by the stranger, of an offer to him (the co-sharer) at such price, and of his refusal to purchase. Where the sale in respect of which the pre-emptive claim was raised was one made by the Collector as Manager of the Court of Wards, and the Collector, before selling the property, issued a proclamation through the tehsildar, notifying to all the shareholders that the property was for sale, and that shareis intending to purchase should make offers,—Held that such a notification was not a sufficiently distinct and definite notice of a negotiated and intended sale to a stranger, so as to estop co-sharers failing to make an offer to purchase from subsequently asserting their pre-emptive rights. SUBHAGI v. MUHAMMAD ISHAK I. L. R., 6 All., 463

32. ———— Association of strangers in purchase.—Specification of interest purchased by each person—Where two co-sharers entitled to pre-emption in certain villages associated strangers with them in the purchase of such villages and other landed property,—Held that they must be regarded in the light of total strangers in respect of the whole of the property included in the sale-deed, and that a note at the foot of the sale-deed mentioning the interest severally purchased by each of the vendees would not entitle them to retain the shares respectively purchased by them. GUNESHEE LAL v. ZARAUT ALI 2 N. W., 343

33. ———— Joint purchase by co-sharer and strangers.—Specification of interests taken by purchasers—A co-sharer of an estate sold his share to R, who was also a co-sharer in such estate, and to two other persons, who were not co-sharers, but "strangers," selling it to all of them jointly and collectively, for one integral sum as the consideration for the whole. The deed of sale specified that each of the purchasers took a one-third share of the property sold. The co-sharers of the estate were entitled, on the sale by a co-sharer of his share, to the right of pre-emption. Held that such specification could not alter the joint nature of the sale transaction or permit of its being broken up and treated as involving three separate contracts, so as to entitle R, as a co-sharer having an equal right of pre-emption, to resist, so far as one-third of the property was concerned, a claim by another co-sharer to enforce a right of pre-emption in respect of such sale, but R must be regarded as a "stranger" in respect of the whole of the property sold by reason of having associated himself with "strangers." Guneshee Lal v. Zaraus Ali, 2 N. W., 343, observed on. MANNA SINGH v. RAMADHIN SINGH

34. ———— Benami purchaser.—Purchaser not a coparcener.—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 14.—Where the rights of a judgment-debtor in a puttdari estate were sold at auction in execution of decree, and bid for by the son of the judgment-debtor who gave the name of his father-in-law to whom the property was knocked down (and who was not a coparcener in the estate) as the actual purchaser, such father-in-law subsequently waiving his claim as auction-purchaser in favour of the judgment-debtor. 41. ——— Wajib-ul-urz.—

Partition of mehal.—Mode of division of property where there are several pre-emptors equally entitled.

—The wajib ul-urz, framed in 1856, of a village consisting of several puttis or thokes, gave a right of pre-emption to the owners of each thoke in respect of property situate in every other thoke, when such property was sold to any one having no share in the village coparcenary. The mehal subsequently became the subject of perfect partition under the N-W P. Land-Revenue Act (XIX of 1873), and one of the puttis was constituted a separate mehal and a new wajib-ul-urz was framed for it. Prior to the partition, a proprietor of land both in the puttis which remained in the original mehal and in the putti which formed the new mehal, sold property in both to a stranger. Thereupon a co sharer in the original mehal brought a suit for pre-emption in respect of the property situate therein which had been sold, excluding the property situate in the new mehal. Held that the effect of the partition was to exclude property situate in the new mehal from the operation of the wajib-ul-urz framed in 1856, and to place it under new conditions as to the right of pre-emption, that the plaintiff could, after the separation, exercise no such right against and in respect of shareholders and property so separated, nor could the separate shareholders exercise any right of pre-emption against the plaintiff and his property remaining in the mehal from which they had separated, and that the suit to pre-empt that portion only of the property sold which was situate in the original mehal was maintainable. Durga Prasad v. One of the two plaintiffs was the widow of a co-sharer in the village, who, at the time of his death, was a member of a joint Hindu family. stranger, and price.—Right of pre-emption of vendee co-sharer.—The principle of denying the right of pre-emption except as to the whole of the property sold, is that by breaking up the bargain the pre-emptor would be at liberty to take the best portion of the property and leave the worst part of it with the vendee. The rule applies only to those transactions which, while contained in one deed, cannot be broken up or separated. It should be limited to such transactions, and the reason of it does not exist where the shares sold are separately specified, and the sale to the stranger is distinct and divisible, though contained in the same deed as the sale to the co-sharers. The ratio decidendi of Bhawani Prasad v. Damru, I. L. R., 5 All., 197, explained. Sheodyal Ram v. Bhyro Ram, N. W. P., S. D. A., 1860, p. 53, distinguished. Guneshee Lal v. Zaraut Ali, 2 N. W., 345, and Manna Singh v. Ramadhin Singh, I. L. R., 4 All., 252, dissented from. A co-sharer in a village conveyed by deed of sale certain land to four persons, three of whom were co-sharers in the same putni as the vendor. The deed contained a specification of the interests purchased and the considerations paid by the co-sharers and the stranger vendees respectively. In a suit for pre-emption by certain co-sharers of the same putni as the vendor, the lower Appellate Court held that although the co-sharers-vendees had a pre-emptive right of the same degree as the plaintiffs, nevertheless they, having joined a stranger with them in purchasing the property, had forfeited their right, and could not resist the claim even in respect of such portions as they had purchased under the sale-deed. Held that this view was erroneous, and that inasmuch as the deed of sale contained an exact specification of the shares purchased by the co-sharers-vendees, who had an equal right of purchase to that of the plaintiffs in respect of such shares, and as the shares purchased and the consideration paid by the stranger vendee were also exactly specified, the lower Court should not have decreed the claim for pre-emption as to that portion of the property which had been purchased by the co-sharers. Subsequently B., as a co-sharer in the mehal, during 1288 Fashi, claimed from A., as lumberdar of the mehal, the profits of the share for 1288 Fashi. Held that the pre-emptive right which was declared in the suit instituted by A., when it was once established, existed, and must be presumed to have taken effect on the date when the subsequently awarded sale to B. took place, and therefore there was no period of time during which B. was

63. ———— Partition, Effect of.—Co-sharers—"Village"—Effect of perfect partition on covenants contained in the wajib-ul-urz—The wajib-ul-urz of a village contained a covenant among the co-sharers that, in the event of any one of them selling his share, a right of pre-emption should be enforceable, first, by a "near shareholder," next, by a partner in the thoke, and thirdly, by a partner in the village. The village was subsequently divided into three separate mehals by means of a perfect partition under the N. W. P. Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873). Held that the agreement regarding pre-emption remained in force after the partition. The term "village," as used in the wajib-ul-urz, means a definite area of land with houses upon it, and does not necessarily imply a joint ownership of such land, inasmuch as after partition there may remain some community of interest, and things held and used in common by all the inhabitants. Every one who lives in that area has a share in it, and may therefore be regarded as a "shareholder" within the meaning of the wajib-ul-urz. GOKAL SINGH v. MANNU LAL [I. L. R., 7 All., 772]

64. ———— Division of lands in village.—Right of sharer in one division to right of pre-emption of share in another division.—The greater portion of the lands of a certain village were divided into "thokes," each thoke comprising a certain amount of land, and the rest of the lands were held in common according to the interest of the co-sharers in the village. The wajib-ul-urz contained the following provision regarding the right of pre-emption. "Each sharer is by all means at liberty to transfer his right and share, but first of all the transfer should be effected by him in favour of his own brothers and nephews who may be sharers, and, in case of their refusal, in favour of the other owners of the thoke." Held, in a suit by a sharer in one thoke to enforce a right of pre-emption, under the wajib-ul-urz, in respect of a share in another thoke, that the fact that the plaintiff in common with all the sharers of the different thokes was a sharer in the common lands did not make her a sharer in the vendor's thoke, and she had therefore no right of pre-emption under the wajib-ul-urz. *MAYA RAM v. 65. ———— Nearer co-sharer.—Mortgage by conditional sale—Limitation.—Acquiescence.—Equitable estoppel—The two joint owners of a 2 annas 8 pies share in a village jointly executed two deeds of mortgage by conditional sale, each for a share of 1 anna 4 pies, in favour, respectively, of R. and A., co-sharers in the village, and related to the vendors. In 1875 the conditional sale in favour of R. became absolute, and he was recorded as proprietor of half the share of the vendors, and obtained possession thereof. In 1882 A. foreclosed his mortgage, and obtained possession of the other half share. R. thereupon claimed the right to purchase the half share so acquired by A. on the allegation that he had a right of pre-emption in respect thereof, having become the vendee in 1875 of the other half share, and therefore being the "nearer co-sharer" of the vendors within the meaning of the wajib-ul-urz, and also being nearer in relationship to the vendors than A. The wajib-ul-urz provided that each co-sharer was competent to transfer his own share, but that, when making a transfer, it was incumbent on him to notify the same to his near co-sharer, and, on his refusal, to other sharers in the village. The lower Appellate Court held that the plaintiff was estopped from preferring a claim to pre-emption on the ground that he had acquiesced in the conditional sale in favour of the defendant, and also that he had no right to pre-emption under the wajib-ul-urz Held that inasmuch as from 1875 to 1882 the only owners of the 2 annas 8 pies share were the plaintiff and the mortgagees, they were the only co-sharers in respect of this particular share, although there were other co-sharers in the village, that the plaintiff must therefore be regarded as a "nearer co-sharer" of the vendors than the defendant within the meaning of the wajib-ul-urz, and that as such he was entitled to claim pre-emption Held, also, that the right of pre-emption which arose upon the sale was a new right, and not the same as that which arose at the time of the mortgage, inasmuch as the wajib-ul-urz distinctly contemplated the right of pre-emption as arising upon the two different events of mortgage and sale; that the alleged acquiescence of the plaintiff pre-emptor therefore occurred at a time when the right claimed by him was not yet in existence, and that consequently the claim was not barred. *RUF NARAIN v. One of the co-sharers transferred to a stranger 1 biswa and 6 dhuis of a grove or garden in exchange for another piece of land—Held by the Full Bench that this transaction was a transfer of hakkiyat within the terms of the wajib-ul-urz Held, also, that the plot of land which was given in exchange for the 1 biswa and 6 dhuis must be considered as a price (qimat) within the terms of the wajib-ul-urz Per MAHMOOD, J, that the word "qimat" must be interpreted in the sense given to it by the Mahomedan law, including not only money, but other kinds of property capable of being valued at a definite sum of money, and covering the consideration of "sale" as well of exchange as defined in sections 54 and 118 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) respectively *NIAMAT ALI v. tion arose under the terms of the wajib-ul-urz in the case of a simple mortgage. The word "intikal," as used in Hindustani, has the broadest meaning in connection with "alienation," "conveyance," "assignment," or "transfer" of rights in immoveable property. The word "hakkiyat" means rights and interests in the legal sense of the phrase. The word "rahn" is a generic word indicating all that is included in the English word "mortgage," and is not limited to usufructuary mortgages, but includes simple mortgages also. When general words are used in a document, they must be understood in a general sense, unless they are accompanied by any expression limiting or restricting their ordinary meaning, or unless such limitation or restriction arises from necessary implication. The words "intikal," "hakkiyat," and "rahn" in the wajib-ul-urz could be understood only in the most general sense. "Mortgage," as understood in Indian law, includes simple mortgage as well as usufructuary, and one is as much a "transfer of an interest in specific immoveable property" as the other. A simple mortgage is a "transfer," being the transfer of the right of sale. Held, therefore, by MAHMOOD, J, that a right of pre-emption accrued under the terms of the wajib-ul-urz in the case of a simple mortgage by a co-sharer of his share to a "stranger" Per BRODHURST, J, that one of the entries in a statement showing the transfers which had taken place in the village at or about the time the wajib-ul-urz was framed, which statement was connected with the wajib-ul-urz, related to a simple mortgage, from which it appeared that it was the intention that the co-sharers should have the right of pre-emption in all cases of mortgage, whether usufructuary or otherwise, and therefore a right of pre-emption accrued under the terms of the wajib-ul-urz in the case of a simple mortgage Per DUTHOIT, J, that a pre-emptive right was raised by the terms of the wajib-ul-urz only upon the occurrence of a transfer of a share in the property of the mehal, and a simple mortgage was not a transfer of property. OLDFIELD, J—The word "transfer" used in the wajib-ul-urz was not intended to refer to a simple mortgage, but to mortgages where possession of the property passes to the mortgagee SHEORATAN KUAR v. MAHIPAL KUAR . . . I. L. R., 7 All., 258

s. 5.—Fraudulent omission to transfer by registered instrument.—The wajib-ul-urz of a village gave the co-sharers a right of pre-emption in cases where any one of them should wish to “transfer his share wholly or partly by sale or mortgage.” One of the co-sharers entered into a transaction by which he transferred the possession of his share to a stranger for Rs300 and had mutation of names effected in the Revenue Department, but, in order to avoid the right of pre-emption, the parties omitted to execute or register a deed of sale in respect of the transfer. Held by the Full Bench (MAHMOOD, J., dissenting) that the transaction gave rise to the right of pre-emption within the meaning of the wajib-ul-urz. Per PETHERAM, C. J., that the terms of the wajib-ul-urz meant that if any co-sharer transferred his right wholly or partly, the right of pre-emption should arise: that although the legal interest in the share was never transferred, the effect of the transaction in question was to transfer absolutely the whole right of possession from the vendor to the vendee, and that it was therefore such a transfer as let in the right of pre-emption. Per STRAIGHT, J., that inasmuch as the defendants deliberately omitted to observe the necessary legal formality of a registered instrument with the object of defeating the pre-emptive right, it was very doubtful whether a Court of Equity would be justified in allowing them to set up, and in giving effect to, a defence based upon their own intentional evasion of the law. Per OLDFIELD and BRODHURST, J.J., that the failure of the parties to the transfer to comply with the requirements of section 54 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), as to the manner in which the transfer should be made, did not alter the nature of the transaction or affect the fact that a sale had been made, and could not affect a pre-emptor’s right in respect of it. Per MAHMOOD, J., that a valid and perfected sale was a condition precedent to the exercise of the pre-emptive right; that in the present case nothing had happened which could properly be termed a “sale” within the meaning of the wajib-ul-urz, that the application for mutation of names not having been registered, the provisions of section 54 of the Transfer of Property Act prevented it from taking effect as a sale, or passing the ownership from the vendor to the vendee, and that therefore, under the wajib-ul-urz, the right of pre-emption could not arise. JANKI v. GREJADAT I. L. R., 7 All, 482

70. — Calculation of price, Mode of.—Proportionate share of purchase-money—The wajib-ul-urz of a village contained this clause regarding the transfer of shares by sale or mortgage, viz—“Whenever a shareholder intends to transfer his rights, his nearest co-sharer shall be first entitled to purchase the same, and on his refusal the other sharers in the thoke, and on their refusal sharers in other thokes, will be entitled.” S, the proprietor of a 4 pies share in one thoke and of a 9 pies share in another thoke, sold both shares, together with a bungalow, garden, and factory situated on the land comprised in the 4 pies share, for Rs10,000 to T. and others, shareholders in the thoke containing the 9 pies share. D and others, shareholders in the thoke containing the 4 pies share, sued to obtain possession of that share and the bungalow, garden, and factory, claiming the right of pre-emption under the wajib-ul-urz, on payment of a proportionate part of the purchase-money, which they estimated at four thirteenths of that sum, calculating the numbers of pies sold. It was held (in accordance with the opinion of the Full Bench) that the plaintiffs were entitled to claim the right of pre-emption in respect of the 4 pies share to the exclusion of the 9 pies. It was also held that the right of pre-emption did not extend to the bungalow, garden, and factory. Instead of adopting the plaintiffs’ mode of calculating the price payable for the property claimed, the lower Courts should have ascertained separately the value of the several properties sold. *SALIG RAM v. 72. — Dispute as to price.—Arrangement between vendor and vendee.—In a suit to establish a right of pre-emption to property which had been sold, in which the plaintiff alleged that the actual value was different from that which was recited in the deed of sale between the defendants, the vendor and vendee,—Held that plaintiff was entitled to have the property at the price agreed upon between the vendor and the vendee, but not to the benefit of an arrangement by which a portion of the price had been allowed to remain in the hands of the vendee that he might pay off a mortgage-debt. GOLAM AYHYA v. JOY MUNGUL SINGH 13 W. R., 435

73. — Rights of pre-emptor.—Sale-contract—Deduction of amount recovered by vendee.—A pre-emptor is entitled to all the benefit which the vendee takes under the contract of sale. Held, therefore, where a certain sum was fixed as the price of the property, and such sum was paid by the vendee, but it was subsequently agreed between him and the vendor, as part of the sale-contract, that the vendee should recover for his own benefit certain moneys due to the vendor at the time of the sale, and the vendee recovered such moneys, that the pre-emptor was entitled to a deduction of the amount of such moneys from the sum originally fixed as the price of the property. *TAJAMMUL HUSAIN v. of a village. G sued the vendors and purchasers of the share to enforce his right of pre-emption in respect of the sale, and obtained a decree. M., claiming 1 anna 4 pies of the share as his property, sued the vendors and purchasers of the share and G for such 1 anna 4 pies, and obtained a decree. He then sued the same parties to enforce his right of pre-emption in respect of the remainder of the share, that is, 6 annas 8 pies, claiming to pay only a proportionate amount of the price paid for the whole share. Held that M. was not bound to pay the price paid for the whole share, but only the proportionate amount of such price. MUHAMMAD LATIF v. GOBIND SINGH [I. L. R., 5 All., 382]

75. ——— Amount of purchase-money.

—Mortgage by conditional sale—Reg. XVII of 1806, s. 8—Foreclosure—Held that a proceeding under Regulation XVII of 1806 foreclosing a mortgage by conditional sale was not conclusive as to the amount of the mortgage-money against persons subsequently claiming to enforce a right of pre-emption and raising the question as to the amount of the purchase-money. Forbes v. Ameeroonissa Begum, 10 Moore's I. A., 340, referred to. Also that, on general principles, a decree in a suit to foreclose a mortgage by conditional sale cannot bind a person not a party to the suit claiming to enforce a right of pre-emption and raising a similar question. Held, also, that a person claiming a right of pre-emption in respect of a mortgage by conditional sale was bound to pay as the price of the property the entire amount due on such mortgage at the time it became absolute. Ashik Ali v. Mathura Kandu, I L R., 5 All., 187, followed. TAWAKHUL RAI v. LACHMAN RAI TAWAKHUL RAI v. SHEO GHULAM . . . I. L. R., 6 All., 341

76. ——— Arrangement between vendor and vendee as to payment of purchase-money.—Right of pre-emptor to stand in the position of the purchaser—A co-sharer of a village sold part of his share to a stranger. This sale was subject to a right of pre-emption created by the wajib-ul-urz in favour of the partners of the vendor. Only a part of the purchase-money was paid in cash, it being agreed that the balance should remain on credit, and be secured by two deeds in which the property was hypothecated by the purchaser to the vendor. Held that it could not be said that the partners of the vendor had not only the right of pre-emption, but also the right to be put in the same position with reference to all the peculiar incidents of the payment of the purchase-money as that arranged between the vendor and purchaser. *NIHAL SINGH v. 77. ——— Clause in wajib-ul-urz fixing price in case of sale to a co-sharer.—Vendor and purchaser—Sale to a stranger for higher price.—Agreement running with land—Pre-emptor entitled to take property on payment of price fixed in wajib-ul-urz.—Purchaser entitled to recover purchase-money—The wajib-ul-urz of a village contained a provision that any co-sharer desiring to sell his share should offer it to the other co-sharers before selling it to a stranger, and further, that, in case of sale to a co-sharer, the price to be paid should be calculated in proportion to the price for which a particular share had been sold in 1860. One of the co-sharers, without first offering his share to the other co-sharers, sold it to a stranger, for a price higher than that which would be payable according to the above-mentioned provision. A suit for pre-emption was brought by a co-sharer against the vendor and the purchaser, and the plaintiff claimed the benefit of the sale upon payment of a sum calculated according to the condition of the wajib-ul-urz relating to sales between co-sharers. Held by the Full Bench that the condition of the wajib-ul-urz regarding the price to be paid for the share was still binding on the land, notwithstanding the sale, that a co-sharer was entitled to purchase the share at the price agreed before it could be sold to anyone else, and, in case of sale to a stranger, could call on the vendor and the purchaser to hand it over on payment of such price, and that, if the stranger vendee had paid more than was payable according to the wajib-ul-urz, he was entitled to recover it from the vendor. *Akbar Singh v. 78. ——— Calculation of price.—Covenant for pre-emption, Breach of—Suit to enforce covenant—Four brothers, on making a partition of their joint property, covenanted with each other that if any one of them, or their heirs, had to sell his share, he should offer to sell the same to one of the co-sharers. One of the brothers having died, his widow sold his share which she had inherited without such an offer to the surviving brothers, who thereupon sued her and her vendee for possession upon payment of what they alleged to be the value of the property, viz., Rs 27. The Munsif found the value to be greater (viz., Rs 95), and set aside the sale without giving possession. The lower Appellate Court made an order that, if plaintiffs deposited Rs 95 in Court, their appeal would be decreed. The plaintiffs deposited the amount, and a decree for possession was given them. Held that neither of the Courts had the power to make the decrees which they did, and the order of the lower Appellate Court to deposit the money was not binding on the plaintiffs, who had no right under their contract to an election, after the value had been ascertained, whether they would purchase at that price or not. Quere,—Can a perpetual covenant as to the disposition of land be enforced? *TRIPOORA SOONDUREE v. A co-sharer, who had a right of pre-emption in respect of the sale, made no objection to this application, and the partition was effected. The co-sharer afterwards set up a claim to pre-emption. Held that there was nothing in the conduct of the pre-emptor which could amount to estoppel, or to a waiver of his right of pre-emption *Motee Sah v. house—To acquire by prescription a right to the uninterrupted access of light and air through the windows of a dwelling-house, it is sufficient that the building in respect of which the right is claimed has assumed the appearance and outward aspect of a dwelling-house for more than twenty years before the time of the commencement of the suit, though not completed or used as a dwelling-house for the full period of twenty years before that time. When a building is so far completed as to show an intention to use it as a dwelling-house, with certain windows or openings for light and air, from that time it becomes the duty of those who are concerned in preventing a prescriptive right to the access of light and air from arising in respect of such windows, to take steps to challenge and hinder the acquisition of such right. *PRANJIVAN DAS HAJIVAN DAS v. IV., c. 71.—In a suit to remove an obstruction to the enjoyment of light and air and for damages,—Held by MARKBY, J., that in cases where English law is applicable, the law of prescription is that existing in England prior to the passing of the Prescription Act. Although the enjoyment of light and air as of right for upwards of thirty years is evidence from which an enjoyment from time immemorial may be presumed, yet inasmuch as the period of legal memory is about 700 years, the claim by prescription in this country is defeated by the fact that English law has only been introduced here for about 200 years. Where an easement has been enjoyed for upwards of twenty years, the presumption of a grant is a question of fact, and not of law. Distinction drawn between positive and negative servitudes. Held by PEACOCK, C. J.—A right to air may be acquired by express grant, but it cannot be acquired merely by presumption arising from user, whether the presumption is a presumption of prescription or not. The only amount of light which can be claimed by prescription or by length of enjoyment, without an actual grant, is such an amount as is reasonably necessary for the convenient and comfortable habitation of the house. The uninterrupted enjoyment of light for twenty years acquiesced in by the owner of the servient tenement raises a presumption of right which, in the absence of any evidence to rebut it, ought to be acted upon by those who have to determine the facts. Such presumption is one of law, and not of fact. Held by NORMAN, J.—Servitudes are known and recognised both in Hindu and Mahomedan law. A right to the unobstructed access of light is not a property or interest in the light itself, nor a right to be enjoyed in or over the soil of the adjacent owner. By analogy to the law of limitation, an adverse and uninterrupted use of an easement for twenty years confers a right to it; therefore, where the access of light and air through the windows of a house has been enjoyed for twenty years, and there is nothing to rebut the presumption of title, the law implies an obligation on the part of an adjoining owner not to interrupt the free access of necessary light and air through such windows. *BAGEAM v. 31. ————— Knowledge and acquiescence—2 & 3 Will. IV., c. 71.—In a suit for enforcing the removal of an obstruction to the alleged right of the plaintiffs to the light and air through certain windows in a room of a house contiguous to the house of the defendants, it was proved that the plaintiffs had purchased the premises in 1847, and that the building of the room in which the windows in question were had been subsequently commenced in 1849, and the Judge of the Court below found on the evidence that the room and windows had been completed and in use for a period of twenty years prior to the date of suit, May 18th, 1870, that the plaintiffs had enjoyed the light and air through the windows for a period of twenty years without any interruption by the defendants, and it being proved that the defendants had by buildings obstructed the light and air coming to the plaintiffs' windows, he granted an injunction commanding the defendants to take down so much of the wall as rose to the height of more than five feet above the level of the plaintiffs' floor, and restraining them, the defendants, from continuing their building above the height of five feet. Held, on appeal, per COTTELL, C. J.—By the English law before the Prescription Act (which is the law governing the case), the presumption of a grant, in the case of a claim to the access and use of light for a building, was a presumption of fact, the presumption being founded on the consent or acquiescence of the owner of the servient tenement. Acquiescence implies knowledge, and knowledge may be presumed where the owner is in possession. There must be knowledge for twenty years, at any rate, if the knowledge were for a lesser period, whether there was a grant would be a question of fact, and no presumption could arise.

The question of whether or not there was knowledge is one preliminary to the consideration whether or not a grant is to be presumed. Held on the evidence that there had been no knowledge on the part of the defendants during the whole time, and therefore there had not been a twenty years' enjoyment of the light and air with then acquiescence. Held per MARKBY, J.—The presumption of a lost grant is one of fact. An uninterrupted user for twenty years would be evidence from which, taken with other circumstances, it might be inferred that a grant had existed. No "patentia," or "submission" on the part of the defendants being shown so as to constitute an acknowledgment of the existence of the right of the plaintiffs to the light and air, the defendants were entitled to succeed. BHUBAN MOHAN BANERJEE v. ELLIOTT 6 B. L. R., 35

Held on appeal to the Privy Council, that the law of prescription applicable to India was the English law previous to the passing of the Prescription Act, 2 & 3 William IV, Cap. 71. In order to establish a right to light and air, an uninterrupted user of at least twenty years, with the acquiescence of the owner of the servient tenement, must be shown. In a suit to restrain the defendants from obstructing the light and air through certain windows of a house belonging to the plaintiffs, it was shown that the enjoyment of the alleged right began on 14th April 1850, the windows then being in a sufficiently finished state to create the right. In March 1870, the plaintiffs received notice from the defendants of their intention to erect a building which would have the effect of obstructing the passage of light and air through the plaintiffs' windows. The building was actually commenced on 23rd March 1870, but it was not actually raised to such a height as to amount to an obstruction until some days after the twenty years had elapsed. Held that there was not an enjoyment for twenty years with the acquiescence of the defendants such as entitled the plaintiffs to maintain the suit. Quære,—Whether proof of constructive knowledge on the part of the defendants would not be sufficient to show their acquiescence. ELLIOTT v. IV, c. 71), s. 3—Grant independent of user.*—In a suit to restrain the defendant from obstructing the access of light and air through certain windows of the plaintiff's house, it appeared that both the tenements had formerly constituted the joint property of a Hindu family and that in 1835 a partition took place among the various members composing it, by which the tenement in the occupation of the plaintiff became separated from that occupied by the defendant, that the latter property was, in 1860, purchased by the plaintiff jointly with one G, but under the purchase the plaintiff took sole possession thereof; that in 1867, however, he relinquished it in favour of G in pursuance of an award, wherein it was found the plaintiff had no right or title thereto, and that in 1870 it was purchased by the defendant, who, in 1871 and 1872, erected the obstructions complained of by the plaintiff. Held that though, in the interval between 1860 and 1867, the plaintiff had not such an estate in the servient tenement as to constitute unity of title in him to the two tenements, and thereby extinguish all easements between them, yet the unity of possession in the plaintiff during that period excluded the operation of section 27 of Act IX of 1871, as the enjoyment during that time was not "of right." Semble,—In order that the enjoyment should be "of right," there must be an adverse exercise of it as against the servient holder. Act IX of 1871 does not exclude other modes than therein provided of acquiring an easement by enjoyment. In this case, applying the law of prescription in force in Calcutta prior to 1871, which was the English law previous to the passing of 2 & 3 William IV, Cap. 71, a grant might be implied independently of user: and under the circumstances of the case, the plaintiff was entitled to such right to easements of light and air as can be inferred from enjoyment,—i. e., a right to restrain the defendant from committing any act whereby the access of light or air should be so diminished as with respect to air to prove a nuisance or injurious to health, and with respect to light to render the house unfit for comfortable habitation. MODHOOSOODUN DEY v. A plaintiff entitled as of right to light and air through a certain window, subsequently enlarged it, and on the light thereto being interfered with by the defendant, gave him notice to remove the obstruction two days after it had been completed. Held that he had been guilty of no delay in taking steps to prevent the obstruction, and that he was entitled to a mandatory injunction requiring the defendant to remove it. PROVABUTTY DABEE v. 37. ——— Path across land.—Implied grant.—Modes of acquiring easements—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 26—In a suit for an injunction to restrain the defendant from using a path on the plaintiff's land, it appeared that the land held by the plaintiff and defendant had originally belonged to one owner, and that the plaintiff and the defendant had obtained their respective tenements more than twenty years previously. The path had been admittedly made by the original owner, but the plaintiff contended that when he purchased the land he had closed the path. Thus the Munsif disbelieved, and refused the injunction. The District Judge, treating the case as if it fell under section 26 of the Limitation Act, and being of opinion that the defendant had not proved twenty years' peaceable, open, and uninterrupted exercise of the right of way, gave the plaintiff a decree. Held that the mode of acquiring an easement provided by section 26 of the Limitation Act is not the only way in which an easement may be acquired, but an easement may also be acquired by implied grant. In the present case the use of the path might be absolutely necessary to the enjoyment of the defendant's tenement, in which case there would be an easement of necessity, or the use of the path, though not absolutely necessary to the enjoyment of the defendant's tenement, might be necessary for its enjoyment in the state in which it was at the time of severance, and in this case, if the easement were apparent and continuous, there would be a presumption that it passed with the defendant's tenement CHARU SUNOKAR v. 38. ——— Lane from public road to house.—User.—Limitation Act (IX of 1871), s. 27.—In a suit for declaration of the plaintiff's right of way over a lane leading from a public road to a door in the plaintiff's house, which lane the defendant, who resided at the end of the lane, had obstructed so as to prevent access to the plaintiff's house, it appeared that the house in respect of which the easement was claimed belonged in 1855 to one H. C., during the time of whose occupation there was user of the right of way over the lane to the door, until he had the door bricked up. In April 1865 the house was sold by H. C. and in June 1867 was conveyed by the purchaser to the plaintiff. From the blocking up of the door until the plaintiff's purchase no user was proved. The suit was brought in June 1875, about a month after the erection by the defendant of the obstruction complained of. Held, both in the Court below and on appeal, that the owner of the dominant tenement having, with the intention of preventing the use of the way, created an obstruction of a permanent nature which rendered such use impossible, the way could not be said, during the continuance of such obstruction, to have "been openly enjoyed" within the meaning of section 27 of Act IX of 1871, and that, accordingly, though there had been no interruption within the meaning of that section, a right to the way had not been established under the Act. SHAM CHUEN AUDDY v. 39. ——— Right of passage.—Unity of possession.—Severance.—Nuisance arising from acts of several persons—The words "appurtenant" or "belonging" will ordinarily carry only actual existing easements, and therefore will carry no right of way over the land of the grantor, though, under certain circumstances, even these words will have a wider construction. Where further words are used, such as "therewith held or used," such words will carry a way formerly enjoyed as an easement, but as to which the right has been suspended by unity of possession. But such words will not carry a way made by the owner of both properties during the unity of possession for his own greater convenience in the use of the two properties jointly. But where, during the unity of possession, a way, which has never existed as an easement, is in fact used for the convenience of one of the tenements afterwards severed, the authorities show that the words in question are large enough to carry it. One who has a right of passage over any place, must not, any more than the owner of the soil might, use it in an excessive or improper manner so as to obstruct the exercise by others of their rights. The acts of several persons may together constitute a nuisance, though the damage occasioned by the acts of any one, if taken alone, would not be appreciable. *CHUNDER KOOMAR MOOKERJEE v. ed across the said channel by the first defendant's predecessor in office, and used for the purpose of diverting the flow of the water. Held that acquiescence in the sense of mere submission to the interruption of the enjoyment does not destroy or impair an easement. To be effectual for that purpose it must be attributable to an intention on the part of the owner to abandon the benefit before enjoyed. Held, also, that the diversion of the water was a continuing injury down to the time of the institution of the suit, and that the plaintiff's suit was not barred. Held, also, that it must appear from the circumstances in evidence in such case that the interference or obstruction complained of is not a trivial but a substantial injury in order to warrant relief by way of injunction. Held, also, that the right to an easement in the flow of water through an artificial water-course is as valid against the Government as it is against a private owner of land. Held, per SCOTLAND, C. J.—That the grant of an easement may be presumed from mere continued user of the privilege openly enjoyed by the occupiers of the dominant tenement as of right throughout any long period of time without interruption on the part of the proprietor of the servient tenement, but with this qualification, that the user should be for at least the period of adverse possession which is prescribed by section 1, clause 12 of the Act of Limitations, as a bar to the enforcing of title to corporeal property. Per INNES, J.—That no precise period of uninterrupted enjoyment can be fixed as sufficient of itself to establish a right to an easement. *PONNUSAWMI TEVAR v. 45. ————— Exclusive right to use of water—The plaintiffs, as sharholders in, and heads of, the villages of Ariyar and Kuvirikudi, sued for an injunction directing the defendants to close an irrigation channel which was opened in 1869 and to remove the sluice. It appeared that a channel called Kaduvai had, by means of a branch, for very many years supplied the plaintiff's village with water. The village of Partical, of which the first defendant was mirasidar, up to the date of the opening of the new channel had received its supply from the Mallattar channel. The supply from this was insufficient, and the second defendant, the Superintendent Engineer (representing Government) designed a new channel from the Kaduvai to supplement the deficiency of the Mallattar. The water of the Kaduvai was diverted into the new channel at a point above the point of divergence of the branch channel from the Kaduvai to the plaintiff's village. The relief was prayed for in the Court of first instance, on the ground that the supply by the Kaduvai had never been sufficient for the wants of the village, and that the new channel must necessarily cause a still further deficiency. The Civil Judge found that the plaintiffs had sustained no loss by the opening of the new channel, and dismissed the suit. On appeal it was contended, first, that plaintiffs had an absolute right to the uninterrupted flow of all the water in the Kaduvai channel without subtraction or diminution by the defendants or by the Government, represented by the second defendant, and that any diminution, though not causing loss, was an invasion of their rights; second, that if they had not such absolute right, they had a right to a supply of water for the necessary purposes of irrigation and otherwise for their village, and that the possibility of loss at some future time, arising from a possible wrongful diminution of the water to their detriment through the new sluice and channel, entitled them to the relief claimed. Upon the first point,—Held that the plaintiffs had not the extensive and exclusive right to the water contended for by them, but that their right was limited to the beneficial enjoyment of the water for the irrigation and other necessary purpose of their tenancies as heretofore enjoyed. Also, that the Government, as proprietor of the Kaduvai channel and water in it, had, subject to the above limited use by the plaintiffs and other villages in the same position as the plaintiffs, a right to distribute the water of the Kaduvai channel for the benefit of the public. Ponusami Tevar v. Collector of Madura, 5 Mad, 6, distinguished. KRISTNA AYYAN v. VENKATACHELLA MUDALI. 7 Mad., 60

46. ————— Suit to restrain interference with water rights—Damages—Right of Government to distribute water—The plaintiffs, who were ryots under the Government, brought a suit to restrain the defendants, the agents of the Government, and others, from so altering a calingula as to diminish the quantity of water which the plaintiffs were entitled to receive for the irrigation of their lands, and the plaintiffs alleged that the supply of water had been materially diminished by reason of the acts of the defendants. The only ground upon which the plaintiffs' claim was put was that they had received the water for a long time. The District Court held that the Government were authorised to regulate the distribution of water in such cases. Held, on regular appeal, per HOLLOWAY, J., that no legal right was shown by the plaintiffs which could have been violated by the defendants, and that if such right were established, there was nothing to show that a decree for damages would not have been the proper remedy. Per INNES, J.—That the evidence did not show any diminution of the supply of water below the quantity to which the plaintiffs were entitled. VENKATA REDDY v. LISTER. 7 Mad., 342

47. ————— Interruption.—Abandonment—The plaintiff claimed a prescriptive right to the flow of the surface drainage water from the land of the defendant on to his land. Held that such an easement can be acquired only where the water flows in a definite channel. In a suit for interrupting the flow of water from the land of the defendant to the land of the plaintiff it appeared that eight years before suit, the defendant had diverted the water, and that it had been diverted ever since. Held that the right if acquired would not necessarily be lost by the interruption, but that if the plaintiff acquiesced during that time in the interruption, it might be some evidence of an abandonment of the right. *KENA MAHOMED v. 48. ————— Right to passage of water.—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), ss 23 and 26—Continuing nuisance—Easement.—From time immemorial, and certainly for more than twenty years prior to the date of the obstruction by the defendants, the plaintiff enjoyed the right of having an egress for his ran water through a drain in the defendants' land. The plaintiff, more than two years after the date of the obstruction, sued the defendants for the removal of the obstruction. Held that though, under the circumstances, the plaintiff had failed to prove a title acquired under section 26 of Act XV of 1877, yet the plaintiff, having a title, evidenced by immemorial user, did not require the aid of that Act; and inasmuch as the obstruction complained of constituted a continuing nuisance, as to which the cause of action was renewed de die in diem, the plaintiff's claim was not barred by any provision of the Act, but, on the contrary, was saved by the express provision of section 23. PUNJA KUVARJI v. 49. — Water in defined channel—From time immemorial a certain "al" formed the boundary of two pieces of land belonging to the plaintiffs and the defendants respectively. The plaintiffs' land was on a higher level than that of the defendants, and from time immemorial the surplus water used to flow from the plaintiffs' land through certain passages in the "al" and across the defendants' land. The defendants closed up the passages and increased the height of the "al." Held that, it having been established that for a long series of years the waters from the plaintiffs' lands had been accustomed to escape in a particular direction and by certain separate passages across the defendants' land, the defendants could not do anything which would interfere with the plaintiffs' rights in this respect. IMAM ALI v. 50. — Right to use of water.—Irrigation—License creating right of easement—Revocation of agreement to use water.—In a suit to establish a right of water and for damages for interruption of the same the facts were as follow. Plaintiff and defendant by agreement between them constructed a dam across a main channel, and from thence a smaller channel was made through the land of the defendant to the plaintiff's land, by means of which it was agreed that the plaintiff should be at liberty to irrigate the fields. The agreement was acted upon for a long course of years. Held that the agreement was not a mere parol license revocable at the pleasure of the defendant, but an agreement which created a right of easement, unlimited in point of time, to the use of the water by the plaintiff, and imposed upon the defendant the corresponding duty of allowing the accustomed supply to flow. A mere license differs in its effects from a license coupled with the creation of an interest. The former is revocable, but the latter is subject to the same incidents, and is as binding and irrevocable as any other contract, gift, or grant. KRISHNA v. RATAPPA SHANBHAGA. 4 Mad., 98

51. — Artificial water-course—The right to water flowing to a man's land through an artificial water-course, constructed on a neighbour's land, must rest on some grant or arrangement, proved or presumed, from or with the owner of the land from which the water is artificially brought, or on some other legal origin. Such a right may be presumed from the time, manner, and circumstances under which the easement has been enjoyed. RAMESH PERSAD NARAIN SING v. KOONJ BEHARI PATUOK. I. L. R., 4 Calc., 633; I. L. 52. — User.—Artificial water-course.—In 1860 R., whom the plaintiff in this suit represented, agreed with Government for the lease of a plot of ground called the D estate and got possession. In 1865 R. took a lease of the estate from Government for 999 years, to enure as a lease from 1860, the time at which he entered upon possession. The defendant's estate adjoined plaintiff's. Defendant's title also derived from Government dated from 1869. A formal lease was granted to his predecessor in 1874 in similar terms to that to plaintiff. In 1864 R. opened an artificial channel for the conveyance of water for the use of his estate. This channel was taken off from a ravine in Government waste land, and before reaching the plaintiff's estate passed through land which in 1864 belonged to Government, but which subsequently formed portion of the defendant's estate. When the lease, under which the defendant claimed, was made in 1874, the flow of water through the channel was enjoyed by the plaintiff. The plaintiff sued to restrain the defendant from interfering with and diverting the flow of water in this channel and for damages. Held that the flow of water in the channel having existed as an apparent and continuous easement in fact at the time of the execution of the lease in 1865, a right to it passed by implication under that lease, and that the plaintiff was accordingly entitled to it; that the defendant, whose lease was subject to that right, was not entitled to interrupt the flow; but that he might use the water in a reasonable manner as it flowed through his land. MORGAN v. KIRBY

53. — Obstructing water-course—Presumption of title founded on user.—Limitation Act, 1871, s. 27, and art. 31.—Continuing act of wrong.—More than twenty years, and possibly fifty or sixty, before suit, the plaintiff's ancestors and predecessors in estate had constructed and used a pán, or artificial water-course, on the defendants' land, making compensation to them. The pán, by a channel at one part of its course, contributed to the water in a tál, or reservoir, belonging to the defendants; and by a channel at another part, took the water which overflowed from the tál, after the defendants had used as much of the water therein as they required. Less than twenty years before the suit, the defendants, without authority, obstructed the flow of water along the pán in several places. The Courts below differed as to whether some of these obstructions had not been made more than two years before the suit, the rest having been made within that period. Held that the provisions of Act IX of 1871—a remedial Act, and neither prohibitory nor exhaustive—did not exclude, or interfere with, the acquirement of rights otherwise than under them. A title might be acquired under that Act by a person having no other right at all, but it did not exclude, or interfere with, other titles and modes of acquiring easements. And section 27, by allowing a user of twenty years, if exercised until within two years of suit, under the conditions prescribed, to give, without more, a title, did not prevent proof of an easement founded on another title, independently of the Act. Such a long enjoyment as the plaintiff had proved should be referred to a legal origin, and the long user of the pán and of the superfluous water of the tál, afforded evidence giving rise to a presumption that a grant, or an agreement, had been made creating an easement. Although, on the assumption that some of the obstructions in question had existed for more than two years before the suit, the plaintiff might not have shown a right under Act IX of 1871, section 27, yet he did not require its aid. Held, also, that such obstructions being continuous acts, as to which the cause of action accrued de die in diem, Act IX of 1871, schedule II, part V, clause 31, fixing two years from the date of the obstruction as the period of limitation "for obstructing a water-course," did not preclude a suit complaining of obstructions though made more than two years preceding the date of the commencement of the suit. RAJUP KOER v. 57. ——— Right to water of river.—Relative rights of riparian proprietors and occupiers to the water of river.—Diversion.—User.—Rights of the Government.—Khalsa or rayatvadi land.—A dam had been in existence across a river for upwards of 280 years, and during all that time the villages of D and P had received an equal supply of water from separate sluices in the dam. The Government authorities being of opinion that D required less water than P, reduced the size of the D sluice, and consequently the amount of water flowing to the D village. The village of D was khalsa or rayatvadi, i. e., was held immediately of Government. The inhabitants of D appealed against the action of Government. Held that the Government had no such right of interference, neither (1) as riparian proprietors (supposing them to be such), since the right to the enjoyment of the water of a river belongs to the occupant of the river-bank, whatever the nature of his tenancy, nor (2) by any other imaginable rights existing in the Government as such, since if any such rights ever existed, the long user for upwards of 280 years of the water from the dam by the village of D would be amply sufficient to justify a presumption of an original animus dedicandi in the Government. COLLECTOR OF NASIK v. 58. ——— Right to throw back water on another's land.—Right of other person to relieve himself from inconvenience.—The tank used for the irrigation of the plaintiff's village was supplied in part by rain-water falling on the lands of the village occupied by defendants 9 to 17, and the bund of the tank used formerly to throw back the waters so flowing into the tank on to the lands of defendants, where it remained till gradually drawn off into the area of the tank. Defendants 9 to 17, through the agency of the Government, relieved themselves of this inconvenience by making a work for draining off the water so periodically thrown back upon their land. A channel was also constructed for conducting a supply of water to the plaintiffs' tank. Plaintiffs, however, claimed to have the former state of things restored, on the ground that they had a prescriptive right to throw back the water on to the defendant's lands and to keep it there till required for use. Held that there was here no object over which a right could be acquired. ROBINSON (COLLECTOR OF NORTH ARCOT) v. User.—The plaintiff and the defendant were owners, respectively, of two adjoining houses, having a space between them belonging to the plaintiff. The roof of the defendant's house, built more than thirty years previously, projected over a part of this space. The plaintiff built a new storey to his house, with a roof overhanging the roof of the defendant's house, and under an alleged custom of the country (Ahmedabad) claimed a right to remove the part of the defendant's roof which projected over his (plaintiff's) land. He also sued to establish his right to an easement as against the defendant of compelling the defendant to receive upon the roof of his house the rain-water which flowed from the newly-erected roof of the plaintiff. Held, with regard to the former claim, that if the enjoyment by the defendant were considered as possession, by him, of the space occupied by his projecting roof, the Limitation Act extinguished the plaintiff's right to sue, and if such enjoyment were to be regarded as a mere easement, then the uninterrupted user of more than thirty years vested in the defendant a proprietary right to the same. Held, further, with regard to the plaintiff's claim to an easement, that the plaintiff could only have acquired such easement either by contract or prescription, on neither of which did he rely. No custom can be admitted to override the provisions of the Limitation Act. MOHANLAL JECHAND v. AMRATILAL BECHERDAS

If it be proved that a person acted ordinarily as an agent for the defendant in buying and selling articles of merchandise, the fact of his not being proved to have previously purchased a particular kind of article would not necessarily operate against the plaintiff's case. The Court, in deciding the question of agency, must look to the general evidence on the record. RAM BAKS LAL v. KISHORI MOHAN SHAHA

7. ———— Factors, Shipments by—Consignees.—Custom of Calcutta—Factors having an interest, by reason of their advances in their principal's goods, are justified in shipping those goods for sale, either "on account of those concerned," or "on account of themselves," unless their general authority was controlled by instructions from their principal or by contract. The evidence failing to show that any particular usage or custom qualifying the law of England as between principal and factor prevails in Calcutta,—Held that the powers and duties of the factors in making consignments of their principal's goods must be determined by the general mercantile law. Factors entrusted with possession of their principal's goods, and having advanced upon them, shipped the goods to London, drawing bills against them in their own names, and selling the bills with the shipping documents in the market. The acceptance of the factors' bills by the consignees, and the delivery of the shipping documents to them, made them the pledgees, but did not alter the character of the transaction, which was one whereby the factors had pledged the goods for the payment of bills on which they (and not the principal) were liable as drawers for an amount exceeding the value of the goods. In such a case no privity exists between the consignees and the undisclosed principal. Held, therefore, that a loss having occurred on the shipments, the principal was liable to the factors' estate for the full amount of re-drafts representing that loss, although the factors had become insolvents,

8. ——— Pledge by agent without authority.—Stat. 5 & 6 Vict., c 39, ss. 1 & 3. —Factors Act, XX of 1844.—Notice of agents' mala fides—Where an agent entrusted with a document of title to goods pledged it mala fide, or without authority, it was necessary, in order to deprive the transaction of the protection given by the 1st section of the 5 and 6 Victoria, Cap. 39, and to bring it within the proviso of the 3rd section, that the jury should find categorically that the lender had notice of the agent's mala fides or want of authority. To prove such notice it was sufficient to show that the circumstances attending the transaction were such as that a reasonable man, and a man of business, applying his understanding to them, would certainly infer that the agent had not authority to make the pledge, or that he was acting mala fide in respect thereof against his principals. *GOBIND CHUNDER SEN v. 9. ——— Banian.—*Del credere agent.—Dealings between Native and European firm.—G. S. & Co. employed R. to make purchases for them in the bazar, upon orders which were in force for two days, and they imposed restrictions on R.'s authority to pledge their credit, which were not made known to those with whom he dealt. His remuneration was to be certain dustooree on the purchases, and he paid and gave receipts for the jute, as agents for G. S. & Co. He furnished accounts specifying the price of the goods and the expenses incurred by him upon them, and upon being paid he affixed his receipts to them. The purchases were unusually large, and in R.'s books G. S. & Co. were debited with the amount paid for the goods, R. retaining no interest in or profit out of it. J. S., one of the vendors to R., sued G. S. & Co. for the price of some of the goods so purchased by R. Held that a general authority implies all powers necessary, or usual, or proper, as means to effectuate the purposes for which it was created. A banian is a del credere agent with regard to his employer in making purchases, and is a principal with reference to third persons. Held also that a person who has been allowed to represent himself as agent of a merchant under a general authority is not, as such, a banian; that when a native dealer makes purchases for a European house, the presumption is that the vendor gave credit to the native dealer; and that goods having been purchased for an employer and entered to his debit, and receipts given for them in his name, raises no presumption that the buyer was a banian. *GRANT, SMITH, & Co., v. power to do all acts necessary for carrying it on, and
to authorise brokers to make contracts. A broker

thority by an agent to the defendant, who was the naib of the estate, and as procured by fraud by the defendant in collusion with the agent, the latter charge of collusion having been withdrawn at the hearing before the Subordinate Judge, the High Court remarked on the impropriety of presenting a plaint charging collusion between the agent and defendant without good grounds for such imputation, and on the withdrawal of such charge at the hearing if there were grounds for it; and agreed with the Subordinate Judge in thinking that the owner of the estate in issue must be presumed to know what was being done on her behalf by her agent. The presumption is that a man acts rightly and not fraudulently. The mere circumstance that the rents were low does not give rise to the presumption that there had been fraudulent conduct on the part of the naib, or that he did not state the circumstance to the agent before obtaining the lease from him. There is also this difference between this case and other cases in which contracts between principals and agents are sought to be set aside on the ground of good faith, that here another agent is interposed, and it is not the case of the defendant (the naib) making a report to the owner in England. Even supposing the original transaction liable to be set aside, the ratification by a person having authority from the owner to make inquiries and ratify what had been done would render it invalid. *ANUND CHUNDER BOSE v. Thakbust map.—Act of agent.—Endorsement.—Evidence.—In a suit for possession of certain lands, for rectification of a thakbust map, and reversal of an Act X decision, the plaintiffs obtained a decree in the Court of first instance, the lower Appellate Court, and subsequently in the High Court on appeal. It appeared that the lower Courts had before them an incorrect copy of the thakbust map, the original forming part of the record of another suit. The High Court on appeal refused to send for this map, but subsequently, on review, it was sent for. There was an endorsement on the back, which did not appear on the copies originally before the Court, to the effect that the lands in dispute were pointed out by one T. C., acting as agent for the plaintiffs, to be measured as belonging to the defendant's talook. Held, the case must be remanded to the lower Appellate Court to determine (1) whether T. C. was the agent of the plaintiff; (2) whether, acting within the scope of his authority as such agent, he did sign the map as a correct map and pointed out the lands as belonging to the defendant; (3) and if so, how far these acts of the agent were binding on the plaintiffs SUDAKHINA CHOWDHURAN v RAJ MOHAN BOSE [3 B. 42. ——— Mooktear appointed by several co sharers.—

Authority of agent.—Evidence of general authority.—Where a general mooktear empowered to act on behalf of co-sharers does formal acts to enforce the rights of his principals (the zemindars), it is not necessary to trace back his authority in each case to the explicit sanction of every single member of the family. 44. ——— Pardanashin woman.—

Account stated.—A mooktearnama executed by a pardanashin woman appointed her husband to be her general mooktear, and declared that "all acts done by the said mooktear, such as giving and taking loans to and from others, executing on my behalf, getting executed in my favour, deeds of absolute sale," and so on, "shall be accepted by me." It was sought to render the principal liable, on an account stated by her husband as her mooktear so empowered, for a debt, without proof that the money constituting it had been borrowed on her account. Held, on the construction of the mooktearnama, that the mooktear had no authority to bind her by such a statement of account, whatever authority he might have had to bind her by an actual borrowing of money on her behalf. No implication of authority in the mooktear to bind the woman by his stated account had arisen from the carrying on of a course of business. Accordingly, when the evidence of express authority failed, the statement of account by the mooktear was insufficient to render the principal liable. No evidence was given of the items lent, so as to estab-

47. ———— Partnership in tea garden.

—Liability of partner for acts of managing partner.

—Authority of agent—By an agreement made on 22nd July 1862 between C and T (since deceased) and the defendants P. and S., C. agreed to sell, and T., P., and S. to purchase, a half share in the lands, plantation, and estate belonging to C., known as the Laojan Tea Estates and Grants. The agreement provided that C. was to conduct and manage all matters and affairs of the estates, but nothing was said as to its being done in his own name or in that of the partners of any firm. Money to carry on the business was provided by means of bills drawn by the local manager upon C. in the same manner as if he (C.) had been the sole owner, the defendants being fully aware of this and finding the funds. This mode of dealing continued down to the time of the transaction which is the subject of this suit. The only act in the way of notice to the public on the part of the defendants was a notification in a directory published by them in Calcutta (T., S., & Co. being booksellers and publishers), in which in the list of tea estates the Laojan concern was mentioned, and C., T., P., and S. named as proprietors. In the directory for 1870 and 1872 C. was also described as Calcutta agent. This suit was brought to recover a balance due in respect of moneys alleged to have been advanced by the plaintiffs on the tea to be manufactured in the season 1872, the plaintiffs being tea brokers who made the advances on the security of tea invoices and bills of lading. The terms on which the required advances were to be made were arranged by an agreement, dated 9th February 1872, between C. and the plaintiffs, who were under the belief that C. was the proprietor of the Laojan concern and not merely manager. By reason of C.'s death and the non-delivery of a portion of the season's tea, the plaintiffs were unable to reimburse themselves for their later advances, and brought the present suit against the defendants, who, they contended, were bound by all C.'s acts and dealings. Held by COUCH, C. J., that, assuming that the plaintiffs knew what was in the directory, it could not be considered as a notice to them that the authority which C. had been exercising, and which he continued to exercise with, so far as it related to bills and drafts drawn by the local manager, the knowledge of his partners, the defendants, had been determined, and that he had only the authority of an ordinary Calcutta agent. Held, also, that the question in the case was whether the transaction between C. and the plaintiffs was within the scope of the authority which C. had, or was allowed by his partners to appear to have, in managing and conducting the affairs and business of the partnership. It was a question of actual or apparent authority, and whether the transaction was one which the owner of a tea garden carrying on the cultivation of it would in the ordinary course of business enter into. Held, further, that the transaction would have been according to usage if C. had been the sole owner of the gardens, and the defendants, by allowing him to manage ostensibly as sole owner, clothed him with every authority incidental to a sole owner in that business. The defendants were therefore bound by the agreement of the 9th February 1872. SPINK v. MORAN

Under the articles of association of the Barce Tea Company, N. & Co. had power to "draw, accept, indorse, and negotiate on behalf of the Company all such cheques, promissory notes, drafts, &c., as should be necessary for enabling them to carry on the business of the Company." Purporting to act under this power, N. & Co. drew a bill of exchange on the managing agents of the Company, which was accepted by the latter, and indorsed by N. & Co. to the Oriental Bank Corporation, who credited the amount to N. & Co.'s general account. The amount was drawn out by cheques drawn by N. & Co. personally without reference to the Barce Tea Company, and there was no proof that the money had been applied for the purposes of the

51. ——— Agent acting out of scope of authority.—Liability of principal—Held that an agent who is appointed for the general management and conduct of business cannot bind his principal by an unusual contract, not strictly relating to the conduct of the business, unless he has express or implied authority for the same. The fact that a consignor dealt in good faith with the agent, who exceeded his authority, is not sufficient to bind the principal. The consignor dealing with the agent ought to satisfy himself of the agent's authority. The defendant, not having ratified his agent's act by receiving the benefit of the contract, cannot be bound by the acts of his agent and liable to make good the losses. MUDAREE LALL v. GILMORE

54. ——— Promise to redeem mortgage.—Consideration—Contract made by agent on his own behalf.—The plaintiff sued the defendant on mortgages executed to the plaintiff by the adoptive mothers of the defendant (who were also defendants) subsequently to his adoption. The plaintiff contended that the mortgages had become effectual as against the defendant by reason of his subsequent conduct. Evidence was given that he had promised his adoptive mothers to redeem the mortgages, and that he had stood by and allowed the plaintiff to carry out the provisions of the mortgage-deeds to his own detriment by paying maintenance to the defendant's adoptive mothers, and by paying off certain mortgages which had been created by them previously to the adoption of the defendant. Held that the defendant was not liable upon the mortgages. His promise to redeem the mortgages was not made to the plaintiff, but to his adoptive mothers, and there was no consideration for such promise as he made. Nor could the promise have the effect of ratification, for the ratification of the authorised contract of an agent can only be effectual when the contract has been made by the agent avowedly for or on account of the principal, and not when it has been made on account of the agent himself. SHIDDESHVAB v. Subsequent acquiescence by the mortgagor or his representative might be only an acquiescence in the mortgagee's act to the extent and in the qualified way in which his consent was given. BHAGEERUTH v. a plot of ground on the Esplanade in Bombay at any rate exceeding the price at which the defendant himself had purchased it, and agreed to give him as remuneration half of the net profit realised on the sale. The defendant subsequently revoked this authority, and the plaintiff shortly afterwards found a purchaser, whose offer the defendant did not accept. Held that the plaintiff could not recover on the agreement, which had not been performed on his part, that there was no ground for holding that the plaintiff and the defendant were partners in the transaction as between themselves; and that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover for work done as broker, or for commission, the nature of the agreement being that the plaintiff took the risk of the authority being revoked. *HURST v. 59. ——— Hereditary agency.—Contract.—Consideration.—Specific performance.—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 202, 203.—The defendant, by an agreement in the nature of a letter of attorney, constituted the plaintiff and his descendants the hereditary agents of the defendant, gave him authority to collect the rents of his share in an inam village, and promised to pay him an annual salary out of the rents. Held that, as between the parties and during their lifetime, the appointment was valid and binding, whether or not any valuable consideration passed,—the mere acceptance of the office by the plaintiff being a sufficient consideration for the appointment. But, independently of the terms of the agreement, and whether or not the agency had been created for valuable consideration, the defendant had, under the general provisions of section 203 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872), a right to revoke the authority, as the mere arrangement that the plaintiff's salary should be paid out of the rents could not be regarded as giving to the plaintiff an interest in the property, the subject-matter of the agency, within the meaning of section 202. If the defendant had revoked the agency improperly, the remedy lay, under ordinary circumstances, in a suit by the plaintiff for damages for breach of contract. Where, however, the plaintiff chose to sue for specific performance, and demanded arrears of salary,—Held that, without a valuable consideration for the defendant's promise, the agreement passed by him to the plaintiff would be nudum pactum, and the plaintiff would not be entitled to recover, except for work and services actually rendered. *VISENUCHARYA v. 65. ——— Carriage of goods by railway.—Goods passing over the lines of several companies—Agreement for interchange of traffic—Loss of goods—Liability.—The plaintiff delivered to the Madras Railway Company a bale of cloth for carriage from B, a station belonging to that company, to S, a station belonging to the defendants, the G I P Railway Company, and obtained from the Madras Company a receipt which recited that it was granted "subject to the rules and regulations and charges in force on that or any other railway over which the goods might pass." The goods were lost while on the line and in the charge of the defendants, the G. I. P. Railway Company, and the plaintiff sued them for damages for breach of the contract of carriage. Between the two railway companies there existed an agreement arranging for the interchange of traffic, which provided, inter alia, that goods should be booked through to and from all stations on both lines at certain stated rates, that in such cases one company should receive payment and should account to the other; that any claim for loss or damage should be paid by the company in whose custody the goods were when lost or damaged, or, if that could not be ascertained, then by both companies rateably; and that no alteration affecting the through traffic should be made by either company without previous notice to the other. The defendants pleaded that the suit was wrongly brought against them, as there was no contract between themselves and the plaintiff. Held that the suit, whether or not it might also have been brought against the Madras Railway Company, was rightly brought against the defendants, inasmuch as the agreement between the two companies, if it did not actually constitute a partnership between them, showed, at least, that the Madras Railway Company became the agents of the defendants to make the contract for carriage with the plaintiffs G I P RAILWAY COMPANY v RADHAKISAN KHUSHALDAS [I. 66. ——— Undisclosed principal.—

Settlement of accounts between principal and agent.—Right of unpaid vendor.—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 231, 232.—The defendant, who resided in Dholera, employed the firm of S K. as his agents in Bombay. A running account was kept, in which the defendant was debited with the price of goods purchased on his account by S K., and was credited with the price of goods sold by S K. on his account, and with the amount of the remittances which he made from time to time. In fulfilment of orders received from the defendant on 16th March 1879. S K., on the 23rd March 1879, bought from the plaintiff 20,000 cocoanuts (out of a cargo of 42,000 then lately arrived at Bombay), on the 24th March 1879, 10,160 cocoanuts (out of a cargo of 23,000); and on the 27th March, 26,626 cocoanuts (out of a cargo of 71,250). By each of these three contracts it was agreed that the purchase money should be paid on delivery. At the time of making these contracts the plaintiff did not know, nor had he any reason to suspect, that S. K. was an agent and not principal in the transactions. On the 27th and 28th March 1879, the 30,160 cocoanuts (the subject-matter of the first two contracts) were trans-shipped into the vessel Lakshmiprasad, and on the 29th March 1879, the 26,626 cocoanuts (the subject-matter of the third contract) were trans-shipped into the vessel Lalsari for conveyance to Dholera. The Lalsari sailed from Bombay on the 31st March, and on her arrival at Dholera the defendant obtained possession of the third lot of 26,626 cocoanuts which had been shipped on board. On the 1st April S K. received from the defendant remittances sufficient to pay for all the cocoanuts, and to leave a balance of Rs. 1,727 to the credit of the defendant in his account with S K. These remittances were made by the defendant in good faith, and were received by S. K. at a time when the plaintiff gave credit to S K. and did not know of any one else to be charged with the price of the cocoanuts. On the 2nd April the firm of S K stopped payment, and on the 3rd April 1879 the plaintiff, in consequence of the failure of S. K. and the non-payment of the price of the cocoanuts, trans-shipped the 30,160 cocoanuts (the subject of the first two contracts) from the Lakshmiprasad into the Ramprasad. These cocoanuts were subsequently sold, and the proceeds of the sale deposited in the Bank of Bombay to abide the result of this suit. On the 4th April the plaintiff discovered that the defendant was the principal in the coconut transaction, and brought this suit against him to recover the price of the three lots of cocoanuts. The defendant denied that S K had authority to pledge his (defendant's) credit in making purchases, and contended that, having in good faith paid his agent S K for the cocoanuts prior to the institution of the suit, he (the defendant) was not liable to the plaintiff. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. The rule of English law, which makes the liability of an undisclosed principal subject to the qualification that he has not bond fide paid the agent, or that the state of accounts has not been altered, is not adopted in the Contract Act. Section 232 is to be read as a qualification of the first portion of paragraph 1 of section 231, which gives a principal a general right to enforce a contract entered into by his agent. Section 232 qualifies that general right by making it subject to the rights and obligations subsisting between the agent and the other contracting party. The 2nd clause of paragraph 1 of section 231 gives a party contracting with an agent the same rights against the principal only as he would have had against the agent; and section 234 adds a further qualification to his rights as against the principal. Section 232 of the Contract Act adopts the qualification imposed by English law upon the right of the principal to enforce a contract,—viz, that he must take the contract subject to all the equities, in the same way as if the agent were the real principal; but it does not impose upon the right of the other contracting party the qualification laid down by the cases of Thompson v. Davenport, 2 Smith's L. C., 7th Ed., 364, and

Armstrong v Stokes, L R, 7 Q B, 598,—namely, that the principal has not paid the agent, or that the state of the account between the principal and agent has not been altered to the prejudice of the principal. PRINCIPAL AND AGENT—continued.5 LIABILITY OF PRINCIPAL—continued.*Fraud—continued.

The defence was that the contract was not so determined, and that even if it were, the defendant had a right of lien or set-off, which would cover the amount of the advances. This set-off consisted of the amount of loss in the sale of silk, which the defendants, after the said bankruptcy, had shipped direct to London, and sold there on non-acceptance by the plaintiffs; and of a claim of Rs18,024, the amount of a bill of the said agents which the defendant had accepted from them as payment for silk, but which bill was dishonoured after the said bankruptcy. Clause 6 of the agreement was as follows. "The silk to be paid for on delivery. Delivery to be taken within ten days of the arrival of any parcel in Calcutta, failing the payment within that time, Carr, Tagore, & Co. may sell it at the market price, and should this be under the contract rate, you agree to pay the difference." Clause 10 of the agreement was as follows. "As you have no authority to make advances previous to the receipt of the silk, and as Carr, Tagore, & Co stipulate for the advance in part of the sum which they are out of pocket, to carry on the filatures, the advances proposed being Rs50,000, at such times and in such portions as they may require after the delivery of the first parcel of silk under this contract, so that such advances shall not at any time be in excess of Rs50,000, beyond the silk delivered, for which interest at the rate of 6 per cent. will be allowed, and it is agreed that the question of advances shall be an open question; and that in the event of advances being authorised, the contract shall at once be in force." The lower Court held that under these two clauses the defendants could not resort to the advances for their set-off; that the plaintiffs were not liable for the Rs18,024, and that the contract was not determined. Plaintiff also alleged a series of frauds on the part of their agents, with whom defendants were in collusion, but these charges were abandoned at the hearing. Held that acceptance by the agent binds the principal where there is no fraud, that voluntary acceptance of an agent's bill as payment discharges the principal; that a contract is not determined by death or bankruptcy of an agent, unless there has been an express stipulation to that effect, that an impossibility of fulfilling the terms of a contract must be clearly established in order to avoid a liability for breach thereof, that when a place of delivery is specified in a contract, delivery must be made there; that the plaintiff having failed to prove alleged fraud in a deed, although entitled to relief under a distinct head of equity, will not be allowed to make a new case, and cannot, in the same suit, obtain a decree on the footing of the said deed, that amendment of a bill will not be allowed, if it appear that an account, being the relief attainable, would have been given if demanded, and that the plaintiff has not offered to perform his part of a contract and allow compensation for breaches thereof to the defendant and to pay any balance that should be found against him; that the mode of ascertaining damages for breach of contract prescribed in the contract must

In the letter to the manager he was asked to send Rs. 500 in currency notes through M, payment being promised by a remittance through another bank or through M. M delivered the letter to the manager, who upon the strength of it made over the notes to M, who gave a receipt for them for and on behalf of K, and afterwards handed them over to the person who had brought him the letter. The letters were forgeries. In a suit against M by the Bank to recover the money paid to M,—Held that, in presenting the letter, in receiving the notes, and in granting a receipt for them, the defendant was in some sense an agent of K; but inasmuch as the notes were given on the authority of the letter addressed to the plaintiff himself, and not in consequence of any representation made by the defendant, the latter could not be held liable for the loss sustained by the former. MOONEY v. first clause of the charter-party stated that the plaintiffs "agreed as agents for owners of the said steam-ship," and subsequent clauses provided that the owners should bind themselves to receive the cargo on board, and that the master on behalf of the owners should have a lien on the cargo for freight, &c. The charter-party was signed by the plaintiffs and defendants in their own names. The plaintiffs sued the defendants for breach of the charter-party in refusing to load the said steam-ship. Held that the plaintiffs had contracted as agents, and were therefore not entitled to sue. If a contract made by a person who is an agent is worded so as, when taken as a whole, to convey to the other contracting party the notion that the agent is contracting in that character, he cannot sue or be sued on the contract. Where one contracting party knows that the other is contracting as an agent for a third person whose name he also knows, the presumption laid down in clause 2 of section 230 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) does not arise, although at the time of making the contract the agent does not disclose the name of his principal. The essential point is the knowledge, and actual knowledge is equivalent to disclosure, the whole object of which would be to convey such knowledge. *MACKINNON, MACKENZIE, & Co., v. 84. Liability of agent—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 230—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92—Charter-party—Employment of stevedores to load and discharge cargo.—The defendants let a steam-ship to the plaintiff for a certain term, and signed a charter-party "by and on behalf of the owners of the steam-ship A." The charter-party was a time-charter to commence on arrival at Calcutta, and to terminate at one of certain ports; the steamer in the interim to ply to and from any port the charterers pleased. It was agreed that the steamer should be provided "with a proper and sufficient crew of seamen, engineers, stokers, firemen, and other necessary persons for working cargo with all despatch;" and that in taking and discharging cargo, "the master and his crew with his boats shall be aiding and assisting to the utmost of their power," and that "the owners or agents of the said steam-ship shall be held responsible to the said charterers for any incapacity, want of skill, insobriety, or negligence on the part of master, officers, engineers, stokers, firemen, or crew of the said steam-ship." The names of the principals were not disclosed in the charter-party, but were verbally disclosed before the charter-party was signed. In an action against the agents for damages for refusing to supply stevedores and other persons, in addition to the crew, when loading and discharging cargo,—Held that the presumption created by the second clause of section 230 of the Contract Act is merely a prima facie one and may be rebutted, and that the contract was not personally binding on the agents, because the prima facie presumption of an intention to contract personally was rebutted by the language of the contract itself. Held, also, that the terms of the charter-party showed that the crew only were to assist in loading and discharging cargo, and that the plaintiffs were not entitled to call on those responsible for the steamer to load and discharge cargo by stevedores instead of by the crew. Reading the second part of section 230 of the Contract Act with section 92 of the Evidence Act Semble,—That if, on the face of a written contract, an agent appears to be personally liable, he cannot escape liability by evidence of any disclosure of his principal's name apart from the contract. *SOOPROMONIAN SETTY v. 85. On 6th April 1865, A, who resided and carried on business at Bombay, through his gomastah at Calcutta, shipped on board the Sir Jamsetjee Family 268 bags of sugar, and received from the captain a bill of lading, by which he certified that they were shipped in good order and well conditioned on board the said ship bound for Bombay, to be there delivered in like good order and well conditioned to B, or his assigns, on payment of freight at Rs16 per ton. The bill of lading was subject to the usual exceptions. The vessel was at the time chartered to H. A., and C. and C. were agents for the owners. H. A. being unable to carry out the terms of the charter, there was a delay in the departure of the vessel. On 26th May 1865 A. wrote to C. and C., addressing them as agents of the ship "I beg to inform you that I have shipped per Sir Jamsetjee Family 268 bags of sugar for Bombay, I hold the bills of lading for the same, and the ship is still detained here. I hope you will be kind enough to let me know what you will do about the cargo,—if the said ship will sail for Bombay or trans-ship to any other vessel, or deliver the cargo here." To which C. and C. on the same day replied: "We shall be able to tell you in the course of a week or so what we propose doing with the ship Sir Jamsetjee Family; as soon as anything has been decided, due notice shall be given to the shippers of cargo already on board." On 1st June C. and C. again wrote "H. A. having failed to carry out his charter of the Sir Jamsetjee Family in terms of the shipping order, and sundry goods having been sent on board by him, of which the following are believed to be to your order, and for which bills of lading have been signed and delivered to H. A., we shall be glad to know whether you are willing that the said goods—268 bags of sugar—be trans-shipped to a steamer going to Bombay, at the current rate of freight, the bills of lading for the same being sent to the owners of the Sir Jamsetjee Family, to be delivered to the consignees of the goods upon production of the bills of lading already signed. You will, of course, understand that the goods are liable for the chartered rate,—viz., Rs20.10 per ton; and the charterer having failed to complete the loading, the difference of freight between what H. A. granted you a shipping order at and the freight charged by the steamer will have to be paid by the shipper previous to the goods being delivered in Bombay." On the 8th June A replied "I am agreed that my goods be trans-shipped to a steamer going to Bombay at the current rate of freight, but I must not pay the difference of freight, whatever it may be. In regard to H A, I, have nothing to do with them, as the bills of lading per Sir Jamsetjee Family for 268 bags of sugar being signed by the captain of the same at the rate of freight, Rs16 per ton, I am liable for the same only. If you are willing to trans-ship my said goods to a steamer at the same rate of freight, I am willing and must pay it, otherwise you will kindly order to deliver my goods from Sir Jamsetjee Family here." C and C accepted and acted on the proposal in the last letter. The sugar was trans-shipped from the Sir Jamsetjee Family to the Gunga, from the mate of which C and C obtained a receipt, stating that the goods had been shipped in good order, &c. The goods were afterwards removed without the knowledge of C and C from the Gunga to another steamer, the Mula, which belonged to the same owners. Subsequently C and C gave up the receipt from the mate of the Gunga, and obtained in exchange a bill of lading signed by the agents for the captain of the Mula. The bill of lading stated the receipt of goods (in which were included those of A) from C and C, and made them deliverable to order of C and C at Bombay, and receipt of freight for the whole at Rs15 per ton was admitted. A knew that his goods had been put on board the Mula, and got his policy of insurance, which was against a total loss only, transferred. There were inserted in red ink in the bill of lading when given to A the words, "Bags all more or less in bad order and torn; contents damaged and rotten, marks indistinct, not responsible for marks or condition of packages or contents." The Mula proceeded on her voyage, but returned to Calcutta with her cargo damaged by the perils of the sea. 260 of A's bags of sugar were condemned and sold in Calcutta, under the authority of the agents of the Mula, without notice to C and C or to A, and neither were aware that the sale was about to take place. The remaining eight bags were sent to Bombay in another ship by the agents of the Gunga and Mula, and were received by A. Held (overruling PHAR, J) that C and C were agents only of the owners of the Sir Jamsetjee Family; but had C and C been liable as agents for A, they would not have been liable for the full value of the goods damaged by the perils of the sea. Quære.—If C and C had expressly, as agents of the owners of the Sir Jamsetjee Family, contracted to trans-ship and deliver at Bombay, according to the terms of the bill of lading, would they have been personally liable? Semble.—A contract made with express reference to a principal, though not by name, would not render the agent personally liable as the agent of an undisclosed principal. COWIE v DHURMSEE POONJABHOY. . . 2 Ind. referred, "Defendants contracted with plaintiffs as agents of the captain and owners of a certain ship then in the Madras Roads. The plaintiffs were aware of this at the time when the contract was made. The captain was at the time in charge of his ship. At the time of the contract nothing was said by either party as to the person or persons on whose credit the contract was made,—all that occurred being that defendants, known by plaintiffs to be acting as agents for the captain and owners of the ship, agreed with plaintiffs to carry certain of their goods on board the ship to Calcutta. The defendants did not at the time of the contract in terms say that they contracted only as agents. The plaintiffs did not know the names of the owners, nor of the captain; nor had they any further or other knowledge of the latter than that which his designation by his office of master of the ship conveyed." Held that, in the absence of anything more than knowledge that the defendants were acting as agents of the master and owners of a ship in the Roads, a decision declaring the agents liable was strictly in accordance with English law. PATER v GORDON

87. ——— Captain and officers of man-of-war.—Damage occasioned by treatment of stranded ship without consent of owner.—A, the captain of a man-of-war, gave written instructions to B, his lieutenant, concerning a certain ship which was stranded. The official instructions contained the following passage. "You will in all emergencies act as your discretion and judgment direct." At the same time A sent a demi-official letter to B, in which, after several directions having reference to the disposal of the cargo, he added, "After getting all you can, I should think that the wreck ought to be burnt, but all is left to your discretion and judgment." In pursuance of these orders the wreck was burnt without the consent of the owner. A subsequently ratified the act of his subordinate. Held, first, that A, by the expressions used in the demi-official letter, rendered himself liable as principal, and second, that B, as the agent directly concerned in causing the burning of the ship, was liable jointly with A, to the owner for the damage occasioned thereby. ABDOOLA BIN SHAIK ALLY v STEPHENS

The contract for the work was signed by the appellant alone, and it provided (among other things) that F was to be allowed Rs20,000 out of every Rs1,00,000 paid to the appellant. By another agreement it was stipulated that the work should be examined and checked by F or his agents. The appellant was discharged before the completion of the

Applying the law of England and Scotland and the general law of Europe to this country, it was held that when a surety has paid off the debt of his principal, not only are all the collateral securities transferred to the surety, but by what is called subrogation the right is also transferred to him to stand in the place of the original creditor, and to use against the principal debtor every remedy which the principal creditor himself could have used. Accordingly the surety is not debarred from proceeding against the original debtor upon the instrument itself which created the debt, by reason of the debt having been paid by himself. *HEERA LALL SAMANT v. 6. ———— Liability on bond.—Running account—Appropriation of payments—Joint bond.—Notice to surety of default—A principal and two sureties executed in favour of a bank a joint bond to secure the payment of a sum placed to the cash credit loan account of the principal, together with interest, and the premia on a policy of life assurance, within one year from the date of the bond. At the end of the year a considerable sum remained unpaid, but the principal continued dealing with the bank, and the account was continued for three years after the date of the bond as a running account, during which time divers sums were paid in by the principal, more than sufficient to discharge the amount due at the end of the first year from the date of the bond, and divers sums were in like manner drawn out. In a suit brought by the bank against the sureties to recover the amount due at the end of the first year, it was held that, inasmuch as the whole account from the date of the bond to the end of the principal's dealing with the bank had been treated as a running account, all payments made by the principal to the bank were to be appropriated to the earliest items in the account, and inasmuch as all the moneys due on the bond at the end of the first year were thereby satisfied, no amount remained due on the bond. Semble,—That for the purpose of giving persons

28. — Bills of exchange.—Deposit of goods as collateral security for repayment.—Sale by creditor of goods deposited as security.—A. drew five bills in favour of B. on F & Co., who accepted them and got them discounted by the Bank of Bengal, and on their becoming due procured their renewal. F & Co. subsequently drew three bills on the Bank; and for securing as well the repayment of the principal sum due on these bills and interest, as of all sums which the Bank had already advanced or should advance on account of the drawers, deposited as collateral security various quantities of Chili copper of a larger amount in value than the advances then made. By a condition in these bills, the Bank was authorised, in default of payment within the time stipulated, to dispose of the copper by public or private sale, and to reimburse themselves the principal and interest due thereon. Shortly afterwards F & Co. failed, and assignees of their estate and effects were appointed under the Insolvent Act. On presentation to A. of the first of the renewed bills, he served notice on the Bank not to part with the securities deposited with them, alleging that the bills drawn and renewed by him were accommodation bills, for which he had not received any consideration, and were renewed on the faith of the securities being applicable to their discharge. The assignees of F & Co. redeemed the copper by paying to the Bank the amount of the principal and interest due on the bills drawn by F & Co., all the bills drawn by A. were dishonoured, and the Bank of Bengal brought an action against A. for their amount. On a bill filed by A., the Bank was restrained by injunction from proceeding with the action at law. Held on appeal by the Judicial Committee, discharging the injunction and reversing the decree of the Supreme Court, that, under the circumstances, the redemption of the securities was a sale within the meaning of the condition contained in the deposit bills, and that such sale was not a release to A. as surety for the previous bills, the condition not being that the copper or the proceeds thereof should be applied preferentially or pari passu with the other debts, but simply in reimbursement to the Bank of the principal and interest due on the bills. *BANK OF BENGAL v. 29. ——— Agreement for payment of decree, or in default to execute it.—Failure to execute it on default.—Act IX of 1872, ss. 134, 137, 139, and 141.—A decree-holder, in execution proceedings, agreed to accept payment of the decretal amount by the judgment-debtors in annual instalments. He also accepted from certain other persons a surety-bond in the following terms: "In case of default of paying the instalments, the whole decretal money, with costs and interest at 8 annas per cent., shall be executed after one month; and for the satisfaction of the decree-holder we, the executants, stand as sureties of the judgment-debtors." The judgment-debtors paid five instalments and then made default. The decree-holder omitted to apply for execution, and the decree became time-barred. He then sued the sureties to recover the amount of the decree. Held that the terms of the bond requiring the creditor to execute his decree within one month were peremptory, and imported much more than the usual agreement under such circumstances; that the decree-holder might execute his decree, if he pleased, on a default; that the legal consequence of his omission to execute the decree being the discharge of the principal debtors, the sureties would, under section 134 of the Contract Act, stand discharged likewise; that his action was much more serious than "mere forbearance" in favour of his debtors, in the sense of section 137; that he had done an act inconsistent with the equities of the sureties, and omitted to do an act which his duty to them (under the agreement) required, whereby their eventual remedy against the principal debtors was impaired (section 139); that he had deprived the sureties of the benefit of the security constituted by the decree; that they were therefore discharged to the extent of the value of that security (section 141); and that the suit must consequently be dismissed. *HAZARI v. 30. ——— Giving time to principal.—Execution of subsequent agreement unknown to surety.—A and his surety B. executed a bond to C. for the faithful discharge of A.'s duties as a gomastah. In September 1866, upon accounts being rendered, A. was found indebted to C. in a certain sum of money. A. thereupon executed an ikrar to C., which was accepted by C. agreeing thereby to pay the amount due in February following. On default being made, C. sued A. and B. for the amount due. Held that the acceptance of the ikrar, without the knowledge or consent of B. giving time for payment, was a discharge to the surety. *PURI SUNDARI DEBI v. 34. ——— Acceptance of interest in excess or advance.—Discharge of surety.—In an action against a surety for principal and interest payable on a promissory note, —Held, overruling the decision of the Court below (MACPHERSON, J.), that the creditor, by the mere acceptance, without the knowledge or consent of the surety, of interest in excess of what was due on the note, bound himself to give time to the principal debtor, and thereby discharged the surety. *KALI PRASANNA ROY v. 37. ————— Suit on hundi.—Accommodation.—Acceptance.—The defendant, in the course of dealings with S. A. of Patna, used to draw hundis at Patna on himself at Calcutta, and sell them to S. A. at Patna; S. A. sometimes only paying part of the consideration for the hundi. On 13th September 1867 the defendant drew a hundi for Rs2,500, payable forty-one days after date, in the usual way, and it was stipulated between him and S. A. that the value should be paid by S. A. in three days. On 15th September, the plaintiff in Calcutta discounted the hundi in the ordinary course of business, paying for it Rs2,468, or thereabouts. It then purported to be accepted by the defendant in favour of S. A. Before the hundi fell due, S. A. failed, and the plaintiff took the hundi to the defendant in Calcutta, and informing him of S. A.'s failure, asked him to pay the hundi. The defendant admitted he had drawn the hundi, denied he had accepted it, and refused to pay, saying (he alleged) that he had received no consideration for it. Before the failure of S. A., who had not paid the consideration as stipulated, the defendant pressed him for payment of the consideration for the hundi, and S. A. wrote and delivered to the defendant the following letter, dated September 16th, 1867, from himself to his firm in Calcutta. "Further, I sent you a chitti (hundi) for Rs2,500, drawn by Bhugwan Das (the defendant) upon Bhugwan Das upon (us), Calcutta; value deposited by me on September 13th, 1867, payable forty-one days after date in Company's rupees. I have taken a hundi of this description, which you will pay on its due date. The money has not been paid, for which I give this puja in writing, which you will know." After S. A.'s failure, and after the defendant's refusal to pay on the due date, the plaintiff made the arrangement with S. A., which is embodied in the following letter from S. A. to the plaintiff, dated November 3rd, 1867. "Further, I discounted with you at Calcutta hundis for Rs5,000, which one Pitam Das coming to Calcutta were paid off in the following manner a hundi for Rs2,500 drawn by Bhugwan Das on Bhugwan Das, value deposited by me on the 15th day of the light side of the moon in Bhadra, payable forty-one days after date in Company's rupees; and a hundi for Rs2,590 by Gapi Shaw, Debi Shaw, Radha Shaw, Ram Sahayi Roy, value deposited by me on 14th day of the light side of the moon in Bhadra, payable forty-one days after date in Company's rupees. I discounted hundis of this description, and out of them I paid Rs2,200 in cash through Syad Mahomed Hossein Khan Sahib. The balance, Rs2,800, is due, the condition for payment of which is as follows (here follows the manner in which payment was to be made): I made an agreement of this sort, and I will pay the whole of the amount, inclusive of interest at 8 annas and will take the two hundis from Bhai Ram Kissen Futteh Chund, with whom they are kept. Should I not pay the money according to this condition, then you have the authority." For the defendant it was contended that the effect of the letter of 16th September was to make the defendant a surety only for S. A.; that the plaintiff had notice of this at the time of entering into the agreement giving time to S. A.; which therefore operated as a release to the defendant. In a suit by the plaintiff to recover the amount of the hundi from the defendant, the Court found that it was not proved that the hundi had been accepted by the defendant, but held that, whether the effect of the agreement contained in the letter of September 16th was to make the defendant a surety only or not, the defendant was liable. PER NORMAN, J.—Notice of the defendant's position in regard to the hundi was not communicated to the plaintiff. PER MACPHERSON, J.—The agreement contained in the letter of 16th September did not alter the position of the parties so as to make S. A. the principal debtor, and the defendant his surety. HARJIBAN DAS v. BHUGWAN DAS

ment to purchase certain premises. This agreement had been made on behalf of the plaintiffs by S, their agent in Bombay. The defendant pleaded that by the terms of the agreement it was provided that the deed of assignment should contain a covenant by the three plaintiffs to indemnify the defendant against any claims upon the premises that might be made at any time by or on behalf of the representatives of one N. The defendant's solicitor prepared a draft assignment which contained this covenant, and sent it to the plaintiffs' solicitors (Messrs P and W.) for approval. On the 19th March 1880, W called upon B, the defendant's solicitor, and informed him that M, the third plaintiff, refused to sign any deed which contained the above covenant. At this interview W read to B portions of a letter written with reference to the proposed deed by McG & Co (solicitors for the first two plaintiffs) to V, the solicitor of the third plaintiff, and of another letter written by V to his client, the third plaintiff. The defendant called upon the plaintiff to produce these letters for inspection. Held that the letters were privileged, and that the fact that portions of them had been read to the defendant's solicitor was no waiver of the privilege as regarded the parts which were not read. *KAY v. 1. APPEALS FROM INTERLOCUTORY ORDERS.

1. — There is no law which requires a suit or to appeal from interlocutory orders under penalty of forfeiting for ever the benefit of the consideration of the Appellate Court. The Privy Council have, in many cases, corrected erroneous interlocutory orders on the appeal of the whole cause coming before them. MOHESHUR SINGH v. GOVERNMENT OF INDIA [3 W. R., P. 2 ENLARGING TIME FOR APPEAL.

2. ——— Jurisdiction of Judicial Committee as to application to enlarge time for appeal — The Judicial Committee have no jurisdiction to entertain an application for extension of time to appeal until the petition of appeal is lodged. Where it appeared that an inquiry was pending before the Master in the Court below, arising out of the decree which was the subject of the appeal, the result of which might render the prosecution of the appeal unnecessary, the Judicial Committee enlarged the time prescribed by Rule 5 of the Order in Council of 13th June 1853 for prosecution thereof, until further order. GUNGADHUR SEAL v. RADDAMONEY DOSSEE [6 Moore's I. A., 209

3. SPECIAL LEAVE TO APPEAL.

3. ——— Form of petition.—Amendment of a petition too general and vague — It is incumbent upon a party applying for special leave to appeal to set out in the petition a full statement of the facts and legal grounds, to show that there is a substantial case on the merits, and a point of law involved, proper to be determined by the Appellate Court. A petition for special leave to appeal contained a general statement of the proceedings in India, and an averment that they were irregular and contrary to law. Such petition ordered to be dismissed or to stand over for amendment as being too general and vague. On the amended petition, stating in detail the facts, and specifically showing legal grounds of objection to the decrees and order of the Court below refusing leave to appeal, special leave to appeal was granted. GOREE MONEE DOSSEE v. JUGGUT INDRO NARAIN CHOWDEY . 11 Moore's I. A., 1

4. ——— Application for special leave. —Omission of material facts.—Costs — A petition for special leave to appeal being ex parte, it is a universal and most important rule of the Court that every fact which is material to the determination of the question raised upon the petition should be truly and fairly stated, and where there is an omission of material facts, whether it arises from improper intention on the part of the petitioner, or whether it arises from accident or negligence, still the effect is the same, if the Court has been induced to make an order which, if the facts had been fully before it, it would not, or might not, have been induced to make. Where the Court was of opinion that there had been no intentional misrepresentation, and that there had been delay on the other side, it discharged an order giving special leave to appeal where an important fact had been kept from the Court, without costs, remarking that it would have thought it right, whether the mistake was intentional or not, to have given costs, had it not been for the delay. MOHUN LALL SOOKUL v. BEBEE DOSS . 8 Moore's I. A., 193

5 ——— Incorrect statement of facts.—Incorrect statement as to valuation. —In this case the Privy Council originally gave leave to appeal, provided satisfactory evidence were supplied by the appellants to the Registrar of the Sudder Court that the real or market value of the land in dispute exceeded R10,000. This order was subsequently discharged as obtained upon an incorrect statement of the facts, it appearing afterwards that the appellants had satisfied the Registrar that the real or market value of the land exceeded R10,000. The appeal was restored, with a general suggestion that the terms of the Bengal Stamp Regulation, X of 1829, upon the subject of value should be carefully attended to. MOHUN LALL SOOKUL v. DEBEE DOSS DUTT . 2 W. R., P. C., 9 [8 Moore's I. A., 492

6 ——— Counter-petition to dismiss appeal.—Leave to appeal granted ex parte. —If leave to appeal be granted ex parte, the respondent may, as a matter of course, present a counter-petition to dismiss the appeal. SIBNARAIN GHOSE v. HULLODHUR DOSS . 6 Moore's I. A., 207

7. ——— Appeal in matter not strictly appealable.—Stat 3 & 4 Will IV, c. 41. — Where a matter has been referred by Her Majesty to the Judicial Committee which is not strictly an appealable grievance their Lordships may, under the reservations contained in 3 and 4 William IV, Cap. 41, advise Her Majesty to grant the petitioner leave to appeal. MORGAN v. LEECH [2 Moore's I. A., 428

8. ——— Special leave where no application made in India.—Case under appealable value —The Judicial Committee will not entertain an application for special leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council from a decree of the High Court where the subject-matter in suit is under the appealable value prescribed by sections 39 and 40 of the Bombay Charter of 1862, unless the petitioner has applied to the High Court for such leave and has been refused. GUNGOWA KOME MALUFA v. EBAWA KOME JOGARA . 13 Moore's I. A., 433

9. ——— Special leave where application in India not made within time — Order giving interest on amount of decree. —Leave to appeal was granted on payment of costs from an order of the Sudder Court at Bombay decreeing interest upon the amount awarded by the judgment of the Court, the appellant having failed to apply to the Court in India within six months as required by the Order in Council of 16th April 1838. KIRKLAND v. MODER PESTONJEE KHOORSHEDJEE

[3 Moore's I. A., 220]

10. ———— Alteration of practice by High Court.—Appeal from original decree and order refusing review.—Pending proceedings before the High Court on an application for a review of judgment, that Court altered the then prevailing practice of permitting an appeal within six months from the date of the judgment allowing or refusing a review. In such circumstances, the six months prescribed by the Order in Council of the 16th April 1838 from the date of the decree having expired, special leave to appeal from the original decree and the order refusing a review was allowed. NOGENDRO CHUNDER GHOSE v. MAHOMED EUSUFF

[12 Moore's I. A., 107]

11. ———— Case under appealable value.
—Subject-matter at issue exceeding appealable value.
—Special leave to appeal granted notwithstanding that no application had been made for such leave to the Court below, upon the allegation that, though the amount decreed was much under the appealable value, the original demand being necessarily limited by the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit was originally instituted, yet the subject-matter at issue exceeded in value the appealable amount. MUTUSAWMY JAGATHRA YETTAPA NAIKER v. VENKATASWARA YETTIA

[10 Moore's I. A., 313]

[1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 205]

12. ———— Leave granted on terms.—Provision for payment of compensation agreed on.—Where the Court grants leave to appeal under the general jurisdiction of the Queen in Council, it will impose such terms upon the party applying as the special circumstances of the case require. Appeal admitted from an order confirming the report of the Commissioners in a partition suit, although the appealable value was under Rs10,000, the amount prescribed by the Order in Council of the 10th April 1838. The petitioner (the plaintiff) had offered to compensate the defendant if the report of the Commissioners was varied. The Judicial Committee, in granting leave to appeal, put the petitioner upon terms of lodging in the Council office, within four months, a certificate of recognisance to the Queen in the sum of £1,500 for such compensation and costs as might be awarded. IN RE SIBNARAIN GHOSE

[5 Moore's I. A., 322]

13. ———— Value of the subject-matter disputed.—The value of the subject-matter in dispute, though laid in the plaint at a sum exceeding the minimum amount, Rs10,000, was reduced on calculation by the Zillah Judge to an amount under that sum, and the finding on the merits was for the plaintiff for such reduced sum. In a cross-appeal the Sudder Court dismissed the entire claim, and, on the ground that the matter in dispute was

[4 W. R., P. C., 55]

16. ———— Question on which the decision of many suits depended.—Special leave to appeal given in a case involving a question of tenure service, called chakeran, although the subject-matter in dispute was below the appealable value; there being many other suits depending on the decision of the case. JOYKISSEN MOOKERJEE v. COLLECTOR OF EAST BURDWAN

[8 Moore's I. A., 265]

17. ———— Leave granted on terms as to payment of costs.—Question of jurisdiction.—The Supreme Court, in overruling the objections to the jurisdiction of the Court, refused leave to appeal, the subject-matter of the action being trifling and under the amount required by the rules of the Privy Council. On petition, the Judicial Committee granted leave to appeal, but upon terms of the East India Company paying the respondent's costs of the appeal, to enable him to appear, to prevent the question being argued ex parte. SPOONER v. JUDDOW

[4 Moore's I. A., 353]

18. ———— Leave in suits consolidated by consent.—Valuation.—Special leave to appeal granted in a suit which had been consolidated by consent of both parties. A defendant to a suit having adopted a certain valuation, cannot in the same suit object to that valuation. KRISTO INDRO SAHA v. HUROMONER DOSSEE

20. — Order as to custody of child.—Child with Christian father and Mahomedan mother—Special leave to appeal allowed from an order of the High Court of Judicature for the North-West Provinces of India, by which order an infant daughter was taken from the custody of her mother, a Mahomedan, on the ground that the minor's deceased father had been a professed Christian, and her mother, who was, as the Court held, living in adultery, was inducing her daughter to adopt the faith and habits of a Mahomedan. Liberty given, pending the hearing of the appeal, to the petitioner to apply to the High Court to have access at suitable times to her daughter. IN THE MATTER OF SKINNER alias NAWSHABA BEGUM

21. — Order as to important question of law.—Special leave to appeal was granted to try the question whether, under the Registration Act, 1871, a Zillah Judge can review an order of his own Court refusing to register a document. REASUT HOSSEIN v. ABDULLAH . L. R., 1 I. A., 72

22. — Appeal from Non-Regulation Provinces.—Stat 3 & 4 Will. IV., c 41.—No provision by Statute or Charter being made for appeal to Her Majesty in Council from judgments of the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh, created on the annexation of that kingdom in the year 1858, the Judicial Committee, to prevent the denial of justice, admitted an appeal under Statute 3 and 4, William IV., Cap 41. SALIK RAM v. AZIM ALI BEG

[1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 117: 8 Moore's I. A., 270]

23. — Order suspending pleader for misconduct.—Act XX of 1865—The High Court, acting regularly within its jurisdiction, suspended a pleader from practice for misconduct. The Judicial Committee, not being prepared to say, from the materials before it, that the High Court's conclusion on a pure question of fact was wrong, refused to grant special leave to appeal. It would not have followed, even if more doubt had been entertained on such a question, that an appeal would have been granted against Judges so acting. IN THE MATTER OF QUARRY

24. — Leave to appeal on terms.—Counter-petition to revoke leave—Leave to appeal on an ex parte application was, under the special circumstances, granted on terms of the appellant prosecuting the appeal and giving security for £500. No step was, however, taken by the appellant to perfect the security or prosecute the appeal. The respondents, on being served with the order admitting the appeal, filed a counter-petition to revoke the leave granted to appeal. The Judicial Committee under the circumstances, there having been great delay, made an order putting the appellant upon terms of lodging his petition of appeal within six weeks, or the appeal to stand dismissed, and enlarged the amount of the recognisance to £1,000 to cover the expenses occasioned by proceedings which, owing to appellant's delay in appealing, had taken place in the Master's office, reserving the costs of the application to revoke the leave to appeal until the hearing. McKELLAR v. WALLACE . . . 5 Moore's I. A., 372

25. — Time for making application.—Application nunc pro tunc.—Special appeal, Appeal from order on.—Judgments of lower Court on facts—Where a case has been heard by the High Court on special appeal, and on appeal to the Privy Council it is desired to include in the appeal the decisions of the lower Courts on the facts, an application for special leave to do so should be made previous to the hearing. The Judicial Committee will not, as a rule, allow a petition of appeal from those decisions to be put in at the hearing, nunc pro tunc. GOLAM ALI v KALLY KISHEN THAKOOR

26. — Application nunc pro tunc.—Leave to appeal granted without authority.—Preliminary objection—An objection that an appeal has come before the Judicial Committee without proper authority ought to be taken at the earliest moment, but may be entertained at any stage of the appeal, and is not unfrequently heard when the appeal is called on and before the arguments on the merits have commenced. An appeal being called on, and before the case was gone into on the merits, the objection was taken by the respondent and appeared to be well founded. The appellant thereupon applied to the Judicial Committee to grant him special leave to appeal nunc pro tunc. Held that it was competent to the Judicial Committee to grant such special leave, but leave was refused under the particular circumstances of the case. GAJADHAR PERSAD v. WIDOWS OF EMAM ALI BEG

27. — Appeal by one of two defendants severed in defence.—Alternative liability—Two sets of defendants severed in their defence (their interests involving an alternative as to which was responsible to the plaintiff), and the Court below fixed one set of the defendants with liability. 28. ——— Allowing respondent to defend after great delay in appearing.—Leave on terms.—Where the respondent did not appear, the appeal was after two years set down for hearing ex parte. Before the hearing the respondent appeared, and moved under special circumstances to postpone the hearing for six months to enable him to lodge his case. The Judicial Committee put him upon terms of having the appeal heard at the next sittings, restraining him from doing anything in the interval to the prejudice of the fund in the Court below, and with payment of the costs of the application WATSON v. SREEMUNT LALL KHAN

[5 Moore's I. A., 447]

29. ——— Delay of respondents in entering appearance.—Service of peremptory notice on respondent—No appearance having been entered by the respondents to an appeal from India, and the appellants being ready with their case for hearing, their Lordships, on the application of the appellant, made an order that the respondents should be served with notice that unless they brought in their case without delay, the appeal would be heard ex parte; giving the appellant liberty to proceed in the Court below, to render such service effectual, and the Court was ordered to certify to the Judicial Committee what had been done with respect to the same. WISE v. KISHEN COOMAR BOSE

. 4 Moore's I. A., 201

5. CROSS-APPEAL.

30. ——— Admission of cross-appeal after time.—Admission on conditions—A cross-appeal from a decree of the Sudder Court in India, although not interposed within the proper time, admitted upon conditions (1) of the principal appeal being prosecuted, and (2) that the principal and cross-appeals be consolidated and heard on one printed case. OMANATH CHOWDHRY v. NUJEEB CHOWDHRY

[8 Moore's I. A., 498]

31. ——— Mistake of respondents as to practice—Cross-appeal allowed from part of a decree of the Sudder Court appealed from to England, although the respondents had not applied in India for leave to appeal within the proper time, the respondents being mistaken in the practice of the Judicial Committee upon a cross-appeal. Such cross-appeal directed to be prosecuted and heard upon one printed case if the principal appeal was proceeded with; but in the event of the principal appeal being dismissed for want of prosecution, liberty was reserved to the respondents to prosecute the cross-appeal as a separate appeal. NANA NARAIN RAO v. 6. VALUATION OF APPEAL.

33. ——— Mode of valuation.—Appeal to Privy Council.—Appealable value—Stamp on plaint.—Beng. Reg. X of 1829, s. 17.—In estimating the appealable value for an appeal to the Privy Council by order of 10th April 1838, viz., ₹10,000, regard should be had to the whole matter involved in the suit, and not to the value of a fractional part of the property sought to be recovered. A suit was brought to recover a zemindari in the possession of different persons under deeds of sale in execution of a decree. The value of the property was, by Bengal Regulation X of 1829, stated in the plaint to be ₹14,325. The Sudder Court upheld the sales so far as related to the claim of some of the defendants. The other defendants applied for leave to appeal to England, which the Sudder Court refused, on the ground that, as the value of their portion was only ₹8,215, it was not within the appealable value; but this construction was overruled by the Judicial Committee, and leave was granted to appeal. Quare,—Whether the stamp on the plaint required by Regulation X of 1829, section 17, being for fiscal purposes only, is conclusive of the value of the property sued for. AMEENA KHATOON v. 38. ——— Valuation in plaint—Evidence—The amount of the stamp upon the plaint is not conclusive of the value of the subject-matter of the suit. By the procedure of the Native Courts the value of the suit for the purpose of the stamp duty is assessed at three times the annual rent payable to Government in respect of the property sued for. Held, on an ex parte petition for leave to appeal in a case in which the value was laid in the plaint as being under Rs10,000, that as the calculation was estimated with reference to the stamp duty only, leave to appeal would be granted conditionally upon the production of satisfactory evidence in India by the petitioner, and transmitted with the transcript, that the real or market value of the property exceeded Rs10,000, otherwise the leave granted to be null and of no effect. 41. ——— Refusal to stay proceedings.—Appeal specially admitted by Privy Council.—By a decree of the Sudder Court at Calcutta a suit was remanded to the Zillah Court to be tried de novo. An appeal to England from this decree was refused, but, upon special application, was admitted by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council; whereupon the appellant applied to the High Court at Calcutta to stay proceedings pending the appeal to England, on the ground that the decision of the Appellate Court would govern the question at issue, which application that Court refused. The appellant then presented a petition to Her Majesty in Council, and applied ex parte for the same relief, but the Judicial Committee, in the respondent's absence, refused to make any order, though without prejudice to the petitioner's further application when he had served the respondent PELLADH SEIN v. 42. ——— Application to stay proceedings without appealing from order refusing to stay them.—Appeal from order of remand—Delay in applying—Application to stay proceedings in a case in which an appeal from an order in the nature of an interlocutory order is pending before Her Majesty in Council, ought satisfactorily to show that a serious injury will be the result to the party applying unless the delay asked for be granted, and that the party applying has come promptly to make the application. Where, therefore, an appellant from an order of the High Court of Judicature which remitted back a cause appealed to that Court from the Zillah Court, for the trial of issues framed in accordance with the provisions of Act XIII of 1859, section 139, having failed in obtaining an order from the High Court to stay proceedings in the Zillah Court pending the appeal, but not having appealed from that decision, presented a petition to Her Majesty in Council praying that all proceedings in the remanded suit might be stayed till the pending appeal had been heard, the Judicial Committee, without determining the question of their right to interfere in such circumstances, held that the petitioner had not shown any such injury, or used such expedition as entitled him to ask for a stay of proceedings. Quære,—Whether, where an order has been made by the superior Court below, refusing to stay proceedings, and such order is not specially appealed from, the Judicial Committee have any authority to interfere, though an appeal is pending before them from a previous order of the superior Court made in the same suit, remitting the cause back to the inferior Court before which it is pending. On the appeal being opened, the Court postponed the hearing for six months, to enable the Official Assignee in insolvency in Calcutta to revive the appeal and prosecute the same, and in default the appeal to be dismissed; and directed the respondents to serve the Official Assignee in India with such notice. XVI of 1845, amending Act XXIX of 1841, enacts that it is competent to the Sudder Court in the case of the dismissal of an appeal for want of prosecution, upon the application of the appellant within three months after the appeal has been dismissed, to re-admit the appeal, if the appellant satisfies the Court that the dismissal was "occasioned by the default of his vakil or by unavoidable accident." An appeal was made to the Sudder Court at Calcutta, but in consequence of the absence from illness of the appellant's mooktear the written reasons of appeal were not lodged within six weeks, the time prescribed by Act XV of 1853, section 6, and the appeal was dismissed. Upon application for re-admission of the appeal, the evidence showed that there had been no wilful delay, and that the appellant was in ignorance of the fact of the reasons of appeal not having been filed. Held, reversing the decree of the Sudder Court, that such circumstances constituted a case of "unavoidable accident" within the meaning of Act XVI of 1845, and the appeal was ordered to be re-admitted on the file of pending causes. In reversing the decree of the Sudder Court, the order of that Court that the costs of the application to re-admit the appeal should be paid by the appellants, was confirmed; but as the appellants were successful in obtaining a reversal of the decree of the Court below, the costs of the appeal in England against such decree were ordered to be paid by the respondents. ANUNDMOYEE DOSSEE v. 53. ——— Appeal dismissed by reason of guardian absconding and abandoning case.—Power to rectify mistakes in orders—By the Common Law the Judicial Committee possesses the same power as the Courts of Record and Statute have, of rectifying mistakes which have crept in by misprision or otherwise in embodying its judgments. Where, therefore, an order had been made ex parte upon the appearance of the respondents alone for the dismissal of an appeal, and affirmance of the judgment of the Court below which purported to be upon the hearing of the cause, the Judicial Committee held that such order must be taken simply as a dismissal; and it appearing that the appellants were infants under the protection of the Court of Wards in India, and that the agent appointed by the Court to act as their guardian ad litem in the matter of the appeal had absconded and abandoned the cause, their Lordships rescinded the order of dismissal, and restored the appeal on the terms of the appellant's paying the costs and giving access to the transcript of the proceedings in the Court below, in their hands, and undertaking to lodge the case within five months. RAJUNDER NARAIN RAE v. On appeal by the plaintiff in which the intervenor did not appear, the lower Appellate Court merely reversed the decree of the first Court, and the High Court affirmed the decree of the lower Appellate Court. The Privy Council, while affirming the decree of the High Court, observed that the question as to the form of the decree ought to have been raised before the High Court, if it was thought that the decree was not sufficient to found execution upon, ~~so that~~ the details of the decree might have been stated; and they remanded the case to the High Court to amend their decree in conformity with their judgment by declaring affirmatively what the plaintiff was entitled to recover. LALA SHAM SOONDUR LAL v. MAITLAND 11 Moore's I. A., 317

81. ————— Credibility of witnesses.—Effect of evidence—It is not the habit of the Privy Council, unless in very extraordinary cases, to advise the reversal of a decision of the Courts of India merely on the effect of evidence, or the credit due to witnesses. *NARAGUNTY LUCHMEDAVAMAH v. 83. ————— Consideration of viva voce evidence.—Considering the advantages which the Judges in India generally possess of forming a correct opinion of the probability of a transaction and in some cases of the credit due to the witnesses, the fact that the Courts below have decided against the validity of an instrument affords a strong presumption of the correctness of their decisions, but does not and ought not to relieve the Privy Council, as the Court of last resort, from the duty of examining the whole evidence, and forming for itself an opinion upon the whole case. With reference to the lamentable disregard of truth prevailing amongst the natives of India, the Privy Council held that it would be very dangerous for the Court altogether to discredit witnesses deposing viva voce by reason of the necessity imposed on the Court to sift the evidence of such witnesses with great minuteness and care. *MODHOOSOODUN SANDIAL v. 14 QUESTIONS OF FACT—continued.

86. ——— Disputed facts.—Presumption of correctness in cases of disputed fact.—It is the practice of the Judicial Committee in a case of disputed fact, when the Courts in India appear to have diligently investigated the evidence, and no palpable mistake is apparent in the appreciation by the Court below of such evidence, to affirm the decree appealed from with costs CHUNDER MONEE DEBIA CHOWDHURAYAN v. MUN MOHINEE DEBIA [8 Moore's I. A., 477]

87. ——— Judgment on facts.—Appeals from Non-Regulation Provinces.—In cases from Non-Regulation Provinces, wherein the procedure is somewhat loose, and where the merits depend much on local custom and local inquiry, it is even more necessary than it is on appeals from the Civil Courts in the Regulation Provinces to act on the principle of not disturbing the judgment under appeal, unless it is substantially wrong HYDER HOSSEIN v. MAHOMED HOSSEIN

[14 Moore's I. A., 401: 17 W. R., 185]

88. ——— Improper admission of evidence.—Sufficiency of evidence.—Where evidence, such as hearsay, is improperly admitted, the question for the Judicial Committee is whether, rejecting that evidence, enough remains to support the finding. Disapproval was expressed by their Lordships of the reception by the lower Court of evidence which ought not to have been admitted MOHUN SING v. GHURIBA [6 B. L. R., 495: 15 W. R., P. C., 8]

89. ——— Erroneous conclusion from evidence.—Hearsay evidence.—Where the High Court founded their judgment upon evidence which did not justify the conclusion, the Judicial Committee reviewed the whole evidence, in order to ascertain whether the decree could be supported. *AJODHYA PRASAD SING v. 92. ——— Failure to produce evidence at hearing.—Omission of Judge to call for record.—At the hearing of a suit a party, though he had sufficient warning of what was necessary, did not take the proper steps to cause the production of the documentary and only admissible evidence of a material fact which had to be proved by him, and the decision was against him. The record of another proceeding would, it was said, have supplied this evidence, and an application had been previously made on which the order of the Judge was that "the matter would be decided when the case was tried, and the record would be sent for, if necessary." No further application to the Court was made, and no attempt to supply this evidence. Held that if there had been, as there might have been, an oversight by the party in not calling the attention of the Judge to the above order, and in not tendering the evidence, there had been no omission on the Judge's part affording ground for appeal, and the Judicial Committee refused to interfere CHANDICHURN SHASHMAL v. DURGACHURN MIRDUA

93. ——— Questions of boundary.—Miscarriage in conduct of decision.—The Privy Council will never interfere with the finding of an Indian Court on a question of boundary, unless they are clearly satisfied that there has been some plain miscarriage in the conduct or decision of the case upon which they can put their hands and make the grounds for an order reversing or varying the decree. *RAM GOPAL ROY v. That it was devaswam was denied; and after questions of the admissibility of evidence, the construction of documents, and the effect to be given to judgments had arisen, the fact was found in the affirmative by two Courts concurrently. 109. — Question as to disputed adoption.—Reversal of concurrent Courts on fact.—In a suit which involved a disputed question of fact as to an alleged adoption and the due execution of a will, the Courts in India, disregarding other evidence, relied solely upon the evidence of a witness examined at the instance of the first Court itself. The effect of the evidence of this witness was to show that, at the time of the adoption and execution of the will, the alleged testator was in a dying state, and although at times roused to consciousness was, from his enfeebled mind, incapable of understanding the acts he was represented to have performed, the Courts below, however, on the evidence of this witness as to his testamentary capacity, corroborated, as they thought, by a letter of the widow of the alleged testator recognising the adoption, and by her acquiescing in the performance of certain funeral rights of her deceased husband by the supposed adopted son, pronounced both the adoption and the will to be valid. Upon appeal, held that, although as a general rule in a question of fact the Judicial Committee were unwilling to disturb the judgment of the Court below, yet that, as it was the duty of the Appellate Court to weigh the evidence and probabilities, and form an independent judgment, and taking into

On an appeal contesting this finding, it was argued, among other objections, that the High Court had not given sufficient effect to an entry in the wajib-ul-uruz of a zemindari village, the principal one comprised in the family estate now in dispute, the last owner of that estate, who held all the shares in the village, having caused an entry to be made to the effect that his eldest son should be his sole heir, the others of the family being maintained. S. C. RAM SABUK BOSE v. MONMOHINI DOSSEE

128. ——— Petition for special leave to appeal.—An order in Council granting leave to appeal is liable at any time to be rescinded with costs, on its appearing that the petition upon which the order has been granted contains any misstatement, or any concealment of facts which ought to have been disclosed. Even if there has been no intention to mislead, a material misstatement having been made, the order is still liable to be rescinded; and, to maintain it, to clear the case of bad faith is not sufficient. Mohan Lall Sukul v Bebee Dass, 8 Moore's I. A., 193, referred to and followed. Of three grounds on which special leave to appeal had been obtained, two had been correctly stated, but with the third was connected an error in the petition, to which objection was taken at the hearing. On its appearing that there had been no intention to mislead, the appeal was heard and allowed; but, in regard to the above, without costs. Ram Sabuk Bose v Monmohini Dossee, L. R., 2 I. A., 71, referred to. MUSSOORIE BANK v RAYNOB

129. ——— Appeal brought contrary to agreement not to appeal.—A fixed sum nomine expensarum was given to each respondent in lieu of costs, where an appeal was preferred contrary to an agreement not to appeal, and the proceedings had been stayed. AMIR ALI v. INDURAJIT KOER

the amount actually recovered falling far short of that sum, the Court directed the costs below to be apportioned according to the ordinary course in those Courts, and gave neither party costs of the appeal. MUDHUN MOHUN DOSS v. GOKUL DOSS

131. — Charges by respondent of fraud, forgery, and perjury.—Reversal of decree—Charges of fraud, forgery, and perjury having been made by the respondents against the appellant, the party who propounded the will, costs of the Courts in India and upon appeal to England were, upon the reversal of the decree of the Sudder Court, ordered to be paid by the respondents. NANA NARAIN RAO v. HUREE PUNTH BHAO . 9 Moore's I. A., 96

132. — Taxation of costs.—Costs of appeal from India.—Unnecessary expenses—In taxing the costs of an appeal from India, the Privy Council will disallow all such costs and expenses as may have been unnecessarily occasioned by the inclusion, in the transcript sent from India, of matters which have been improperly introduced therein. TARAKANT BANNERJEE v. Probate in cases not governed by the Succession Act—Probate to take effect throughout India—Limited probate—Probate duty—Cutchi Memon Mahomedan—Succession Act, X of 1865, s. 331—Hindu Wills Act, s. 2—Act XXVII of 1860, s. 18—In cases not governed by the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865), probates and letters of administration granted by the High Court of Bombay in respect of Hindus, Mahomedans, and other persons not usually designated as British subjects, take effect only and can only be granted for the purpose of recovering debts and securing debtors paying the same, except so far as is otherwise provided in Act XXVII of 1860; and probate duty is only payable on the amount of such debts. Cutchi Memons are not Hindus within the meaning of section 2 of the Hindu Wills Act (XXI of 1870), and, therefore, probate to take effect throughout India cannot be granted in the case of a will of a Cutchi Memon testator. Where the caveator refuses to answer a question, section 177 of the Code of Civil Procedure (XIV of 1882), the provisions of which are extended to proceedings before the District Judge by section 83 of Act V of 1881, will not justify the Judge in dispensing with the proof of the will set up, and passing a decree in favour of the petitioner. The Court of Appeal will reverse such a decree if passed. RAVJI RANCHOD NAIK v. VISHNU RANCHOD NAIK

3. OF WHAT DOCUMENTS GRANTED.

10. ———— Document partly testamentary.—Gift, Deed of.—If one part of a document is testamentary in its character, it may be presumed that the remainder, if the language is capable of that construction, is also intended to be testamentary. Under such circumstances, where there is nothing inconsistent with the supposition that the arrangements made therein are to take effect from the death of the person executing it, the document ought to be admitted to probate as a will. IN THE MATTER OF KOMOLA KANT BISWAS . . . 4 C. L. R., 401

4. TO WHOM GRANTED.

11. ———— *Nephew.—Brother—Hindu will—In this case the High Court directed probate of a will executed by a Hindu in favour of a nephew (the son of an elder brother) to be granted to the nephew, instead of to a brother; the property being of small value, and consisting of several small holdings, and the widow of the deceased being a girl of very immature age, whereas the nephew had been brought up by him and was the object of his special affection. 14. ——— Appointment of wife as manager of all property and guardian of children—The testator by his will appointed H, his wife, guardian of his infant children, "in order that of all his property she should carry on the management (until his youngest son should attain twenty-two years of age), and in the testator's name the management of his firm." He appointed his brothers, R and M, his vakils to settle any quarrel that might arise, and directed them not to give unjust advice; but should the vakils give unjust advice, H was not to act upon it. Upon certain contingencies H and the vakils were to separate and make over to the sons their shares. Held that H was by implication appointed sole executrix, and that she alone, to the exclusion of the testator's brothers, was entitled to probate. HANABAI v. BAMANJI NASARVANJI [7 Bom., A. 5. PROOF OF WILL.

15. ——— Evidence of execution of will.—Hindu Wills Act, 1870—Procedure—It is incumbent on persons propounding a will for the purpose of obtaining probate or letters of administration under the Hindu Wills Act, to produce all the evidence which the circumstances of the case indicate as proper and necessary to prove the execution of the will. TARA CHAND CHUCKERBUTTY v. DEB NATH ROY . . . 10 C. L. R., 550

16. ——— Sufficiency of proof of will.—Proof of execution of will—Having regard to the fact that a grant of probate is not irrevocable, and to the importance of a deceased testator's estate being represented as speedily as possible, prima facie proof of the execution of his will is sufficient to warrant the grant of a probate when the application for such probate is unopposed. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF NOBODOORGA . . . 7 C. 17. ——— Proof of inofficious will.—Knowledge of testator as to nature of his acts in making will—Where a will is inofficious in character, it is incumbent on the parties propounding it to prove it not only affirmatively but completely, and by circumstances showing not only that the testator signed the will, but that he knew what he was doing, that he was making a will, and that he did all that he did with his eyes open. *SARODA SOONDUREE DOSSIA v. 25. ————— Succession Act, s. 261.—Procedure.—Contested cases of application for probate of will—In cases where a will is contested, the Court is bound to consider, not only whether the alleged will was executed by the testator, but whether the will is valid or invalid, and whether probate of the will ought to be granted. Every consideration which ought to induce the Court to refuse probate of the will must be taken into account. *Saroda Sooniuree Dossia v. Muddun Mohun Shaha, 24 W. 26. ————— Procedure—Question as to power of disposition—Succession Act, s. 254—Upon a bond fide application for probate of a will, it is not the province of the Court to which the application is made to go into questions with reference to the power of the testator to make a disposition of the property of which the will purports to dispose. *Behary Lal Sandyal v. 28. ————— Application to revoke probate.—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Right of suit to revoke probate—A grant of probate of a will is not in the nature of a summary proceeding to be contested by a regular suit in the Civil Court. The grant must be contested by a suit in the Court out of which such grant issued, and it must be contested before the Court sitting as a Court of Probate, and not in the exercise of its ordinary civil jurisdiction.

Persons who seek to contest a will must prove an interest to entitle them to a locus standi in Court, but the want of interest is an objection which should be taken at the earliest stage of the proceedings. There is nothing in the Indian Succession Act to deprive a District Court, as a Court of Probate, of jurisdiction to hear and determine an application to revoke grant of probate of a will on the ground of the execution of such will having been obtained by force and coercion. Semble,—That a legatee under a will has “an interest” sufficient to maintain a suit for the revocation of probate. *MAYHO v. A presumptive reversioner to property with which a will deals has a sufficient interest in the property to entitle him to maintain a suit in respect of such property, and on the authority of Nobeen Chundra Sil v. Bhubo Soondurr Dabee, 1 L. R., 6 Cal., 460, he is entitled to maintain a case for the revocation of probate. 35. — Application for order revoking probate—Succession Act (X of 1865), s. 243.—Locus standi of attaching creditor of next of kin to apply for revocation.—A will, on the evidence, was held duly proved. An application for revocation of probate was made by a judgment-creditor who had attached his debtor's right, title, and interest in family estate, whereof a one-fourth share would, but for this will, which made other dispositions, have been inherited by such debtor. Whether such an attaching creditor can oppose the grant of probate, or apply to have it revoked, is a matter of grave doubt, at least, in a case which is not founded on the ground that the probate has been obtained in fraud of creditors. Baynath Sahai v. 36. — Caveat—Mortgagee.—Attaching creditor—Fraud.—A mortgaged certain property to B, who obtained a decree on his mortgage on the 20th of August 1881. In execution of this decree B, on the 5th of September 1881, attached the mortgaged property and obtained an order for sale. On the 14th of September 1881 the wife of the mortgagor applied for probate of the will of one T. D., the mother of the mortgagor, who had died on the 16th of May 1881. The testatrix, by her will, left all her property to the mortgagor's wife. The mortgaged property was included in the property dealt with by the will. B, the mortgagee, entered a caveat against the grant of probate, alleging that the will was a forgery, got up by the mortgagor for the purpose of saving the mortgaged property from being sold in execution of a decree against himself. Held that B was entitled to enter a caveat. SURBOMONGALA DASSI v. When once probate in solemn form has been granted, no one who has been cited or has taken part in the proceedings, or who was cognisant of them, can afterwards seek to have it cancelled. Quare,—Whether a review may not be granted. if any act was done prejudicial to any of those purposes, or to any property set apart therefor, or contrary to the Hindu practice and religion or usages; the property should vest in such disciple of his who should be competent and virtuous. A obtained probate of the will, and entered upon the properties mentioned therein. Held that the Court had not power, under section 234 of the Succession Act, to revoke the probate upon the ground that A had, since he took charge of the office, taken to an immoral course of conduct, and in consequence had been excluded from the community of mohunts. The proper course to take for depriving such a person of his office would be to bring a suit under the Religious Endowment Act, or any other suit, for a declaration that he had disqualified himself, and if in that suit a decree was obtained and duly certified to the Court which granted probate, that Court would, no doubt, direct the revocation of the probate. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF MOHUN DASS. If satisfied that she had no such knowledge, then he should have ordered a new trial as to the factum of the will, when the person propounding it would have to prove it in the ordinary way. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF DINTARINI DEBI. 43. ———— Probate as giving person right to sue under will.—Succession Act, s. 187.—Sut for land claimed under will.—Where the first Court decreed a suit for possession of land claimed under a will, the lower Appellate Court was held to have done right in reversing the decision on the ground that the plaintiff had not taken out probate under Act X of 1865, section 187. The "probate" intended by section 187 is a copy of the will, certified and sealed by a Court of competent jurisdiction, and it may be taken out by a legatee. MUN MOHUN GHOSAL v. PURSHNATH ROY

All the sections of the Succession Act (X of 1865) relating to grants of probate and letters of administration which were formerly incorporated in the Hindu Wills Act (XXI of 1870) are now (with the exception of section 187 removed from that Act by section 154 of Act V of 1881, but are, with the exception of section 187, re-enacted verbatim in Act V of 1881. Section 187, however, still remains incorporated by reference with the Hindu Wills Act (see section 154 of Act V of 1881). The result is that probate is necessary in case of such Hindu wills as fall within the Hindu Wills Act. But the omission from Act V of 1881 (which applies to all Mahomedans and Hindus) of any section corresponding to section 187 of the Indian Succession Act, and the retention of that section in the Hindu Wills Act, shows that it was the intention of the Legislature that, except in cases falling under the Hindu Wills Act, an executor of any Hindu or Mahomedan will may establish his right in a Court of Justice without taking out probate. In cases, however, falling within the provisions of Act XXVII of 1860, debtors have still the right (under section 2 of that Act) of insisting upon a plaintiff executor taking out probate. Where A, one of three executors of a Mahomedan will, none of whom had taken out probate, desired to carry on a suit originally instituted by their testator to recover a share of an estate, all the other parties to the suit being desirous that the suit should be dismissed,—Held that A, under section 92 of the Probate Act (V of 1881), being only one of three executors, could not carry on the suit without first taking out probate of the testator's will. Held, further, that A, being an executor, had a right to carry on the suit and get in the assets of his testator in order to meet possible claims on the estate. The other parties to the suit who were beneficially interested in the estate, and who desired that the suit should terminate, had the remedy in their hands by putting the executor in funds to discharge the debts. *MOOSA v. It did not confer a title on the executrix to represent the testator's estate, except for the above-mentioned limited purpose, or to exercise the usual powers of an executrix where the testator's intention, to be gathered from the whole of the will, was to vest his property with the entire management of, and control over, it in a series of persons in succession as trustees, the first of whom was the execu-

6. ——— Note given partly for "balance of bets and lotteries."—Lottery Act (V of 1844)—The defendant agreed with the plaintiff to take the plaintiff's mare "Bridesmaid" on "racing terms,"—all winnings to be divided equally between them, and the plaintiff to have the option of claiming a one-fourth share of any lottery in which she might be bought by or on account of the defendant; the plaintiff to keep and train "Bridesmaid" for R60 a month. Subsequently, the plaintiff agreed to keep and train, for a like sum for each horse, five horses belonging to the defendant. The defendant having been posted as a defaulter, the plaintiff, at the defendant's request, advanced certain sums to the Secretary of the Calcutta Races to enable the defendant's horses to run. As security for the repayment of such advances, and of a sum of R4,456-6 which had become due to the plaintiff, and which included an item of R1,149 for "balance of bets and lotteries," and a smaller sum in respect of certain tickets in the "Secundra Raffle," the defendant gave to the plaintiff a letter of hypothecation of his five horses, whereby it was agreed that in case of the defendant's default, the plaintiff should be at liberty to sell the horses. The defendant made default, and the plaintiff advertised the horses for sale. On the same day the defendant wrote and gave to the plaintiff a letter, stating that, in consideration of the plaintiff's withdrawing the advertisement, and withholding the sale for a certain period, he would give the plaintiff a promissory note for the balance of his claim. A note for R7,000 was accordingly given by the defendant to the plaintiff. In the account delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant, he had by mistake over-credited the defendant with R744 in an item headed "cash received from the Secretary of the Calcutta Races, balance of racing account," and under which was included the following item:—"I. O. U., deducted from lottery account, R480." On receiving information of the error, the defendant gave the plaintiff another promissory note for R744. In an action on the notes brought under Act V of 1866, the plaintiff obtained a decree, which was set aside on the defendant's application, and leave was given to him to appear and defend. Written statements were then filed on the plaintiff's application. Held by MACPHERSON, J., that the two promissory notes were given as a security for the whole of the plaintiff's claim, that the items for "balance of bets and lotteries" and for the "Secundra Raffle" being rendered illegal by the Lottery Act (V of 1844), part of the consideration for the notes was illegal, and no action was maintainable upon them. His Lordship, therefore, dismissed the plaintiff's suit. On appeal, held by COUCH, C. J., that the promissory note for R7,000 was not vitiated by the R1,149 being part of the consideration for it although that portion of the latter sum which was won by lotteries was obtained by an illegal transaction, it was not illegal for the defendant to receive the money, and having done so, to pay the plaintiff his share or to promise to do so. But the money paid in respect of the "Secundra Raffle," being money paid in execution of an illegal purpose, was an illegal consideration which disentitled the plaintiff to recover on the note. Held, further, that the note for R744 given upon good consideration. All the facts of the case being stated in the plaintiff's written statement, the Court might allow the plaint to be amended, and frame an issue as to what amount was due to the plaintiff in respect of the consideration for the note for R7,000. Held by MARKBY, J., that both notes were good, inasmuch as the promise contained in them did not spring from, nor was it the creature of, the original illegal agreement, but was a separate agreement. *JOSEPH v. 8. ——— Suit by endorsee against maker.—Endorsement of overdue note—In a suit by endorsee against the maker of a promissory note payable on demand, the defence was that there were dealings in skins between the defendant and the payee, and an agreement was made by which the payee was to pay the defendant Rs. 4,500 as an advance upon goods to be supplied by the defendant to the payee, that the money was paid, and the promissory note sued on was made and delivered as an acknowledgment of the receipt of the money and as a security for what should be due to the maker in respect of the dealings. The defendant stated that the state of the accounts between him and the maker showed a balance in favour of the defendant, and notice to the plaintiff of these facts was alleged. The note was endorsed to the plaintiff two years and eleven months after date. Held that, although the evidence failed to make out notice to the plaintiff, the note when endorsed was an overdue note, and that the plaintiff took it subject to the then state of the accounts between the payee and the defendant. COMMUNDUN MOHIDEEN SAIB v. OREE MEERAH SAIB. 7 Mad., 271

9. ——— Endorsement of note overdue.—Note on demand.—Re-endorsement.—Before a promissory note on demand can be treated as overdue in the hands of an endorsee, there must be some evidence of demand. The re-endorsement of a discharged promissory note cannot revive the liability of the maker. Commundun Mohideen Saib v. Oree Meerah Saib, 7 Mad., 275, followed. The fact that the endorsee of a promissory note becomes one of the members of a firm which has undertaken to discharge the liability created by the maker of the note does not discharge the obligation on the note so as to invalidate re-endorsement for value. VAN INGEN v. DHUNNA LALL LALLAH. I. L. R., 5 Mad., 108

10. ——— Receipt endorsed on note.—Presumption of payment—Though a receipt on the back of a bill of exchange or promissory note prima facie imports that the bill or note has been paid, yet the receipt is capable of being explained, and if it appears that the bill or note has not been paid, and that another bill or note was substituted for it, the Court will not be justified in concluding that the party who gave up the note in that way meant that the debt secured by the note was to be considered to have been paid. STEWART v. — s. 8 (b) and s. 10 — Suit to set aside certificate—Mode of service of notice—Although no special provision is made in Bengal Act VII of 1880 as to the manner of service of the notice prescribed in section 10, it is not to be presumed that the Legislature intended that service of a less effectual character should be sufficient than it has expressly provided for similar processes under the Civil Procedure Code. Before, therefore, a service under Bengal Act VII of 1880 can be effected by posting it on the residence of the party on whom it is wished to serve it, it must be shown that some attempt has been made to effect personal service, and that such personal service for reasons stated could not be made. In such a case, when the fact of service of notice is denied, the onus is on the party alleging service to prove it. RAKHAL CHANDRA RAI CHOWDHURI v. (XXV OF 1871), s. 2.—Act

XVIII of 1854, s. 17.—Refusal to produce ticket.
—Fraudulent intention.—Trespass.—Passenger by rail.—The plaintiff entered a carriage on the defendants' railway at Surat with the purpose of proceeding to Bombay. By an oversight, and without any fraudulent intent, he omitted to procure a ticket at Surat. On arriving at Nowsari he applied to the station master for a ticket to Bombay, but was refused; he was, however, allowed by the defendants' servants to proceed in the same train to Bulsar, where he again applied for a ticket, and was again refused, but was directed by the defendants' servants to get into the train and not leave it again.
At Dhandu he again got out and applied for a ticket to the station master. During a discussion between the plaintiff's master and the station master, the plaintiff, at the direction of his master, re-entered the train. Ultimately the station master refused to give the plaintiff a ticket, and ordered him to get out of the train, and, on his not complying with this order, sent a sepoy, who forcibly removed the plaintiff from the carriage. In an action by the plaintiff to recover damages for the forcible and illegal removal of the plaintiff from the carriage, and for the illegal detention of the plaintiff at the station at Dhandu, and for the illegal refusal of the defendants to allow the plaintiff to proceed in the train to Bombay.—Held, 1st, that the latter portion of section 2 of Act XXV of 1871, amending section 1 of Act XVIII of 1854, which provides for payments to be made by persons failing to produce their tickets when demanded by the servants of the company, applies only to the case of a person who has received a ticket and will not or cannot produce it, and not to a person travelling without having obtained a ticket with no intention to defraud; 2nd, that the absence of a fraudulent intention did not make the entry into the carriage less unlawful, and consequently that the plaintiff started from Surat as a trespasser; 3rd, that the conduct of the railway officials at the stations intermediate between Surat and Dhandu, if it amounted at all to leave and license to the plaintiff to proceed without a ticket, could only operate as such until the train stopped at the next station; 4th, that there was no legal obligation on the station master to issue a ticket to the plaintiff to enable him to proceed from Dhandu. PRATAB DAJI v BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY COMPANY

— s. 21.—Allowing cattle to stray on the line—Fences to line—On the 10th April 1874 prisoner's cow stayed on a railway line provided with a fence. On the 13th June following, the Government published rules under section 21 of the Railway Act Amendment Act, 1871, determining what kind of fences should be deemed to be suitable for the exclusion of cattle. On the date of the offence there were no such rules. No evidence was offered of the state of the fence, and the prisoner was convicted solely on his admission that he was the owner of the cow. Held that the state of the fences required specific proof, in the absence of which the conviction could not be sustained. — s. 29.—Endangering life by negligence.—Precaution taken by others to avoid danger—The prisoner, a servant of a railway company, was convicted, under section 29 of Act XXV of 1871, of endangering the lives of the persons in a certain train by negligence. There was no evidence that the safety of any persons in any train had been endangered by his neglect of duty. On the contrary, by reason of precautions taken by other persons, any possible danger which might have resulted from his neglect was avoided. Held that he could not be convicted and punished under section 29 of Act XXV of 1871. *QUEEN v. If it be not, the fabric cannot be considered to be silk within the meaning of the Act. LAKHMIDAS HIRACHAND v. G. I. P. RAILWAY COMPANY

— ss. 17, 31.—Passenger not producing season ticket when called upon.—Travelling without a ticket—Order for recovery of fare—A passenger who has obtained a monthly ticket is liable to be called upon to produce it at any time on the journey which it covers, and if he does not so produce it, he is liable under sections 17 and 31 of the Railway Act to pay the fare for the journey between the stations for which his ticket was issued. The order under section 31 in case of his refusal to pay it, should be one merely for recovery of the amount due as the fare, and not an order to pay such or any other sum as if it were a fine. A passenger who has such a ticket which is still in force and in his possession, cannot be said to be travelling without a ticket within the meaning of section 31, merely because he does not happen to have the ticket with him, and therefore cannot produce it when called upon to do so. *IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF BUSKIN. 1. — Liability for nuisance caused by works—Statutory powers.—Beng. Reg. I of 1824.—Act XLII of 1850.—Land taken for public purposes.—Suit for injunction to restrain nuisance

—The plaintiffs, the owners and occupiers of a house and premises in Howrah, sued for an injunction to restrain a nuisance caused by certain workshops, forges, and furnaces erected by the defendants, and for damages for the injury done thereby. The defendants were a railway company incorporated under an Act of Parliament for the purpose of making and maintaining railways in India, and by an agreement (entered into under their Act of Incorporation) between them and the East India Company, they were authorised and directed to make and maintain such railway stations, offices, machinery, and other works (connected with making, maintaining, and working the railways) as the East India Company might deem necessary or expedient. The workshops complained of were erected in 1867 under the sanction of the Bengal Government on land purchased by the Government in 1854 for the purposes of the railway under Regulation I of 1824 and Act XLII of 1850, and which had been made over to the defendants. Held, a nuisance having been proved to exist,—that is to say, such annoyance as materially interfered with the ordinary comfort of human existence in the house, and caused sensible injury to the property, of the plaintiffs,—the defendants could not plead laches or acquiescence on the plaintiffs' part, as, upon the plaintiffs complaining in May 1870, the defendants had admitted that there was a nuisance, and had up to June 1871 made various efforts to abate it. Nor could the defendants escape liability on the ground that the nuisance had been caused by them in the reasonable exercise of powers conferred upon them by the Legislature. An injunction was granted restraining the defendants, and liberty to apply was reserved in the decree. On a motion by the defendants, supported by an affidavit showing the alterations which they proposed to make with the view of abating the nuisance, and alleging that a period of three months was required to carry out these alterations, and that a refusal to grant this time would necessitate the closing of the company's workshops, and would occasion great inconvenience, the Court granted the time asked for, on the conditions that the defendants paid the costs of the application, and did all they possibly could in the meanwhile to prevent annoyance to the plaintiffs. RAJ MOHUN BOSE v. 2. ——— Fire caused by spark from engine.—Action for damages.—Negligence.—Statutory powers.—The East Indian Railway Company was incorporated under 12 and 13 Victoria, Cap XCIII, "for the purpose of making and constructing, working and maintaining" the East Indian Railway, including all necessary, accessory, or convenient extensions, branches, &c, as might be agreed upon between the Railway Company and the East India Company, and by agreement between the Railway Company and the East India Company, dated 17th August 1849, the Railway Company was "authorised and directed to make and maintain such stations, offices, machinery, and other works and conveniences connected with the making, maintaining, and working the railway," and "to provide a good and sufficient working stock of engines, carriages, and other plant and machinery for working the said railway." The plaintiff was the owner of a piece of land adjoining the railway line at Kharmatta, a station on the Chord Line of the Company's railway, on which land was erected a bungalow, with stables and out-houses adjoining. In an action brought by the plaintiff against the Railway Company to recover compensation for damages occasioned by a fire caused by a spark from one of the engines of the Company, the plaintiff alleged want of due care on the part of the defendants in the management of the line by allowing dry grass of too great a length to remain on the railway banks, and in driving their engines along the line without due precautions being taken to prevent the expulsion of sparks. Held that the defendant Company was authorised to run locomotive engines on the lines of railway constructed by the Company under the statutory powers given to it, and, therefore, the Company was not liable for damage caused in working the line under such statutory powers, without proof of negligence. Held, also, on the evidence, that neither in the construction of their engines, nor in the condition of the railway banks, was any negligence shown on the part of the Company. HALFORD v. 3. ——— Liability of company.—Loss of articles not declared or insured.—Liability between arrival and delivery.—A railway company is not liable for non-delivery of articles specified in section 10, Act XVIII of 1854, the value of which has neither been declared nor insured. The protection conferred by that section extends till such time as the consignee takes delivery, and does not terminate on the arrival of the articles at their destination. ILLOOR KRISTNIAH v. 4. ——— Railway Act, 1854, s. 10.—Declaration of nature of goods.—Silver.—Loss by criminal act of company's servants.—Section 10 of the Railway Act, which provides that no railway company shall in any case be answerable for loss or injury in respect of gold, silver, and other excepted articles delivered for carriage, unless the conditions of that section are fulfilled, applies where the loss has been caused by the criminal acts of the company's servants. Semble,—If, after declaration made by the sender of an excepted article entitling the railway company to receive an increased charge, the goods are carried at the ordinary rates, the sender would be entitled to recover in case of loss. The conditions of section 10 are not fulfilled by the sender merely giving an account of the quantity and description of the goods delivered for carriage when required to do so by the booking clerk. 7. ————— Liability of company—Carriers of goods—Act XVIII of 1854, s 11—Negligence.—The East Indian Railway Company cannot, under section 11 of Act XVIII of 1854, limit their responsibility as carriers in respect of ordinary goods so as not to be liable for loss or injury caused by gross negligence or misconduct, though possibly they may, with the consent of Government, limit their liability by contract or notice for loss arising otherwise than by gross neglect EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY v. 8. ————— Carriers—Insufficiency of evidence—The consignees of two bundles of cow-hides which had been carried by a railway company having refused to take delivery on the ground of shortness in the number of pieces, the railway company pleaded that they were not indebted, as they had contracted to carry such and such a number of bundles, and had done so. The bills of lading showed so many bundles said to contain such a number of pieces. The company also contested the plaintiff's enumeration of pieces. Held that the railway company was not liable, there being no evidence that the bundles had been broken or the hides counted by pieces. SCHLAEPFER, PUTZ, & Co., v. 9. ————— Carriers—Evidence—Burden of proof of negligence—Misdescription of goods—Act III of 1865 (Carriers Act), s 9—Act XVIII of 1854, s. 11—The plaintiff caused to be delivered to the defendants, for carriage from Bombay to Oojein, certain goods, among which were twelve bags of sugar-candy. His agent, when signing the consignment note at the railway station, erroneously, but without fraudulent intent, stated the contents of the twelve bags to be alum, for which a lower freight was charged by the defendants.

The railway clerk received the goods and gave a receipt note, on which the following condition was printed "The company give notice that they are not responsible for loss or damage arising from fire, the act of God, or civil commotion" In the course of the journey a fire broke out in the train, and a large portion of the plaintiff's goods, including ten bags of the sugar-candy, was destroyed. In an action for damages for non-delivery,—Held (1), under the provisions of section 9 of the Carriers Act (III of 1865), the burden of proving negligence on the part of the defendants did not rest upon the plaintiff, notwithstanding the condition in the receipt note, (2), the misdescription, by the plaintiff's agent, of the twelve bags of sugar-candy as alum did not exonerate the defendants from all liability to the plaintiff in respect of these bags. The plaintiff, however, was only entitled to recover, in respect of the ten lost bags, the value of alum only, and not sugar-candy; while the defendants, on the other hand, could not, in respect of the said ten bags, charge freight as for sugar-candy ISHVARDAS GULASCHAND v. G. I. P. RAILWAY COMPANY . I. L. R., 3 Bom., 120

10. ————— Act XVIII of 1854, ss 11 and 43—Carriers.—The defendants having made arrangements with the Madras Railway Company for the through carriage of goods, received from the plaintiff's agent at Poona thirty bags of jowari to be conveyed thence to Bellary and delivered to the plaintiff's agent there. The "goods consignment note," which was signed by the plaintiff's agent at Poona, contained the following condition, of which he had due notice "The Company receive goods for conveyance to stations on other railways with which they have made arrangements to book through, subject to the rules and regulations and rates and fares of the respective companies over whose lines the goods may pass." On reaching Raichore the bags of jowari were transferred from the defendants' waggon, in which they had left Poona, into a waggon of the Madras Railway Company. One bag was subsequently lost; but the remaining twenty-nine arrived, and were unloaded in good condition at Bellary on the 19th September 1877. No steps were taken, either by the defendants or by the Madras Railway Company, to give information of the arrival of the bags to the consignee, and he never received them. The plaintiff sued to recover their value. The defendants pleaded, (1) that, under a rule of the Madras Railway in force at the time of the making of the contract between the plaintiff and the defendants, delivery was complete the instant the bags were unloaded at Bellary; and (2) that the plaintiff's agent at Bellary did not apply for the goods, but allowed them to remain in the station-yard until they became rotten by rain and were destroyed by order of the Collector some time in November. The Madras Railway Company had issued a public notice of the above rule in the following terms "The Madras Railway Company hereby give public notice that they will not be responsible for loss of, or damage to, grain after it has been unloaded from the Company's waggons." The defendants sought to incorporate this notice

into their contract with the plaintiff by virtue of the condition printed in their "goods consignment note." Held that the said public notice afforded no protection to the defendants, on the ground that it was invalid as a regulation for non-compliance with the provisions of section 43 of Act XVIII of 1854, inasmuch as it had not been sanctioned by the Local Government, and had not been posted up at all the stations of the Madras line of railway; and that it could not otherwise be binding against the plaintiff, as neither the plaintiff nor his agent were shown to have had any knowledge of it at the time of entering into the contract with the defendants. Quare,—Whether, if the plaintiff or his agent had such knowledge at the time of making the consignment, the notice would have constituted such a stipulation as to contravene section 11 of Act XVIII of 1854, or whether it might be read together with that section, and treated as effectual, except so far as its operation would be limited in its scope by that section. Held, also, that the arrival of the grain at the station of destination (Bellary) having been proved, the burden of showing that the goods were ready for delivery to the plaintiff for a reasonable time after such arrival lay on the defendants, although no proof had been given of any application for delivery by the plaintiff within a reasonable time. It is the duty of a railway company to keep goods, which have reached the station of their destination, ready there for delivery until the consignee in the exercise of due diligence can call for and remove them, and it is the duty of the consignee to call for and remove them within a reasonable time. Semble,—The object of section 11 of Act XVIII of 1854 is to preclude railway companies from being able by any stipulation to escape from liability for loss or injury to goods caused by the gross negligence or misconduct of their agents or servants. SUBUTRAM BHAYA v. G. I. P. RAILWAY COMPANY [I. L. R., 3 Bom., 96

11. ———— Carriers, Liability of.—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss 151, 152—Act XVIII of 1854—Act III of 1863.—The

English common law rule, under which common carriers are held liable as insurers of goods against all risks except the act of God or the King's enemies, is now in force in India. In cases not met by the special provisions of the Act relating to railways and carriers, the liability of carriers for loss or damage to goods entrusted to them is prescribed by sections 151 and 152 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872). The plaintiff's goods were being carried in a train of the defendants from Nandgaon to Egatpuri. During the journey the train was plundered by robbers, and the plaintiff's goods were stolen. Held, the defendants were entitled to the benefit of section 152 of the Contract Act, and should be permitted to give evidence that the robbers of the plaintiff's goods were not the servants or agents of the defendants, and that the defendants (by their servants and agents) took as much care of their goods as a man of ordinary prudence would, under similar circumstances, take of his own goods of the same bulk,

4. Grounds for appointment.—

Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 503.—Waste by Hindu widow.—The powers conferred by section 503 of the Civil Procedure Code are not to be exercised as a matter of course, and it is not a reason for allowing an application for the appointment of a receiver that it can do no harm to appoint one. The discretion given by that section is one that should be used with the greatest care and caution. Because a plaintiff in his plaint makes violent and wholesale charges of waste and malversation against a defendant in possession of property as executor under a will or as the tenant for life, and upon this basis applies for a receiver to be appointed, it is not a necessary consequence that such appointment should be made. Held in this case, where the sons of a Hindu widow, in possession of her husband's estate under a will, sued their mother, as reversioners under the will, for possession of the estate, on the ground of mismanagement and waste, and on the same grounds applied for the appointment of a receiver under section 503 of the Civil Procedure Code, that a receiver had been appointed on insufficient grounds. When, therefore, a suit was brought under Bengal Act VIII of 1869 for arrears of rent and for ejectment of the defendant,—Held that a receiver of the rents and profits of the tenure might properly be appointed under the provisions of section 503 of the Civil Procedure Code. 7. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 503 —Appointment of receiver after decree—In a suit brought in 1880 by the widow of a deceased partner to wind up a partnership, the surviving partner was prohibited by the Court, at the instance of the plaintiff, from collecting debts due to the firm; but leave was given to apply for the recovery of debts which might become barred by limitation. After decree, on the application of the plaintiff, a receiver was appointed under section 503 of the Code of Civil Procedure to collect outstanding debts for the purpose of executing the decree. The receiver having sued in 1883 to recover a debt which was due to the firm in 1879, the suit was dismissed, on the ground, among others, that the appointment of a receiver after decree was ultra vires. Held that the appointment of the receiver was valid. 9. Position and functions of.—Parties—Suit for specific performance.—The receiver in a suit is nothing more than the hand of the Court for the purpose of holding the property of the litigants whenever it is necessary that it should be kept in the grasp of the Court in order to preserve the subject-matter of the suit pendente lite; and the possession of the receiver is simply the possession of the Court. He has no personal rights in the property, nor can he take any steps with regard to it without the sanction of the Court. If it is necessary for him to take action of any sort, he should be put in motion by the Court on the application of the parties to the suit; and whatever he rightly does with regard to the property, he does simply as the agent of the owners of the property.

RECEIVER.—Receiver of High Court—

Where the receiver in a suit had, by order of Court, sold certain property in the suit, and had executed the contract of sale in his own name, a plaintiff paying for specific performance against the purchaser for refusing to complete the contract was admitted with the receiver as co-plaintiff, he having obtained leave to sue. WILKINSON v. GANGADHAR SIKKAR

10. ———— Right of suit as receiver and right to possession of property.—Rule of Supreme Court.—In a suit by K against B, and others, the Supreme Court ordered that the estate of R (deceased) should be applied to the payment of his debts, legacies, &c, and appointed a receiver of the rents and profits of his real property. It also ordered the defendants and persons claiming through them to give up to the receiver such of the real property as might be in their possession. Subsequently, in the same suit, the High Court declared that K was entitled to a moiety of the estate of R, after payment of costs and legacies, and directed the estate to be sold and the proceeds brought into Court. Afterwards the Receiver brought a suit in his own name against R and one S, alleging that, though the property had been decreed to K, and himself jointly, yet K had, by collusion, obtained sole possession of it, and that, in execution of a money-decree against her, it had been sold to S. Held that, as Receiver of the High Court, plaintiff had no title as of right against S, to the immediate possession of the property, and no right to sue in another Court in his own person to receive possession thereof. The rule on the Original side of the Court, taken from the practice of the English Court of Chancery, is not to compel a party to a suit to give up to the receiver possession of property unless an order of Court to that effect has previously been made upon him, the proper course being by proceedings in Court to fix an occupation rent, and to order the party in possession to pay the same. *RAM LOCHUN SIKKAR v. Before the appointment of the receiver, the zemindar had expended certain sums at the defendant's request to repair a tank for the irrigation of lands held by them in common with him. This suit was brought to recover the sum so expended. It was objected that the receiver could not maintain the suit on the ground that the sum sued for was neither the subject of a suit against the zemindar nor property attached in

14. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 503.—In 1879 a zemindar granted a lease of part of the zemindari for twenty years, reserving a rent of Rs. 18,000 per annum. In 1881, the zemindari having been attached by a creditor, the zemindar granted a new lease in perpetuity in lieu of the former lease, reserving a rent of Rs. 12,000 a year. A receiver of the zemindari having subsequently been appointed with full powers under the provisions of section 503 of the Code of Civil Procedure, sued the lessee to recover rent at the rate reserved in the first lease from 1881. Held that the receiver was entitled to recover the rent claimed. The provisions of section 503 of the Code of Civil Procedure were intended to declare that the receiver, in respect of all property which was or could be attached, had the powers of the owner as they existed at the time the property was brought under the orders of the Court by attachment, provided that they have not ceased by operation of law. *GOPALASAMI v. 15. ———— Parties to conveyance.—Sale by receiver under order of Court.—Where certain property, the subject matter of a suit, in which the Court Receiver had been appointed receiver, was sold in pursuance of an order of Court made by consent of parties, Held that an application by the Court Receiver for an order that the purchaser do complete the purchase according to the conditions of sale must be refused as not being made in proper form. A sale of property under an order of Court by a person appointed receiver in a suit is not a sale by the Court. The fact that such person is the Court Receiver does not place him in a different position. When the receiver sells under such an order, it is necessary that he, being in possession of the property, should be a party to the conveyance. CHANDRA NATH BISWAS v. BISWANATH BISWAS

5. ——— Security bond to appear before police.—Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882), s 514—As there is no provision in the Criminal Procedure Code authorising a police officer to take a surety bond for the production of any person before the police, such a bond is ab initio void, and a Magistrate has no power to alter it and impose fresh obligations thereunder. IN THE MATTER OF CHANDRA SEKHAR RAI . . . I. L. R., 11 Cal., 77

6. ——— Recognisance bond.—Where appearance of accused has been dispensed with.—Agent.—Held that where the personal attendance of an accused is dispensed with, a recognisance bond, if such is deemed necessary, should be taken from him, and not from his agent, binding him (the accused) to appear either in person or by an agent; and that a Magistrate has no legal authority to secure the attendance of an agent by such a bond. *REG v. 8. ——— Discharge of surety.—Permission of Court to accused to leave.—Where a surety conditioned that he would be responsible for the continued presence of an accused person at one Court (Nowadah), it was held that the surety was released from liability under his recognisance by the permission which the Court at Nowadah gave the accused, without the surety's consent, of leaving that place of business, and also by the subsequent transfer of the case to another Court. QUEEN v. MEWA LALL . . . 13 W. R., Cr., 53

9. ——— Prosecutor, Failure of, to appear.—Power of Magistrate to order recognisance to be forfeited.—A Subordinate Magistrate has no power to order a recognisance executed by a prosecutor before a police-station officer, binding himself to appear before the Subordinate Magistrate, to be forfeited on the failure of the prosecutor to appear. ANONYMOUS . . . 4 Mad., Ap., 18

10. ——— Failure to appear.—Forfeiture of recognisances.—The estreating of recognisances is a proceeding resorted to where persons who have undertaken to give evidence in a criminal inquiry have failed without just excuse to attend, and have thus created an obstruction to public justice, but where a Magistrate thinks it proper to estreat their recognisances, he ought to allow them an opportunity of justifying their default. QUEEN v DASSOO MANJEE 11 W. 11. ——— Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, s 219.—Forfeiture of recognisance.—Where a defendant charged with an offence bound himself to appear before a Subordinate Magistrate on the 10th June, and the defendant did appear on that day but made default on the 11th of June, on which the case was called,—Held that there was no forfeiture of the recognisance. In such cases section 219 of the Code of Criminal Procedure requires that the Magistrate shall form a reasonable opinion that there has been wilful default before issuing process to enforce the penalty. ANONYMOUS

12. ——— Forfeiture of recognisances.—Notice.—Defendants were charged with theft, and on their appearance before the Subordinate Magistrate on 1st May were bound over by recognisance to appear from that date until the close of the trial. On the 2nd May, when the case was called on, defendants were not present, but they appeared on the 3rd. The Subordinate Magistrate heard what they had to say, and directed the penalties on the forfeited recognisances to be levied from the defendants. Held that there was no ground for the interference of the High Court as a Court of Revision, that there was nothing illegal in requiring defendants to execute such a bond, and that no notice was necessary before proceeding to enforce the penalty. ANONYMOUS

Procedure Code, 1872, s. 489 — Sentence.—On a conviction of criminal trespass under section 447, Penal Code, the Joint Magistrate added to the sentence of imprisonment an order that the prisoners should give recognisances to keep the peace. The Sessions Judge recommended that the order as to recognisances should be quashed, as criminal trespass was not one of the offences detailed in section 489 for which such recognisances could be taken. The High Court declined to act on this recommendation, holding that there was nothing illegal in the Joint Magistrate's order, the conduct of the accused clearly pointing to an intention to commit a breach of the peace. QUEEN v. A separate summons should be issued to each person required to furnish security, and a separate bond taken from each, which should be in the form required by the Code, and in the order the Magistrate should state the period for which the person against whom the order is made is to be imprisoned if he fail to comply with it. cause why they should not give security to keep the peace, it having been reported to him by the police and the tehsildar of the pergunnah in which such persons resided that they were likely to commit a breach of the peace at a religious procession which was about to take place, and the holding of which was opposed to their religious tenets. After an inquiry, as against all the accused jointly, the Magistrate, on the evidence of the tehsildar and a sub-inspector of police, ordered that ten of the accused, who were said to be the "ringleaders," should enter into bonds with sureties and the rest should enter into their own recognisances to keep the peace for one year. Held that the Magistrate's order, purporting to be prepared under section 112 of the Criminal Procedure Code, did not adequately or properly disclose the substance of the report or information upon which he issued his summons. The parties were entitled to something more than a mere assertion by the Magistrate that he had been informed that a breach of the peace was likely to occur, in order to enable them, if they were in a position to do so, to bring evidence to rebut the truth of such information; that the very loose statements of the tehsildar and the sub-inspector, as to the large majority of the persons summoned, were quite insufficient to justify the wholesale order for security passed by the Magistrate; that as the religious procession would have been over in a fortnight, it was a most excessive exercise of power to require all the parties to give security for one year; and that the Magistrate should have dealt with the cases of the ten alleged "ringleaders" first, and should have required the tehsildar and sub-inspector to give much fuller statements seriatim, and particularly as to each individual man, and as to the remaining fifty-nine, there should have been some clear and distinct proof, affecting each of them, and warranting the inference that such person was likely to commit a breach of the peace or to do a wrongful act likely to occasion a breach of the peace. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 16. FORFEITURE OF RECOGNISANCES.

83. ————— Proof of forfeiture.—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 502—Evidence on oath.—A Magistrate has no jurisdiction to call on a person who has entered into a recognisance bond, under section 493 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, to pay the penalty or show cause why he should not do so, without previous prima facie proof, by which is meant evidence on oath, that it has been forfeited. IN RE HABIRAM BIRBHAN 11 Bom., 170

84. ————— Sufficiency of evidence to prove forfeiture.—Before a recognisance can be forfeited, it must be proved that the person accused has either personally broken the peace or abetted some other person or persons in breaking it. The mere fact that the accused is a servant of one of two rival parties for whose benefit the breach took place is not sufficient. QUEEN v. KALLY BHYRUB SANDYAL 11 W. R., Cr., 52

85. ————— Necessity to record evidence of forfeiture.—Before a Magistrate can declare that recognisances to keep the peace have been forfeited, he must record legal evidence in the presence of the accused, proving that he was about to do something which would cause a breach of the peace. IN RE KALIKANT ROY CHOWDREY

86. ————— Necessity for evidence of forfeiture.—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 502.—An order estreating a recognisance or a bail bond must be made upon evidence duly recorded in the case, and not upon evidence taken in other cases. Where a Magistrate makes an order forfeiting a recognisance under section 502 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the terms of the section must be strictly followed. It is not competent to direct that in default of payment the person whose recognisance is forfeited should be imprisoned, without first issuing a warrant for the attachment and sale of his immoveable property. IN THE MATTER OF MOHESH CHUNDEE ROY 10 C. 88. ——— Opportunity to accused for cross-examination of witness.—Proceedings on forfeiture of recognisance.—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1872), s. 502—A Magistrate is not justified in forfeiting a recognisance under section 502 of Act X of 1872, unless the party charged with a breach of the peace has had an opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses upon whose evidence the rule to show cause why the recognisance should not be forfeited has been issued. EMPRESS v. NOBIN CHUNDER DUTT

89. ——— Delay in taking steps to forfeit recognisance.—Invalid proceedings.—When a Magistrate has before him the fact that a person convicted by him of an offence attended with violence was under recognisance to keep the peace, and does not nevertheless proceed to forfeit such recognisance, it must be held that he thought it unnecessary to do so. Proceedings taken after the lapse of a considerable period are bad and contrary to the intention of the law. IN RE RAM CHUNDER LALLA

[1 C. L. R., 184]

90. ——— Liability to forfeiture.—Commission of offence.—Theft.—Where a person has been bound down by recognisance not to commit a breach of the peace, the amount of the recognisance cannot be recovered from him if he is guilty of an offence, such as theft, which does not amount to a breach of the peace, or which is not likely to occasion a breach of the peace. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF HABAN CHUNDER ROY

[18 W. R., Cr., 63]

91. ——— Subsequent offence.—A person was bound down under recognisances to keep the peace towards all Her Majesty's subjects for a period of one year. Some time afterwards he wrongfully confined and extorted a sum of money from two ryots who were supposed to have committed theft on his lands, he being for such offence fined and his recognisances forfeited. Held that the matter ought to have ended with the fine; for the ryots not having offered any resistance, no breach of the peace took place, and the amount of the recognisance could not be taken. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF ZEABUDDIN HOWALDAR . . . 19 W. 94. ——— Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 502.—Where certain persons were bound over to keep the peace and were subsequently convicted of voluntarily causing grievous hurt, and at the time of conviction the Magistrate made an order estreating their recognisances, as part of his judgment in the case, without in any way fulfilling the provisions of section 502 of Act X of 1872, and the convictions were quashed by the Court of Session, the High Court cancelled the order of forfeiture. *QUEEN v. 95. ——— Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 502—Forfeiture of recognisances.—Fresh recognisances.—On the 20th of April 1877 A. was bound down to keep the peace for one year. On the 14th of January 1878 he was convicted of an offence, and sentenced therefor to fine and imprisonment, but no order was made for the recovery of the penalty, though the Magistrate knew that the recognisance had been forfeited. On the 2nd of April 1878 the Magistrate, at the instance of a third party, called upon A. to show cause why the penalty of the recognisance should not be paid, and a warrant for its recovery was issued on the 6th of June 1878. Held that the warrant must be quashed, on the ground that the Magistrate having inflicted a sentence of fine and imprisonment with the knowledge that the recognisance was forfeited, he was not competent to inflict a further penalty on a reconsideration of the circumstances. IN THE MATTER OF PARBUTTI CHURN BOSE . . . 3 C. 2. ——— Trespass to personality in foreign State.—Judicial cognisance.—Question of title.—Trespass to personality in a foreign State (the title to such personality depending upon the right to land in such foreign State) is cognisable by the Recorder's Court, so as to rebut a prima facie title to such personality acquired within the Court's jurisdiction. The Recorder's Court cannot take judicial cognisance of the fact that the country in which the rights of the party attempting to rebut such prima facie title accrued is lawless and unsettled, and possesses no tribunal capable of pronouncing a decision on the rights of the parties which the Recorder's Court could consider as the decision of a Court of competent jurisdiction. Although the foreign State might be civilised, and have Courts competent to try the title, the Recorder's Court would have a right in a suit against a party subject to his jurisdiction to try incidentally the question of title to the land for the purpose of determining the right to the personality. 11, art 64—Statement of account unsigned—Cause of action.—The plaintiffs claimed on a statement of account in writing dated the 18th October 1877; this statement of account was not signed by the defendant. The date of the institution of the suit was the 30th September 1880. A Division Bench of the High Court held on the appeal on the case coming up before them on the 18th October 1877, that the suit was not based upon any express contract made between the parties; that the transaction which took place on that date did not constitute an implied contract; and that, therefore, these contentions were not open to the plaintiffs; but the Court referred the question whether the plaintiffs' claim, so far as it was based on the statement of account on the 18th October 1877, fell within article 64 of schedule II of Act XV of 1877. Held by MITTER, PRINSEP, and McDONELL, J. J.—That the question referred was a matter of limitation arising in the case which had not been decided in the order of reference, and without such a decision the case could not be disposed of; and as to that point, that the statement of account, not being signed by the defendant, did not fall within the terms of article 64 of schedule II of Act XV of 1877. Held by GARTH, C. J., and TOTTEHAM, J.—That the Division Bench having held that the transaction afforded no basis for a suit, had disposed of the case, and the question referred was therefore immaterial. *DUKUM SAHU v. REGIMENTAL DEBTS ACT.

——— 26 & 27 Vict., c. 57, ss. 5, 7, 8, 10, 12, 22, & 35.—Committee of adjustment—Royal Warrant, c. 17—“Surplus.”—“Person.”—Bona fides—The president of a committee of adjustment, appointed under the provisions of 26 and 27 Victoria, Cap 57 (Regimental Debts Act, 1863), wrote to the Agra Bank at Bombay a letter enclosing the order by which the committee had been appointed, stating that he had given over to the widow of a deceased officer the whole of the estate of her husband by direction of the Military Secretary to Government, and requesting the bank to conform to her instructions concerning the amount of deposit receipts then in charge of the bank in the name of the deceased officer. The widow had taken out no letters of administration to the estate of her husband, nor had she a preferential claim or any preferential charge against it, but she paid all the preferential charges. On receipt of the letter from the president of the committee of adjustment, the bank paid over all the moneys of the deceased officer in their hands to his widow. In a suit brought against the bank by the first plaintiff (the granddaughter of the deceased officer), who had taken out letters of administration to his estate on 6th June 1873, and her husband, the second plaintiff, to recover two thirds of the moneys so paid by the bank to the widow, with interest,—Held that, on the payment, by the widow, of the preferential charges, the whole of the property remaining in the hands of the committee was “surplus,” within the meaning of section 5 of the Regimental Debts Act of 1863, and that, assuming the Agra Bank at Bombay to be

“within the command,” within the meaning of section 7, the moneys of the deceased officer in the hands of the bank, as being part of such “surplus,” should have been dealt with by the committee in accordance with the provisions of section 10 of the Regimental Debts Act, 1863, and clause 17 of the Royal Warrant, and should have been remitted to the Military Secretary to Government. Held, also, that the Military Secretary to Government had no authority to pay or order the payment of such “surplus” to any person except in accordance with the provisions of section 12 of the Regimental Debts Act of 1863. Held, also, that section 8 of the Regimental Debts Act of 1863 did not render it incumbent on the widow, for the purpose of ousting the jurisdiction of the committee of adjustment, to pay the preferential charges before the committee had taken any steps under section 7. The true construction of section 8 is that, on payment of the preferential charges, the committee of adjustment must be regarded as functi officio, except for the purpose of reporting, and should make over whatever property they have, which comes under the denomination of “surplus,” in accordance with the terms of section 10. Held, also, that the letter of the president of the committee of adjustment was a sufficient notice to the bank that the committee were functi officio, and that the period had arrived when the civil law stepped in to regulate the case. Quære,—Whether the bank could be held to be a “person” within the meaning of section 22 of the Regimental Debts Act of 1863, but even if it could,—Held that the bank were not protected by that section, the payment by them not having been made to a “representative” as defined in the Act. Held, also, that the bank were not protected by section 35 of the Regimental Debts Act, the payment not having been made “in pursuance” of the Act and the carelessness of the bank in paying the money having been such as to amount to positive negligence, and deba them from pleading that they acted under the bona fide belief that the payment was made in pursuance of the Act. Pemberton v Chapman, 7 E. & B., 210, distinguished. *SARSTEDT v. —Deed of sale —Deed tainted by fraud—The words, “any knowledge or notice of any such unregistered deed or certificate alleged to be had by any party to such registered deed or certificate notwithstanding,” in section 2, Act XIX of 1843, referred not only to the mortgages and certificates mentioned in that part of the section which immediately precedes these words, but extended also to the deeds of sale or gift which were mentioned in the earlier part of the section. The words “provided its authenticity be established to the satisfaction of the Court” in the same section, pointed not merely at the exclusion of a forged deed from the benefit of the Act, but also of a deed tainted by fraud, although in other respects genuine. SREENATH BHUTTACHARJEE v. 13. ————— Decree on bond.—Interest

—No sum as interest from the date of decree to the date of realisation could be awarded by a decree under section 53, Act XX of 1866. a decree under that section could only award a sum not exceeding that mentioned in the bond, together with interest at the rate specified (if any) to the date of decree, and a sum for costs to be fixed by the Court. MAHCUM CHUND v. MAHTAB 3 Agra, 318

BHAIRO SINGH v. BECHOO 3 Agra, 393

14. ————— Bond specially registered.

—Interest—Where a bond was especially registered under the provisions of Act XX of 1866, the creditor was entitled, on observing the procedure there prescribed, summarily to have a decree for the amount specified, including interest up to the date of such decree. If the creditor intended to secure interest at the rate stipulated after suit and decree, it was not enough to insert the customary phrase "date of realisation" in the instrument, as such phrase must be held controlled by other parts of the agreement as expressed in the bond. ADUR MONEE DEBIA v. KOOLU CHUNDER CHATTERJEE 21 W. R., 140

15. ————— Effect of decree on registered bond—A decree under section 53 of Act XX of 1866 had all the effect of a decree in a regular suit under the Code of Civil Procedure. GUNGA NARAIN CHATTERJEE v. RADHA KRISHNA DUTT [25 W. R., 322]

16. ————— and s. 55.—Specially registered bond.—Setting aside of summary decree—A decree obtained by the plaintiff upon a specially registered bond under section 53 of Act XX of 1866, and set aside under section 55 of that Act,—Held not to bar a regular suit upon the bond. UTSHAB NARAYAN CHOWDEY v. 17. ————— Bond.—Appeal.—A petition for payment of a bond, which had been specially registered under Act XVI of 1864, was presented on the 3rd April 1866. Held that it must be considered as having been presented under section 53 of Act XX of 1866, by virtue of the 3rd section of that Act, which repealed Act XVI of 1864; consequently the decision of the Principal Sudder Ameen, to whom the petition was presented, was, under section 55 of Act XX of 1866, final. There could be no appeal from that decision; therefore the Judge had no jurisdiction to reverse the Principal Sudder

1. ————— Setting aside or staying execution of decree—Under section 55, Act XX of 1866, the Court might, after decree, on a representation by the judgment-debtor, set aside the decree, and stay or set aside execution. KRISTO KISHORE GHOSE v. BROJONATH MOZOOMDAR

[6 W. R., Civ. Ref., 11]

2. ————— Suit to set aside decree on registered bond.—Grounds for setting aside decree under s. 55, Act XX of 1866.—Decrees on two specially registered bonds were obtained against plaintiff under section 53 of the Registration Act, XX of 1866. He petitioned the Civil Court, under section 55, to set aside these decrees, on the ground that the bonds were executed on consideration of something to be done by the obligee, who had wholly failed to perform his part. The Judge dismissed the petitions, because he thought the matter was a more proper one for investigation in a regular suit. His successor dismissed the suit when brought, because, in his opinion, it did not lie. Held on appeal (by the majority of the Court) that no suit lay. The effect of sections 52 to 55 was to make a decree under them of precisely the same validity as any other decree, to make it enforceable by the same process, but to render it impeachable on the special grounds referred to in section 55. Held, also, that the matters alleged were not such as, if proved, would have justified the setting aside of the decree. The special circumstances must be such as to show a vice in the mode in which the contract to submit to decree and the special registration were obtained, and an infirmity in the original obligation will not do. SINIA TEVAR v. RANGASAMI AIYANGAR 7 Mad., 112

3. ————— Right to sue to cancel deed and enforce it—The powers conferred on the Courts under the Registration Act, 1866, for enforcement by process of execution of the payment of a bond are not inconsistent with the right to sue to cancel and annul the deed as fraudulent. SREEBAM v. HOKOOM SINGH 2 N. W., 467

The summary procedure provided for in sections 52 to 55 of this Act has been omitted in the later Acts.

8. ———— Consideration.—Assignment of mortgage—Stamp — A. executed to B an assignment of a mortgage It was stamped with a stamp of Rs168, and recited that B had instituted a suit against C to recover Rs3,000, interest and costs, and that an agreement had been come to between B and C, that, on C getting A to execute the assignment of the mortgage and on his paying Rs500, the suit should be dismissed and settled. It further recited that Rs5,000 was due to A on the mortgage, and that A had, at C's request, agreed to assign it to B. By the operative part, A, in consideration of Rs5 paid to A by B, and "in consideration of the premises," assigned the mortgage to B. Held that the consideration for the deed of assignment was not merely Rs5 paid to A, but the assignee's agreement to withdraw the suit if A assigned the mortgage to him upon the instrument; that the money value of the latter part of the consideration was the amount covered by the stamp put by the parties themselves, and as it exceeded Rs100, the deed of assignment was inadmissible in evidence for want of registration (section 17 of Act VIII of 1871). NAGO KANATURIA v. 9. ———— Agreement relating to family arrangement—Valuation for purpose of registration —Where a document was in the nature of a family arrangement, and drawn up mainly for the purpose of settling a widow's maintenance, though some right in immoveable property was created or declared by such instrument, and it was proved that the actual value of the whole of the immoveable property mentioned in the document exceeded Rs100, but there was no evidence to show that the value of the widow's right exceeded that sum,—Held that, for the purpose of registration under Act XX of 1866, the actual value of the whole immoveable property named in the document must not be taken to be the value of the right so created or declared. NILAYA KOM RACHAPPA v. RUDRAYA BIN RACHAPPA

10. ———— Bond creating charge on immoveable property—Larger sum payable on contingency —The words in section 17 of the Registration Act (VIII of 1871) "present or future," "vested or contingent," point, not to the value or its ascertainment, but to the right or interest in the land which is to be created as a security. If the charge or interest created is of a value less than Rs100, registration is needless. NARASAYYA CHETTI v. GURUVAPPA CHETTI . I. L. R., 1 Mad., 378

11. ———— Valuation of right, title, and interest created by mortgage —The value of the right, title, or interest created by a mortgage is estimated by the amount of the principal money thereby secured. The words "or in future" in section 17 of Act XX of 1866 and section 17 of Act VIII of 1871 have reference to estates in remainder or in reversion in immoveable property, or to estates otherwise deferred in enjoyment, and not to interest payable in future on principal monies lent on the security of immoveable property. NANA BIN LAKSHMAN v. ANANT BABAJI . I. L. R., 2 Bom., 353

12. ———— Bond creating interest in land.—Mode of testing value —For the purpose of registration, the value of the interest created in immoveable property by a mortgage-bond is that sum by the payment of which the interest could be determined. TIYAGARAJA PADYACHI v. RAMANUJAM PILLAI . I. L. R., 6 Mad., 422

13. ———— and s. 49.—Mortgage. —The value of the interest created by a mortgage of immoveable property is estimated, for the purposes of the Registration Act of 1871, not by the amount of the principal money thereby secured, but by the amount of such money and the interest payable thereon. Consequently, a bond, dated the 9th August 1873, which charged certain immoveable property with the payment on the 31st May 1874 of Rs98, and interest thereon at the rate of one per cent per mensem, should have been registered. Darshan Singh v. Hanwanta, I. L. R., 1 All., 274, followed. Nanabin Lakshman v. Anant Babaji, I. L. R., 2 Bom., 353, differed from. RAJPATI SINGH v. RAM SUKHI KUAR . I. L. R., 2 All., 40

14. ———— Bond hypothecating immoveable property.—The registration of a bond hypothecating immoveable property to secure the repayment of Rs95-14-0, with interest at eighteen per cent per annum, the principal to be paid in four annual instalments, three of Rs23-5-4 and the fourth of Rs25-14-0, and the whole of the interest to be paid on the date of the last instalment, without any provision that the debtor should be at liberty to anticipate the payment of any instalment, is compulsory, inasmuch as the lowest sum which the debtor could compel the creditor to accept is in excess of Rs100. The proper test for determining the value of the interest created by a mortgage for the purpose of registration is the amount of the least sum recoverable and not the consideration for the bond. Although an unregistered mortgage-bond which creates an interest in land in excess of R100 is of no effect as a mortgage, it may be received as evidence of the personal obligation Seshathri Ayyengar v Sankara Ayyen, 7 Mad., 296, followed. KATTAMURI JAGAPPA v PADALU LATCHAPPA . . . I. L. R., 5 Mad., 119

15. — Bond creating interest in immoveable property—The registration of a deed which does not necessarily create an interest in immoveable property of the value of R100 is not compulsory. Darshan Singh v. Hanwanta, I. L. R., 1 All., 274; and Rajpati Singh v Ram Sukhi Kuar, I L R., 2 All., 40, dissented from. Nana bin Lakshman v Anant Babaji, I L. R., 2 Bom., 353, and Narasayya Chetti v. Guruvappa Chetti, I L R., 1 Mad., 380, approved. A bond for R99-8-0, with interest at 12 per cent per annum, payable twelve months after date, by which immoveable property is hypothecated to secure repayment of the debt, need not be registered. SADAGOPA AYYANGAR v. DOBASAMI SASTRI . I. L. R., 5 Mad., 214

16. — Bond creating charge on immoveable property.—Mortgage—A bond which charged immoveable property with the payment on a day specified therein of R99, the principal amount, and R6, interest thereon, should have been registered under the provisions of clause (b), section 17, Act VIII of 1871. *DARSHAN SINGH v. DEOJIT v. PITAMBAR . I. L. R., 1 All., 275

17. — Bond under R100.—Compulsory registration — Priority — Mortgage-bond—A mortgage-bond for R99, repayable in nine months and eleven days, with interest at the rate of 2 per cent per mensem, does not require registration, but a registered mortgage-bond for R195, subsequently executed, will have priority over it. KORBAN ALLY MIRDHA v SHARODA PROSHAD AICH [I. 18. — Bond — Principal and interest—A bond for the payment of R83-8-0 on demand, together with interest thereon at the rate of 2 per cent. per mensem, which charges immoveable property with such payment, does not, though the amount due on it may in time exceed R100, purport to create an interest of the value of R100 within the meaning of the Registration Act, and its registration is therefore optional. KARAN SINGH v. RAM LAL . . . I. L. R., 2 All., 96

19. — Bond hypothecating immoveable property.—Amount together with interest over R100—A bond which secures by the hypothecation of immoveable property the repayment, after four months from the date thereof, of a loan of R96-15-0, with interest at the rate of 12 per cent per annum, is an instrument requiring to be registered under section 17 of Act XX of 1866. DHURMDEO NARAIN SINGH v. NUND LALL SINGH [6 N. W., 257]

20. — Mortgage—Suit on unregistered bond charging immoveable property—The obligor of a bond bearing date the 20th January 1873 agreed to pay the obligee R80, together with interest on that amount at the rate of 2 per cent. per month, between the 2nd April 1874 and the 1st May 1874, and hypothecated immoveable property as collateral security for such payment. On the 15th February 1879 the obligee sued the obligor on the bond to recover R196 8-0, being the principal amount and interest, from the hypothecated property. Held by the majority of the Full Bench (STUART, C. J., dissenting) that, for the purpose of registration, the value of the right assigned by the bond to the obligee in the property should be estimated by the amount secured for certain by the hypothecation, and that amount exceeding R100, the bond should have been registered. Per STUART, C. J.—That, for that purpose, the value of that right should be estimated by the principal amount of the bond, and that amount being under R100, the bond did not require to be registered. Nana bin Lakshman v. Anant Babaji, I L. R., 2 Bom., 353, and Narasayya Chetti v. Guruvappa Chetti, I L. R., 1 Mad., 378, followed. Per PEARSON, J., OLDFIELD, J., and STRAIGHT, J.—That a suit on a bond for money charged thereby on immoveable property, must, where the bond is not admissible in evidence because it is unregistered, fail. HIMMAT SINGH v. SEWA RAM [I. L. R., 3 All., 157]

21. — and s. 49.—Occupancy tenancy — “Immoveable property” — Mortgage — Act I of 1868 (General Clauses Act), s. 2 (5)—The obligee of a bond, dated the 29th October 1869, sued to recover the amount due thereunder from the property hypothecated therein. By the terms of the bond the obligor agreed to pay the sum of R75, with interest at 2 per cent per mensem, on the 12th May 1873. The amount thus secured exceeded R200. The property mortgaged was the tenant-holding of the obligor. Held that the interest of a tenant in his holding was right or interest to or in immoveable property; that consequently such bond, which affirmed as a security a right of which the value, estimated by the amount secured, exceeded R100, ought to have been registered, that being unregistered it could not affect the “immoveable property comprised therein,” or “be received in evidence of any transaction affecting” the same; and that the suit brought on the basis of such bond for the enforcement of the lien must, in the absence of the bond, fail. Himmat Singh v. Sewa Ram, I. L. R., 3 All., 157, followed. NABIRA RAI v. ACHAMPAT RAI . . . I. L. R., 3 All., 422 of 2 per cent, and that in the event of default of payment of the interest in any month, the whole amount mentioned in the bond should become due at once. There was no stipulation preventing the obligors from repaying the loan at any time within the six months after which it was reclaimable. Held that the only amount certainly secured by the bond was the principal, and the bond did not therefore need to be registered. AHMAD BAKHSH v. 23. ————— Bond.—Mortgage —

The immoveable property charged by a bond payable by instalments, dated the 17th December 1866, was charged for both principal and interest, and the first instalment was payable within three years from the date of the bond with the accumulated interest, and the amount then becoming due exceeded ₹100. Held, in a suit on the bond, that it was an instrument creating an interest in immoveable property of the value of ₹100 and upwards, and under section 17 of Act XX of 1866 required registration. Rajpatir Kuar v Ramsukhn Kuar, I. The ruling of the Full Bench in Himmat Singh v. Sewa Ram, I. L. R., 3 All., 157, overruled. Held, therefore, where an instrument of mortgage by way of conditional sale, dated the 2nd July 1871, secured the payment of a principal sum of ₹72, with interest at ₹2 per cent. per mensem, on the 12th May 1873, the whole amount thus secured exceeding ₹100, that the registration of such instrument was optional and not compulsory. HABIBULLAH v. should be responsible in damages for the loss occasioned to B. in respect of such default or interference at the rate of ₹40 per bigha, and for the repayment of such loan; "that if she failed to pay, B. was at liberty to recover from her person and property; and that until the conditions of the agreement were fulfilled, she hypothecated her 4-anna share in mouzah B." B. sued N. upon the "sattah" to recover ₹1,059-6-0, being the amount of such loan and damages, by the sale of such 4-anna share, such suit being founded on a breach of the agreement. Held per STUART, C. J., that, inasmuch as the value relating to the immoveable property hypothecated in the "sattah" was simply ₹99-8-0, without any stipulation as to interest or any other payment by which that sum might be augmented, the damages stipulated for depending upon a contingency which might or might not happen, and respecting which nothing could be anticipated at the time of registration, the instrument did not, under Act VIII of 1871, section 17, require registration. Darshan Singh v Hanwantia, I. 37. — Assignment of mortgage.—Extrinsic evidence.—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 91.—Title to sue.—Amendment of plaint.

—An equitable mortgage by deposit of title-deeds was created on 15th August 1862. In March 1873 the mortgagee, P. D., executed an assignment of all his property and of all debts due to him, and all the securities therefor, to the plaintiff. The assignment also contained a power of attorney from the mortgagee to the plaintiff, "in the name of the said P. D., his executors, &c., but for the sole use and benefit of the said A. D. (the plaintiff), to ask, demand, sue for, recover and receive of and from all and every the person or persons liable in that behalf all and every (inter alia) the sum and sums of money and debts hereby assigned or intended so to be or any of them or any part of any of them, to hold the same unto and to the use and behoof of the said A. D., his executors, &c." Some days after the execution of the assignment, the title-deeds, which had been deposited in 1862 with the mortgagee, were handed to the plaintiff, in accordance with the terms of an agreement to that effect contained in the assignment. The deed of assignment was not registered. On 13th August 1874 the plaintiff, as the assignee of the equitable mortgage, sued for foreclosure. The Court of first instance held that, as an assignment, the deed required registration, and that not being registered it could not be received in evidence; that under section 91 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) no evidence, other than that contained in the document itself, could be given to prove the fact of the assignment; and that, therefore, the plaintiff had failed to show a title to sue as assignee of the equitable mortgage. The Court, however, permitted an amendment of the plaint by which the plaintiff was described as suing "in his own name" and as the constituted attorney of P. D.," and then allowed the deed of assignment to be put in as evidence of the power thereby conferred on the plaintiff to sue for and recover all debts due to P. D., and therefore, to maintain the present suit in respect of the equitable mortgage. On appeal,—Held that, if the suit were regarded as the suit of P. D., the power of attorney contained in the deed did not enable the plaintiff to maintain the suit for P. D., inasmuch as it purported to enable the plaintiff to recover the debts mentioned in the deed on his own account only, and not on account of P. D.; and, on the other hand, if the suit were regarded as that of the plaintiff, the Court, by treating the power in the deed as enabling him to recover on his own account, virtually gave to that power the full effect of an assignment, and for that purpose such an assignment, whether legal or equitable, should be registered under sections 17 and 49 of Act VIII of 1871. The Court, however, being of opinion that there had not been any deliberate intention, on the part of the parties to the deed, to evade the law of registration, granted the plaintiff an adjournment of the case, in order to complete his title as an equitable mortgagee, by obtaining, registering, and putting in evidence a fresh assignment to himself from P. D. GANPAT PANDURANG v. ADARJI DADABHAI

50. — Certificate of sale — Property sold in lots.—Single sale-certificate for lots each under Rs. 100—In compliance with an application for the sale of land to satisfy a decree the Civil Court put up certain land to auction in four lots. One lot was purchased by the plaintiff for Rs. 88, and each of the other three were bought by him for less than Rs. 100, the price for the whole amounting to Rs. 111-8-0, for which amount the Court granted a single certificate of sale dated 10th February 1874. This certificate was never registered. The plaintiff applied to be put in possession, but, the defendant resisting him, his application was rejected. On the 16th of November 1879 the plaintiff brought this suit to have his right declared to the piece bought for Rs. 88, and to recover its possession. Along with the plaint the plaintiff produced the unregistered certificate of sale of the 10th February 1874. On the application of the plaintiff, another certificate for the same property was issued by the Court to the plaintiff on the 31st of October 1877,—that is, three years after the confirmation of sale. This was registered on the 20th of December 1877 and was produced by the plaintiff in the proceedings which gave rise to the present suit. It was obtained by the plaintiff on the 23rd of February 1880 and tendered in evidence, but was rejected under section 63 of the Code of Civil Procedure (XIV of 1882). Held that, although the four lots purchased by the plaintiff at the auction sale were included in one certificate of sale, such certificate, although one instrument in form, should, for the purpose of registration, be regarded

51. — Deed of compromise.—R S R, a Hindu, died in 1811, leaving a will, by which he gave his property to his four sons subject to certain charges, and among other things directed that the profits of a portion of it should be dedicated to a certain idol. After his death his sons partitioned the property. In 1857, B., one of the sons, brought a suit in the late Supreme Court to establish the will and to have the trusts carried into execution. The decree in that suit ordered that the portion so dedicated by the testator should be conveyed to N. C., B. D. N., and K. R. M., as trustees for the idol. In pursuance of this decree a conveyance was settled by the Master, but it was never executed, the parties having come to an agreement to compromise, and executed a deed to that effect on 15th March 1866. The deed recited that the parties now agreed to compromise certain suits and to execute mutual releases, &c., as thereafter declared and then witnessed that the real property belonging to the idol, which the trustees were entitled to hold under the will, was set forth in a schedule, and that it had been agreed that a conveyance should be executed to the plaintiff and others in trust for the idol, and that the same should be duly registered, provision was then made for the settlement of the dedicated portion, when for more than one year, and extending beyond the term of the turn of worship of any one of the parties; and there was a declaration that all leases, &c., made without consent of the parties should only be valid for the turn of worship of such party, that the rents and profits were to pass to and remain with the party or parties who should for the time being be entitled to the turn of worship, and that a house of worship should be built for the idol on the land mentioned in the schedule. Provision was also made for the forfeiture of interest of any party who should renounce the Hindu religion, and it was declared that a certain portion was not to be considered divided as theretofore, but that it belonged to the plaintiff, and was not liable to be sold. Held (reversing the decision of MARKBY, J.) that the document was one which required registration under section 13 of Act XVI of 1864. *RAJKUMAR ROY v. In a suit on the basis, of the documents for foreclosure or for sale of the property, or in the alternative for a conveyance of the legal estate,—Held that the letter itself was not a contract of mortgage, and was without registration admissible in evidence of the equitable mortgage which had been completed upon deposit of the title-deeds. Held, also, that the fact of the existence of the letter would not prevent the plaintiff from giving any other evidence in proof of his claim. Kedar Nath Dutt v Sham Lal Khetry, 11 B. property situate in the village of Angur, near Junnar, in the district of Poona. On reading that advertisement plaintiff entered into a negotiation with the solicitors of the widow and administratrix of the owner of the said property for the purchase of a certain portion of it. On the 26th May 1874 the plaintiff wrote a letter to the solicitors, offering to purchase the said property for Rs14,000 on certain conditions, and proposing to pay a deposit of Rs1,000 as earnest-money if the offer was accepted. On the following day the solicitors informed plaintiff, in writing, that the widow accepted his offer, and requested him to deposit the earnest-money offered by him in his letter. Plaintiff accordingly deposited the earnest-money (Rs1,000) with the solicitors on the same day, and obtained from them a receipt, bearing a one-anna receipt stamp. The receipt mentioned the money as being in part payment of the sum of Rs14,000, the amount for which the plaintiff had agreed to purchase the property. Instead of completing the contract of sale with the plaintiff, and putting him in possession of the property, the widow sold it to other persons. In a suit of the nature of a suit for specific performance brought by the plaintiff, as first purchaser, against the widow and the other purchasers to set aside the subsequent sale of the property, and to compel the widow to execute a conveyance thereof to the plaintiff, the following documents were produced and tendered in evidence, viz, the advertisement of the 9th March, the plaintiff's letter of the 26th May (exhibit No 3), the solicitors' reply (exhibit No 4), and their receipt of the 27th May 1874 (exhibit No. 5), and it was contended that three of the four documents—viz, exhibits Nos 3, 4, and 5—required registration under the Registration Act (VIII of 1871), section 17. Held that the plaintiff's letter (exhibit 3) offering to purchase the property in question, and the letter of acceptance (exhibit 4) written on behalf of the vendor (defendant No 1) by her attorneys, did not fall within clause (b) of the 17th section of the Registration Act (VIII of 1871), and were admissible in evidence to prove the contract of sale, although not registered. The acceptance of the plaintiff's offer was conditional on his payment of the Rs1,000 as earnest-money, and therefore, until that sum was paid, no estate, legal or equitable, in the property passed to the plaintiff. Quære,—Whether the letters between the parties (exhibits Nos 3 and 4), even if they did constitute a complete contract for sale, unincumbered by the necessity for the payment of the deposit by way of earnest, could be regarded as "instruments" within the meaning of section 17 of the Registration Act (VIII of 1871). *WAMAN RAMCHANDRA v. 60. ————— and cl. (c) and s. 49.—*Unregistered document—Document to contradict witness—Meaning of word “declare” in section 17 of Act III of 1877—Acknowledgment, Necessity for registration of—*S. and R. sued their brothers M. and V. in 1880 for partition of the family property. The defendants pleaded that the property had been partitioned in 1870, and that the various members of the family had been ever since in possession and enjoyment of their respective shares. At the hearing a document was produced by the defendant M., dated the 13th January 1877, which was proved to have been signed by his three brothers, S., R. and V., on the occasion of M.’s effecting a mortgage of part of the property. This document contained the following words: “Our eldest brother M. has built houses and is building new houses on property appertaining to his share . . . To the same we three persons and our heirs and representatives have no interest of any kind whatever. If we or they should prefer any claim, then the same is to be null. This release paper we have duly passed in writing jointly and severally and in sound mind.” This document had not been registered, and was, therefore, inadmissible as evidence of the alleged partition. In cross-examination of the plaintiff R., he was interrogated as to the circumstances under which the mortgage was made by M. on the 13th January 1877. He said: “I was present when the mortgage was made, but I was ill in bed . . . This was on the 13th January 1877. . . I did not say on that day that I had no claim to the property.” He was then shown the above document, and admitted his signature. The document was then tendered in evidence, not as a release, but to contradict the witness. Held that the document was admissible for that purpose, as it was not a document which itself declared a right in immoveable property in the sense intended by section 17 of the Registration Act, III of 1877. It was an acknowledgment that there had, in time past, been a partition between the brothers who signed it and the defendant M., but it was not itself the instrument of partition. That an acknowledgment of a partition is distinct from the instrument of partition, is to be gathered from clause (c) of section 17 of the Registration Act, III of 1877. Had the terms of clause (b) of that section been satisfied by a mere acknowledgment, clause (c) would have been superfluous. Its operation is to require an acknowledgment in the form of a receipt to be registered, but not an acknowledgment in any other shape as distinguished from the instrument of the transaction. The word “declare” in section 17 of the Registration Act, III of 1877, is to be taken in the same sense as the words “create, assign, &c.” used in the same section,—viz., as implying a definite change of legal relation to the property by an expression of will embodied in the document referred to. It implies a declaration of will, not a mere statement of a fact, and thus a deed of partition which causes a change of legal relation to the property divided amongst all the parties to it, is a declaration in the intended sense, but a letter containing an admission, direct or inferential, that a partition once took place, does not “declare” a right within the meaning of the section. It is not the expression or declaration of will by which the right is constituted. Quare,—Whether, if the above document were itself a release operating or intended to operate as a declared volition constituting or severing ownership, it could be received even for the purpose of contradicting a witness who had denied that he had previously made a statement inconsistent with his evidence. SAKHARAM KRISHNAJI v MADAN KRISHNAJI . . . I. 61. ————— Release—In June 1875 L. executed a bond in favour of S., in which he mortgaged, amongst other property, a village called Chand Khera, as security for the payment of certain moneys. He subsequently sold such village to A., concealing the fact that it had been mortgaged to S. On this fact coming to the knowledge of A., he threatened L. with a criminal prosecution, whereupon L. proposed to S. in writing that the security of a share in a village called Kelsa, which he alleged was his property, should be substituted for the security of Chand Khera. S. accepted this proposal by a letter in which he referred to L.’s proposal in terms. It subsequently appeared that the share in Kelsa did not belong to L., but to another person. S. having sued upon his bond, claiming to enforce thereunder a lien upon Chand Khera, A. set up as a defence to the suit that S. had agreed to substitute Kelsa for Chand Khera in the bond, producing S.’s letter as evidence of the agreement. Held that such letter operated as a release, and should therefore have been stamped and registered. SAFDAR ALI KHAN v. sequently sought to enforce the hypothecation against the whole of the mortgaged property. Held that the agreement, being a new contract for a fresh consideration between persons who were not parties to the mortgage, was not, as between the parties to the mortgage, a release which the law required to be in writing and registered. GURDIAL MAL v JATHRI MAL I. 70. ———— Acknowledgment of receipt of consideration.—J. T. passed a writing to V., under date 28th April 1874, stipulating that the deed of sale of J. T.'s bungalow to V. for Rs4,300, which was to have been made that day, owing to certain circumstances therein mentioned, should be made and delivered by J. T. to V. twenty days thereafter. The writing further acknowledged the receipt, by J. T. from V., of Rs100 as earnest-money for the purchase of the bungalow, and concluded with certain penalties in the event of a default by either party. In a suit in the nature of a suit for specific performance brought by V. to compel J. T. to execute the deed of sale to V., and to register the same as promised in the writing of 28th April 1874,—Held that the writing required registration under Act VIII of 1871, section 17, clauses 2 and 3, as it distinctly acknowledged the receipt of Rs100 as part of the consideration for the sale of the house to the plaintiff for the sum of Rs4,300, and operated to create an interest in the house of the value of Rs100 and upwards. *Mahad v. The receipt mentioned the money as being in part payment of the sum of Rs. 14,000 the amount for which the plaintiff had agreed to purchase the property. Instead of completing the contract of sale with the plaintiff and putting him in possession, the defendant sold it to other persons. In a suit to set aside the sale to them and to compel the defendant to execute a conveyance to the plaintiff,—Held that the receipt for Rs. 1,000 earnest-money (exhibit No. 5) fell within clause (3) of section 17 of the Registration Act (VIII of 1871), as being an acknowledgment of the receipt or payment of consideration on account of the creation of a right, title or interest in immoveable property of the value of upwards of Rs. 100, and was, therefore, inadmissible in evidence, not having been registered, but that under section 91 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) oral evidence was admissible to prove the payment, notwithstanding the existence of the written receipt. The third clause of section 17 of the Registration Act (VIII of 1871) includes within its scope a payment of a part of the consideration as well as a payment of the whole of it. WAMAN RAM CHANDRA v. I will cause the aforesaid two fields to be entered in your name. Nothing remains due by or to either of us in respect of the produce of these fields." The document was stamped as a receipt with a stamp of one anna.—Held that, for the purpose of establishing satisfaction of all claims which the plaintiff and the defendant had upon one another, the document was admissible in evidence, but that, if used as evidence of title, it came within the provisions of section 17 of the Registration Act (XX of 1866), and the corresponding provisions of the Registration Act (III of 1877), and was inadmissible unless duly registered. FAKI v. under an hypothecation bond does not require registration under section 17, clause (c) of the Registration Act, unless the fact is referred to as a consideration for a contractual engagement, whereby the interest created by the prior registered instrument is limited or extinguished. 79. ———— and cl. b. — Receipts by mortgagee — Receipts passed by a mortgagee for sums paid on account of the mortgage-debt, and exceeding R100 each, are not inadmissible in evidence for want of registration under Act III of 1877, section 17. The technical term "consideration" implies that the person to whom the money is paid himself limits or extinguishes his interest in the land in consideration of such payment. Such limitation or extinction (if there can be said to be any) as results from the payment on account of the mortgage-debt is the legal consequence of such payment, and not the act of the mortgagee. The payment reduces the sum due at the time on the mortgage, and thus modifies the account between the mortgagor and mortgagee. But it does not operate to limit or confine within narrower limits the right or interest of the mortgagee in the land, which is simply to have the payment of the principal and interest secured on the mortgaged premises by some one or other of the remedies available for that purpose. Money paid on account of a mortgage-debt is not the consideration for the limitation or extinction of so much of the interest in the land created by the mortgage, and a receipt for such a payment need not, therefore, be registered under section 17, clause (b), of the Registration Act III of 1877. Dalip Singh v Durga Prasad, 1 L R., 1 All., 442, dissented from. SHIDLINGAPA v CHENBASAPA. . . for renewal on expiration.—A kabuliat in which a ryot agreed to hold land under a pottah for a specified year, the agreement between the parties being that at the close of that period a fresh settlement would be made, was held to be a lease for one year, and not to need registration under Act XX of 1866 as being a lease for more than a year, although a clause intervened between the above clauses to the effect that year by year the ryot would pay rent at the above rate. JUGDESH CHUNDER BISWAS v ABEDOLLAH MUNDUL 14 W. lease is only for one year with option to the lessor to allow the lessee to continue his tenure on the old conditions after expiration of the year,—Held that the absolute right of the lessee is restricted to one year; and that the lease is therefore a one year's lease, the registration of which is not necessary. SOUTHU PURSAD DASS v. PARASU PADHAN. SOUTHU PURSAD DASS v. RUGHOO PADHAN. . . . 26 W. R., 98

99. ———— Lease for so long as tenant continues to pay—A lease for so long as the lessee or tenant continues to pay the stipulated rent is a lease not limited to a year, and must be registered under section 17 of the Registration Act of 1866, and not being registered cannot be received in evidence under section 49 of that Act. SHEOGHOLAM v. BUDDREE NATH 4 N. W., 36

100. ———— Zur-i-peshgi lease.—“Leases not exceeding one year.” Meaning of.—Leases which were exempted from the operation of section 17, clause 2, Act XX of 1866, were leases the term of which was one year certain. Where a zur-i-peshgi lease was granted for one year, but with a stipulation that unless the loan were repaid within that time it should continue in force,—Held that such a lease came within the words of section 17, clause 4, Act XX of 1866, “leases of immoveable property for any term exceeding one year” of which registration was compulsory. BHOJANI MAHTO v. SHIBNATH PARA I. L. R., 13 Cal., 113

101. ———— Kabuliat or lease.—Lease for so long as landlord might leave land with tenant—A kabuliat or lease, under which the tenant might claim possession of the land for one year, but was to pay rent to the landlord so long as the landlord might leave the land with the tenant, did not require registration. JAGJIVANDAS JAWHEERDAS v. 102. ———— Bhadekhat—Lease.—Held that a bhadekhat is an agreement between a lessee and a lessor in the nature of a counterpart of a lease, and that an instrument of this character must, for the purposes of the Registration Act, be treated as a lease. Held, also, that a provision in the bhadekhat, that the lessee might after six months remain in occupation at a monthly rent, till the lessor called upon him to vacate, did not extend the term for which the lease was granted, as to the conclusion of that term the lessee would be only a monthly tenant of the lessor, and therefore it did not require registration under section 17 of Act XX of 1866. MORO VITHAL v. 103. ———— and s. 49.—Lease.—Lease from year to year—In a suit for possession of a piece of land, and for rent of the same, the plaintiff produced in support of his claim two sarkhats or kabulats purporting to be executed in his favour by the defendants, and dated respectively in January 1875 and June 1876. were not registered. The first after reciting that the executant had taken the land from the plaintiff, on a specified yearly rent, and promised to pay the same yearly, proceeded as follows: “If the owner of the land wishes to have it vacated, he shall give me fifteen days’ notice, and I will vacate without making objection. If I delay in vacating the land the owner can realise, by recourse to law, rent from me at the rate of Rs per annum.” The second sarkhat, after reciting that the executants had taken the land from the plaintiff on a yearly rent specified, for six years, and promised to pay the same year by year, proceeded thus: “And if the said Shaikh wishes to have the land vacated within the said term, he shall first give us fifteen days’ notice, and we will vacate it without objection.” The lower Courts held that the sarkhats were not admissible in evidence, as they required registration under section 17 (4) of the Registration Act VIII of 1871, being leases of immoveable property from year to year or reserving a yearly rent. Held that the two sarkhats created no rights except those of tenants-at-will, inasmuch as the clause common to both to the effect that at any time, at the will of the lessor, the lessees were to give up the land at fifteen days’ notice, governed all the previous clauses, and the defendants could be asked to quit at any time before the lapse of the term at fifteen days’ notice. Held, therefore, that the leases did not fall under section 17 (4) of Act VIII of 1871; that their registration was not compulsory; and that they could not be excluded from evidence under section 49 of Act III of 1877, which governed the question of admissibility, while Act VIII of 1871 governed the question whether registration was or was not compulsory. KHUDA BAKSH v. 104. ———— Lease—Exemption from registration by Government—Leases for a term not exceeding five years, with a rent reserved not exceeding Rs50, being exempted by the local Government from registration,—Held that a pottah for one Fasl to remain in force until another pottah is granted, with a rent reserved of Rs110 did not fall within the exemption. Held also that such a pottah was a lease for a term exceeding one year and not a lease for a year, and therefore subject to the general provision of clause d, section 17, of the Registration Act, 1877. VENKATACHELLAM CHETTI v. 117. ——— and cl. b.—Document creating a right to obtain another document—Pleading—Admission—Effect of admission in pleading of execution of contract—Evidence to prove an admitted document not necessary.—Evidence— By an agreement, dated 2nd August 1880, the defendant agreed to sell to the plaintiff a certain piece of land with a dwelling-house for R1,900. At the time of the execution of this agreement the plaintiff paid the defendant R100 earnest-money, and the agreement provided that the remaining R1,800 should be paid within a month from the date of the agreement when the deed of conveyance of the property should be executed. The material part of the agreement was as follows: "I have received from you R100, namely, rupees one hundred, as earnest (i.e.) at the time of the execution of this bargain-paper. And as to the remaining R1,800, namely, one thousand and eight hundred, the same are duly to be paid to me within one month from this day, when you will get the deed (or) document made in your favour. And all the expenditure in respect of the deed (or) documents and transferring (the property) to your name you are duly to make on your account. . . . On these terms this informal bargain-paper having been written, is agreed to and delivered." The plaintiff sued for specific performance, and tendered the agreement in evidence, although unregistered. Held that the document, although unregistered, was admissible in evidence under clause (h) of section 17 of the Registration Act III of 1877. Being unregistered it could not create or assign the interest intended by the parties to be transferred, and being thus incapable of carrying out the primary intention of the parties, the agreement became one "merely creating a right to obtain another document which would, when executed," effect the desired purpose if the execution were accompanied with registration. The right given by the agreement was merely a right in personam, and the agreement was admissible in evidence to show the contract entered into for another conveyance, though not as a conveyance itself. BURJOEJI CURSETJI PRATHAKA v. 2. ——— Lease expressing tenant's willingness to continue tenant after a year.—Lease— A lease for one year certain, containing an expression, on the tenants' part, of readiness to hold the land longer at the same rent if the landlord should desire it, is a lease for a term not exceeding one year, the registration of which is optional under section 18 of the Registration Act (VIII of 1871). APU BUDGAYDA v. 3. ——— Lease for one year.—Lease exceeding one year— A kabuhut dated the 6th May 1880, and executed by the lessee of a house in favour of the lessors, set forth that the house was let to the former at an annual rent of R3 for a term of one year. It also contained this stipulation: "I (the lessee) do declare that I shall continue to pay the annual rent every year, and that if I should fail to pay the rent in any year, the owners of the house shall be at liberty to recover the rent through the Court." The lease was not registered. In a suit by the lessors against the lessee for possession of the house and for R7-8 arrears of rent, the defendant pleaded that, according to the right construction of the lease, he was entitled to occupy the house and the lessors were not entitled to eject him therefrom, so long as he paid the annual rent of R3, that he had duly paid rent at the agreed rate from the 6th May 1880 to the 6th May 1884, and that, under these circumstances, the plaintiffs were not entitled to either of the reliefs claimed. Held that the lease was for one year only, and thus falling under section 18 of the Registration Act (III of 1877), it was admissible in evidence without registration, that the defendant had been a mere tenant-at-will since the expiry of the year 1880-81, and that the plaintiffs were therefore entitled to possession of the house. *Hand v. 4. ——— Admissibility in evidence of unstamped and unregistered document—Entry in book showing extent of holding and rate of rent.—Admission—A lessor having let certain lands to a lessee under a verbal agreement, the lessee entered upon possession. Afterwards, and during the lessee's occupation, an entry showing the extent of the holding and the amount of rent payable in respect of it was made in a book of the lessor and signed by the lessee. In a suit subsequently brought by the lessor against the lessee for arrears of rent, the lessee did not deny that he was a tenant of the lessor, but disputed the extent of his holding and the rate of rent. Held that the entry in the book of the lessor did not, although signed by the lessee, amount to a lease or to an agreement for a lease, but to an admission only, and could therefore be used as evidence against the lessee, although neither stamped nor registered. *NARAIN COOMARY v. perty—The only two things which are absolutely required by section 21 of Act XX of 1866, as conditions without compliance with which registration is prohibited are, first, that the instrument shall contain a description of the property sufficient to identify it, and secondly, that if the instrument contains a map, a copy or copies of the map shall accompany the instrument when presented for registration. The other provisions of section 21 are directory only. The circumstance, therefore, that the description of the parcels in the instrument does not specify the registration district, or sub-district, or division, or village, in which the property is situate, or the former occupancy, is not alone sufficient to disentitle a party getting an instrument registered, if the description in the instrument is sufficient to identify the property. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF NARAINASAMI PILLAI. 4 Mad., 91

2. ——— Presentation of two instruments.—Description of property only in one—Where two instruments are contained in the same paper and relate to the same property, and are both presented for, and in all other respects are entitled to, registration, it is not a sufficient ground for refusing registration that in one of the documents the property is described only by reference to the other. Though in the later of two instruments there are no words directly referring to the first, yet the frame of the document showing that the second document should be taken to refer to the first, the second document must be taken to contain a sufficient reference to the first. The party desiring registration ought to apply to the Registrar before the period for registration has gone by, either to register or to refuse to register, so as to enable him, in case of refusal, to take further proceedings under section 73. The vendor having failed to execute such deed, the vendee, more than four months after the date of the agreement, presented it for registration. Held that the conduct of the parties concerned could in no way affect the period of limitation within which such agreement could have been registered under the Act, and that the agreement could not be registered. NOBAN NUSYA v. 6. ——— Presentation for registration.—Limitation for completion of registration—There is no provision, either in the Registration Act or in the Stamp Act, which lays down that where a document is presented for registration insufficiently stamped, such a presentation shall have no effect. The only effect of such a presentation is that the actual registration is delayed. There is in law no limitation for the actual fact of registration, provided that the requirements of the Act have been complied with in the matters for which a limitation of time is provided. Mukhun Lall Panday v. ——— s. 28 (1871, s. 28) and s. 85.—“Whole or some portion of the property”—The terms of section 28 of Act VIII of 1871 must not be construed in their literal sense, inasmuch as to do so would defeat the intention of the Legislature that registration should be made with reference to the locality of the property to which the document relates; and hence the words of the section “some portion of the property” must be read as meaning some substantial portion. A bond which purported to mortgage 500 square yards of land situate at P., two entire villages and shares in four teen villages in the G district, and a village in the C district, and which required registration under Act VIII of 1871, was registered at P. Held that the bond was not properly registered in accordance with the provisions of section 28 of Act VIII of 1871. Per MAHMOOD, J.—The imperative direction of section 28 of Act VIII of 1871 is addressed not to the registering officer, but to the person presenting a document to that officer for registration; and therefore section 85, which refers only to defects in the appointment or procedure of the registering officer, could not cure the irregularity which was committed under section 28. SHWO DAXAL MAL v. HARI RAM. I. L. R., 7 All, 590

——— s. 31 (1871, s. 31) and s. 85.—Presentation.—Residence of executant—Intending to register.—Special cause—Registration Act VIII of 1871, ss. 31 and 85—The words “any person intending to register any document” in section 31 of the Registration Act VIII of 1871 include, not only the person or persons in whose favour a document is executed, but also any person or persons executing the same. Under the provisions of that section, therefore, the presentation of a document for registration, on special cause shown, at the residence of a party executing it, is valid. The registering officer is the judge of the sufficiency of the special cause; and, if he is satisfied, the Civil Court has no power to question his decision on that point. Assuming the presentation at the residence of one of the executants of a document for registration to be an irregularity, it is one which, if committed in good faith, is covered

The other party is not required to appear. An agreement to let premises may be made by an agent, there is no law that it shall be signed by the principal. BISSENDOTAL v. SCHLAEFFER

The zemindar appeared at the registration office, and admitted the execution of the pottah but did not assent to its being registered, whereupon the registering officer withheld registration. Held that it was the duty of the registering officer to register the pottah, notwithstanding the executant's refusal of assent. MAGON MALLO v. 2. ——— Deed of sale—Refusal of vendor to endorse deed—Refusal to register, Ground for.—A deed of sale of land situated in the registration district of Calcutta was executed and presented by the purchaser for registration. The vendor appeared personally, and admitted execution, but refused to endorse the deed, on the ground that she did not intend to sell, but only to renew a certain deed of mortgage. The Registrar refused to register the deed. Held that the Registrar was justified in refusing to register the deed, on the ground that the vendor, one of the parties to it, refused to endorse it. IN THE MATTER OF THE INDIAN REGISTRATION ACT AND BRAJANATH PYNE

4. ———— Admission of execution of document—Setting up collateral agreement.—Where the defendant admitted the execution of the documents, but set up a collateral agreement which would render the documents of no legal force, the lower Courts found that the agreement relied on by the defendant was come to with the plaintiff Held (reversing the decrees of the lower Courts) that, execution having been admitted, the documents ought to be registered. RAMANADAN CHETTY v VIJASAMY 4 Mad., 425

5. ———— Improper admission to registration—Suit on deed improperly admitted to registration—H and S. admitted in the registering office the execution of a deed of sale purporting to be executed by H, S, and M. The third person did not appear before the registering officer and did not admit or deny the execution of the deed, on her part, but the other two persons stated that it had been executed without her knowledge or authority. It was held that, under the provisions of sections 34 and 35 of Act VIII of 1871, the registering officer was not warranted in registering the deed. The deed of sale, which the suit was brought to enforce, not having been registered according to law, could not be received in evidence of the sale, and the suit to enforce the sale was unmaintainable. BALJNATH v MAHOMED LEADAT 7 N. W., 185

6. ———— Refusal to register.—Disability of executants from minority, idiocy or lunacy.—The words of section 35 of the Registration Act, VIII of 1871, which provide that "If all or any of the persons by whom the document [i.e., the document presented for registration] purports to be executed deny its execution, or if any such person appears to be a minor, an idiot, or a lunatic, or if any person by whom the document purports to be executed is dead, and his representative or assign denies its execution, the registering officer shall refuse to register the document," taken literally, seem to require the registering officer to refuse registration of a deed which purports to be executed by several persons if any one of them deny execution, or appear to be a minor, an idiot, or a lunatic. Since such a construction would cause great difficulty and injustice, and would be inconsistent with the language and tenor of the rest of the Act, the words in question must be read distributively, and construed to mean that the registering officer shall refuse to register the document in so far as the persons who deny the execution of the deed and in so far as such persons as appear to be under any of the disabilities mentioned. The registration of a deed is not necessarily invalid by reason of a failure on the part of the registering officer to comply with the provisions of the Registration Act. Muk-hun Lall Panday v Koondun Lall, 15 B. 7. ———— Refusal to register.—Disability of minority.—The object of section 35 of the Registration Act, 1877, which directs the registering officer to refuse to register a document if the person by whom it purports to be executed appears to be a minor, is, that if the registration authorities refuse to register on that ground, the question of minority may at once be brought into a Civil Court, and there determined. The defendant purchased the same land by a deed dated the 14th June 1879. It was registered on the same day. That deed recited that the land was in the possession of the plaintiff as tenant. Both the deeds were optionally registrable. The Subordinate Judge rejected the plaintiff's claim, and awarded the land to the defendant. His decree was affirmed, on appeal, by the District Judge on the ground that the defendant's deed was registered before the plaintiff's deed. On appeal to the High Court, —Held that the plaintiff was entitled to the land. Both the deeds having been registered according to law, they operated from their respective dates of execution as provided by section 47 of the Registration Act III of 1877. Held, also, that the defendant had notice of the plaintiff's equitable title to the land. REGISTRATION ACT, 1877—continued.

1. ————— s. 48 (1871, s. 48; 1866, s. 48).—Verbal contract between Hindus—Subsequent registered deed—Where a lien by verbal contract and deposit of title-deeds of immovable property in the Island of Bombay by a Hindu in favour of a Hindu was created before the 1st of January, 1865, when the first general Registration Act (XVI of 1864) came into force, and a Gujarati document (unregistered) was subsequently (on the 13th of June 1865) executed by the giver of the lien which set out its particulars, and acknowledged the receipt of the loan on account of which the lien was given,—it was held that the original oral contract of lien, being in itself a perfected transaction, was not merged in or invalidated by the subsequent document, and that, therefore, the fact of the latter not being registered did not affect the validity of the prior transaction. Section 48 of Act XX of 1866, which enacted that all instruments duly registered under that Act and relating to moveable or immovable property should take effect against any oral agreement relating to the same property, did not apply to oral agreements completed before Act XVI of 1864 came into force. JIVANDAS KESHAVJI v. FRAMJI NANABHAI

[7 Bom., O. C., 45]

2. ————— Registration of illegal or fraudulent document—Priority—Oral agreement accompanied by possession.—English principles of equity—Persons claiming under a registered document which has been given, accepted, and registered in fraud of a third party, and in collusion with the grantor, are not entitled to the benefit of section 48 of the Registration Act (VIII of 1871), and therefore the registration of a document of title which has been procured in fraud of a party possessing a prior equitable title, or with actual notice of his prior equitable title, does not deprive such party of his priority. Registration cannot confer validity upon an instrument which is ultra vires, or illegal, or fraudulent. The reason for the exception made by section 48 of the Registration Act (VIII of 1871) in favour of an oral agreement accompanied by possession, is, that by such possession the parties who rely on a subsequent registered deed had, or might, if they had been reasonably vigilant, have had, previously to their entering into their contract with the vendor and to their taking a conveyance, notice, by the fact of such possession, that there was some prior claim to the property. Therefore, where there is actual notice of a prior oral agreement, although unaccompanied by possession, the object of the Legislature is fully attained. Hicks v. Powell, 4 Ch., 741; Futteechand Sahoo v. Leelumber Singh Dass, 14 Moore's I A., 129 9 B. L. R., 433, and Valaji Isaji v. Thomas, 1 L. R., 1 Bom., 194, distinguished. 5. ————— Priority.—Verbal sale with possession—Registered deed—Held that a deed of sale of immovable property, duly registered under Act XX of 1866, was to be preferred to a prior verbal sale of the same property accompanied by possession, where it appeared that it was the intention of the parties to the verbal sale to complete the transaction by a deed. Semble,—That the effect would have been the same if there had been no such intention. *BHANDU VALAD RAJABAM v. 2. ——— Properly-registered document, Requisites of.—Act XX of 1866, ss. 66, 67, 68, and 69.—The registration of a document under Act XX of 1866 is complete when all the requirements stated in sections 66, 67, 68, and 69 have been fulfilled, and the certificate mentioned in section 68 is prima facie evidence of such completeness. Where a kobala bore the above certificate, a memorandum from the Sub-Registrar, stating that he was not satisfied that the heirship of the party conveying had been established, was held in no way to affect the registration. Where the requirements of the law had been fulfilled, a report made by the Sub Registrar, in which he expressed his intention to reject the document, was held not to affect its claim to being a well-registered document within the meaning of section 49. ROHIMOONISSA v. 13. ———— Admissibility of document requiring registration.—Divisible transaction.—When a transaction is indivisible, and the registration of the document evidencing it is by law compulsory, the document will not be admissible in evidence if not duly registered, but when the transaction is divisible,—as when upon a loan of money it is agreed (i) that the loan shall be secured by a bond containing a covenant for repayment of the sum advanced with interest within a certain time, and also (ii) that certain designated property shall be hypothecated as collateral security for the repayment of the loan,—the same rule does not apply, and an unregistered bond for the amount advanced, with interest, containing a further provision that as collateral security for the amount advanced certain property should remain hypothecated, may be used as evidence of the loan, although inadmissible to prove the hypothecation. KRISHTO LALL GHOSE v. BONOMALEE ROY

14. ———— Admissibility of unregistered bond in evidence to prove money-debt.—Collateral security.—In order to secure a loan of ₹120 the defendant executed a bond to repay the loan with interest, which provided that by way of collateral security certain immoveable property should be hypothecated. The bond was not registered. In a suit upon the bond praying for a money-decree against the defendant and for a declaration of a lien upon the property hypothecated, it was objected that the bond was inadmissible in evidence by reason of its not being registered. Held that the bond might be taken as divisible in its nature, as being a money-bond with a provision that certain property should be hypothecated as collateral security, and that it was therefore admissible in evidence. GOUR CHURN SURMA v. JINUT ALI 11 C. L. R., 166

tration Act in force at the time,—Held that the bond could only be sued upon as a money-bond, and though the suit might be brought in a Court within whose jurisdiction the land was not situated, the Judge would have no right, even with the consent of the parties, to deal with it as a mortgage, or to make any decree affecting the land in dispute. *SHIBO SOONDUBEE DEBIA v. 16. ——— Admissibility in evidence of unregistered deed in suit to recover debt—Where an instrument purports to create an interest in immoveable property only as a collateral security for the payment of money, and is also a simple contract or bond for the payment of a debt, and where effect is sought to be given to the instrument only as a simple contract, it is admissible in evidence in a suit to recover the debt, though it has not been registered. So far as it is a contract for the payment of money, it is an instrument the registration of which is made optional by section 18 of Act XX of 1866. VELLAYA PADAYACHY v. MOORTHY PADAYACHY. 4 Mad., 174

17. ——— Instrument creating interest in immoveable property—Suit for money-debt—The plaintiff sued, as the assignee of a mortgagee of immoveable property, to recover the amount of the debt from the mortgagor in pursuance of an express contract to pay the debt contained in the mortgage. The mortgage was executed before the Registration Act (XVI of 1864) came into operation. The assignment to the plaintiff was executed after the Registration Act (XX of 1866) became law. Held per BITTLESTON, INNES, and COLLETT, JJ., that the assignment, being an instrument operating to create an interest in immoveable property, and as such requiring to be registered under section 17 of Act XX of 1866, was not admissible in evidence in a suit to enforce the personal obligation only. Per SCOTLAND, C.J.,—That an instrument which has the two-fold operation of a simple contract or bond to pay a debt and a collateral mortgage security for the debt, is admissible in evidence for the purpose of proving the simple contract debt. ACHOO BAYAHAM v. DHANY RAM. 4 Mad., 378

18. ——— Admissibility of unregistered document in which land is pledged as a collateral security in a suit to enforce the personal security—Under the provisions of section 49 of Act VIII of 1871, an unregistered bond, though immoveable property be made by the terms of it collateral security, is admissible in evidence in a suit to enforce the personal liability of the person executing the bond. It is only excluded where it is offered as evidence of a transaction affecting immoveable property. SESHATHRI AYYENGAR v. SANKARA AYYEN

made in 1870 whilst the Registration Act, XX of 1866, was in force. By Act XX of 1866 the document was not admissible in evidence even to enforce the demand for money, the document not having been registered. By Act VIII of 1871 (the Registration Act) the document was rendered admissible when the suit was brought. Held that the document was admissible in evidence. *GUDURI JAGANNADHAM v. 20. ——— and s. 17.—Unregistered conveyance—Covenant to pay money continuing on ejectment—Suit for money dismissed—By an unregistered document A stipulated that B should enjoy certain land for a term of years in order that a debt and interest might be liquidated by receipt of profits, estimated at a fixed sum, and it was provided that, if B's possession was disturbed in the meantime, A should pay the balance of the principal then due and interest from the date of the loan. B having been ejected, sued A. upon the covenant to pay. Held that, as the covenant to pay depended on the principal contract, which could not be proved for want of registration, B. could not recover. *VENKATRAYUDU v. 21. ——— Admissibility in evidence of unregistered bond.—Suit for money due on bond.—Held by COUCH, C. 22. ——— Admissibility in evidence of unregistered bond—Suit for money due on bond.—Where a bond or other instrument creating an interest in land also contains a distinct promise to pay the money due under it, such bond or instrument is evidence in a suit brought to recover the money only. *SANGAPPA BIN NINGAPPA v. 23. ——— Admissibility in evidence of unregistered bond—Suit for money due on bond.—An unregistered bond containing the condition that the lender will get possession of certain land in default of payment by the borrower within a specified time, is admissible in evidence in case the lender sues, not to enforce any charge or lien against the land, but seeks for personal relief in the shape of a decree against the defendant for the payment of the bond-debt. *ESHBEE RAI v. 24. ——— Admissibility in evidence of unregistered bond—Suit for money due on bond—Although a bond which creates an interest in land as security for the debt is inadmissible in evidence if unregistered, it may be adduced as evidence of the debt, and a money-decree may be given on the basis of it for the sum secured by it. *SEETA KULWAR v. 25. ————— Conveyance containing acknowledgment of debt—G owed B Rs. 500, and executed a conveyance of certain land to B, for which such debt was partly the consideration. In such conveyance G acknowledged his liability for the debt, but he died before it was registered and it did not operate. In a suit against G's widow for the debt,—Held that, notwithstanding the conveyance was not registered, it was admissible as evidence of the acknowledgment by G. of his liability for the debt. KHUSHALO v BEHARI LAL . 26. ————— Unregistered bond hypothecating immovable property as collateral security—Admissibility of bond as evidence of the money-obligation.—Effect of non-registration—A bond whereby a person obliges himself to pay money to another, and at the same time hypothecates immovable property as collateral security for such payment, although the money-obligation is of the value of one hundred rupees, and the bond is not registered, can be received in evidence in support of a claim to enforce the money-obligation. *IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF SHEO DIAL v. 27. ————— Unregistered bond for the payment of money hypothecating immovable property—Admissibility in evidence of the bond in support of a claim for money—Mortgage—On the 31d February 1871 the defendants, having borrowed Rs. 1,000 from the plaintiffs, executed in favour of the latter an instrument in which they mortgaged, by way of conditional sale, certain immovable property as security for the loan, and in which it was provided that they should pay certain interest on such sum annually, and should pay such sum on the expiration of five years from the date of such instrument, and in the event of failure in these respects that the plaintiffs might apply for foreclosure. On the 18th January 1879 the plaintiffs sued the defendants for the balance of such sum and interest, waiving their claim on such property, and suing for such balance as a simple debt, as such instrument was not registered. Held, following Sheo Dial v Prag Dat Misr, I. L. R., 3 All., 229, that, inasmuch as such instrument involved a personal obligation of the defendants distinct and severable from the obligation in respect of such property, such instrument, notwithstanding it was not registered, was admissible as evidence in support of the claim to enforce that money obligation; and it was also admissible in proof of the fact that the debt was not exigible from the defendants until on and after the expiration of five years from the date of the loan. LACHMAN SINGH v KESRI . . . 28. ————— Admissibility of unregistered deed—Specific performance, Suit for—A brought a suit in the Munsif's Court against B. and C, alleging that they had sold outright to him by saf-kobala certain landed property for Rs. 300, which was duly paid, and the kobala was executed; that possession was given to him, that B and C. set up before the Deputy Registrar fraudulent objections to the effect that a stipulation to return the property to the vendors on the repayment by them of the consideration-money had not been embodied in the deed, and that part of the consideration-money was still unpaid; that, therefore, the Registrar refused to execute the deed, that in fact there was no such stipulation as set up by B. and C., and that the whole of the purchase-money was paid; and it was stated in the conclusion of the plaint that the suit had been instituted to set aside the fraudulent objections, and to establish the full title of A. as purchaser. Held (MITTER, J., dissenting) that the suit would not lie. The unregistered deed could not be admitted in evidence, nor parol evidence of the contract be given under which A alleged that he acquired his title. A. ought to have proceeded under section 83 of Act XX of 1866. RAHMATULLA v SABIUTULLA KAGCHI

32. ————— Admissibility in evidence.
—Suit for damages for breach of covenants in unregistered deed—Document containing covenants for title—Act III of 1877, s. 17.—Estoppel.—S. L., by a deed of gift of 16th February 1847, granted and assured to S., his daughter, certain immoveable property. By a subsequent unregistered deed of gift of 15th July 1865, S. L. purported, in consideration of natural love and affection, to grant and convey the same property, the value of which exceeded Rs100, to B. R., the husband of S., his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns. The last-mentioned deed contained covenants, on the part of S. L., his heirs, executors, and administrators, with B. R., his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, for title to "the hereditaments and premises hereinbefore expressed to be hereby granted and assured unto and to the use of said the B. R., his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns." S. died in the lifetime of B. R., who, in 1867, mortgaged the premises comprised in the deed of 15th July 1865, and died in 1868. In 1870 the mortgagee sold the premises by auction, under the power of sale contained in the mortgage-deed; the plaintiff became the purchaser, and the mortgagee, on 24th March 1871, executed to him a conveyance of the premises, which were then in the possession of the surviving members of the family of B. R. and S. The plaintiff, having failed in a suit for ejectment against the parties in possession, who relied on the prior gift to S., sued the representatives of S. L. for damages for breach of the covenants for title contained in the unregistered deed of 15th July 1865. Held that though, as in Tukaram v. Khandoji, 6 Bom., O. C., 134, and Sangappa v. Basappa, 7 Bom., A. C., 1, an unregistered document requiring registration may be admitted in evidence for certain purposes, yet it cannot be looked at so far as it affects the immoveable property comprised therein, nor so far as it is evidence of any transaction affecting such property, and that, excluding the part of the document of 15th July 1865 which purported to be the conveyance to B. R., the covenant for title sued on in the present suit was itself ambiguous and uncertain; and there being nothing to connect the premises, to which the covenant related, with the premises conveyed to the plaintiff, no breach of the covenant sued upon had been proved. The Court being precluded by the operation of the Registration Act (III of 1877) from looking at the deed of 15th July 1865 so far as it was a conveyance, the defendants were not estopped from contending that nothing having passed under it to B. R., nothing had passed to the plaintiff under the subsequent deeds, and that, consequently, the plaintiff was not entitled to maintain this suit. RAJU BALU v. KRISHNARAY RAM-CHANDRA. I. L. 35. ————— Inadmissibility for want of registration—Evidence in suit on document.—In a suit upon a razeenama, the execution of which was admitted by the defendants, which purported to create an interest in immoveable property, the Civil Judge dismissed the suit because the document had not been registered in accordance with Act XVI of 1864, section 13. Held (reversing the decree of the Civil Judge) that the existence of the agreement not having been disputed, its production was not necessary, and that the plaintiff was entitled to whatever relief the effect of the plaint and answer taken together would entitle him on the admission of the defendant. *CHEDAMBARAM CHETTY v. where the only disputed point being the fact of payment, for which the production of the kabuliat was unnecessary, the dismissal of the suit for its non-registration was held unjustifiable.

36. ————— Inadmissibility of evidence where registrable document is not registered—The plaintiff sued the defendant to recover rent due upon a muchilka executed by the defendant. The defendant admitted that he occupied the land under the express contract contained in the muchilka. The muchilka was a document the registration of which was compulsory under the Registration Acts, but was not registered. Held that the plaintiff could not establish his case without putting the muchilka in evidence, and it was inadmissible not having been registered. *MORRIS v. 37. ————— Evidence where contract is unregistered and therefore inadmissible.—Where defendant, after executing a bill of sale in respect of certain lands, and receiving the full amount of purchase-money agreed upon, had repudiated the contract, and refused to make over possession, it was held that, though the fact of the deed of sale not being registered precluded it, under section 13, Act XVI of 1864, from being admitted as evidence, yet plaintiff was not excluded from showing by other evidence that he performed his part of the contract. There is nothing in that section which says that no contract purporting to create or transfer any right, title, or interest in land shall be recognised by the Civil Court unless reduced to writing. Held, also, that there was no reason why plaintiff should not be permitted to show that non-registration was owing, not to any fault of his own, but to the fraudulent conduct of his adversaries. HELALOODDEEN v CHOWDHRY ABDOL SUTTAR . . . 9 W. 39. ———— Admissibility in evidence.—Intention of parties—A. sued B. for recovery of possession of land which he alleged had been sold to him by B. under a bill of sale. The bill of sale had been duly registered and was not disputed by B., but B. produced an unregistered ikramamah, executed by A., to prove that the sale was not absolute, but only by way of mortgage. B. alleged that the terms of the bill of sale were qualified and explained by the ikramamah. Held that the ikramamah was inadmissible in evidence, as it had not been registered under section 13 of Act XVI of 1864, but that the Court might look at other and independent evidence—viz., the acts and conduct of the parties—to throw a light upon their intention. PARABDI SAHANI v. MAHOMED HOSSEIN [1 B. L. R., A. C., 37]

41. ———— Receipt for sums paid on bond hypothecating immoveable property.—Admissibility in evidence—Parol evidence—Act I of 1872, s. 91, illus. (e).—A receipt for sums paid in part liquidation of a bond hypothecating immoveable property must be registered under the provisions of section 17 of Act VIII of 1871 to render it admissible as evidence under section 49 of the said Act. virtue of section 13 of the Registration Act, 1864, the first mortgage-deed could not be put in evidence, and that the defendant could not give secondary evidence thereof under section 65 (b) of the Evidence Act. DIVETHI VARADA AYYANGAR v. KRISHNASAMI AYYANGAR . . . I. L. R., 6 Mad., 117

43. ———— Landlord and tenant.—Entry under unregistered lease—Holding over.—Proof of terms of lease.—The plaintiff sued in 1881 to recover certain land and arrears of rent from the defendant, alleging that the defendant's ancestor entered on the land as a tenant in 1865 under a lease for five years, which was not registered. The defendant demed the lease of 1865, admitted that she was the tenant of the land, but demed that she could be ejected, and claimed to deduct from the rent certain emoluments. Held that the plaintiff could not prove the tenancy alleged in the plaint, inasmuch as the lease of 1865 was not registered, and, therefore, could not eject the defendant. NANGALI v. RAMAN [I. L. R., 7 Mad., 226]

44. ———— Unregistered lease.—Proof of tenancy ejectment.—Occupancy rights.—If a contract of lease is, for want of registration, ineffectual, the landlord is not debarred from giving other evidence of a tenancy and requiring the Court to adjudicate on his right to eject. 45. ———— Effect of a registered instrument confirming a prior one of the same purport not registered.—An instrument purporting to assign a right in immovables of more than the value of Rs100 (section 17, sub-section b of Act III of 1877), being unregistered, was ineffectual to affect the title of the purchaser. Some years after, the parties executed a deed of conveyance, making the same assignment, confirming the former instrument, and setting it forth in a schedule. The latter instrument was registered. In a suit in which the ownership of the property was contested, Held that the fact of the prior deed not having affected the property, being unregistered, was no reason why the deed afterwards registered should not be admitted as evidence of title. In this there had been nothing contravening the object of the Registration Act. MITCHELL v. MATHURA DAS . . . I. L. R., 8 All., 6 [L. R., 12 I. A., 150]

46. ———— Inadmissibility in evidence of unregistered deed.—Secondary evidence.—Evidence Act, s. 91.—Plaintiff alleged that A. and B. had sold and conveyed, by an unregistered deed, certain land to the person under whom he claimed. The deed being inadmissible in evidence, B. was called to prove the sale. Held that B.'s evidence should have been rejected, as secondary evidence of the unregistered deed could not be received. RAM CHUNDER HALDAR v. admissible.—Admission—The plaintiff sued to recover certain immoveable property sold to him by the first defendant by a registered deed of sale executed on the 23rd of July 1868. The second, third, and fourth defendants pleaded a sale to them by the same party, the first defendant, on the 23rd March 1867, and that the first defendant, after receiving consideration in full, had improperly refused to have their deed of sale registered. The provisions of section 49 of the Registration Act of 1866 precluded the reception in evidence of the prior unregistered instrument of conveyance, but the lower Courts held that certain admissions made by first defendant in an inquiry held before the registration officer were admissible in evidence to prove the sale to third and fourth defendants. The suit was, therefore, dismissed with costs. Upon special appeal,—Held, by INNES and KINDERSLEY, JJ., that the admissions made by first defendant were evidence against plaintiff, as made by one from whom plaintiff derived his title, but that the provisions of the Registration Act precluded any effect being given to the sale evidenced by such admissions there being a writing, the sale could not be proved by mere oral evidence. By INNES, J.—The term “instrument,” in section 49 of Act XX of 1866, is used on the understanding that the writing is not merely evidence of the transaction but is the transaction itself. SOMU GURUKHAL v. RANGAMMAL. 7 Mac., 13

48. — Suit to compel registration.—Evidence of contract.—Document being unregistered held inadmissible to prove the contract sought to be registered—The defendants agreed to let certain premises to the plaintiff for a term of three years from the 1st of November 1883 at a monthly rent of R200. Subsequently to the making of the agreement,—viz., on the 17th January 1884,—the plaintiff caused a writing to be prepared, which, as he alleged, contained the terms of the lease agreed on, and, having signed it, handed it over to the defendants. The defendants did not sign it, and the document remained with them. The plaintiff alleged that he did not ask the defendants to sign it, as the defendants told him they would get a copy of it prepared, which they would sign and send to him. The defendants alleged that, at the time the document was given to them by the plaintiff, they objected to it on the ground that it was incomplete, inasmuch as it did not contain two of the terms agreed on which prohibited the plaintiff from sub-letting or altering the premises, and required him to maintain them in their then existing condition. The plaintiff denied these allegations of the defendants. In May 1884 the plaintiff, through his attorneys, called upon the defendants to lodge the document for registration. The defendants refused, and the plaintiff filed the present suit, praying—(1) that the defendants might be ordered to lodge the said document for registration and do all such acts as might be necessary to obtain registration thereof; (2) that, if necessary, another similar document might be prepared and registered, (3) that, in the alternative, the defendants should pay R4,000 damages. At the trial the plaintiff raised (inter alia) an issue as to the truth of the defendants' allegation that the agreement of lease

comprised terms forbidding the plaintiff to sub-let or alter, &c. The defendants objected to the proposed issue. In the course of the hearing the plaintiff tendered the document of the 17th January 1884 in evidence. The defendants objected, on the ground that it was unregistered. The Court held that it was admissible as a mere writing, with reference to which, irrespective of its contents, the other evidence in the case was given. At the close of the plaintiff's case the defendants declined to call evidence, and judgment was given on all the issues in favour of the plaintiff. The defendants appealed, and contended that they were not bound to produce the document for registration, and that the Court was wrong in permitting the above issue to be raised and determined in this suit, and that the document being inadmissible as evidence of the contract, no oral evidence of the contract was receivable. The plaintiff contended that there was an implied obligation upon the defendants to register the document arising from the fact that the document contained the true contract between the parties, and that the object of the suit being to compel registration, the document, although not registered, could be given in evidence to prove the contract between the parties. Held (reversing the decree of the Court below) that there was no obligation upon the defendants to produce the document for registration, and that they could not be compelled to do so. Held, also, that the object of giving the document in evidence being to establish the contract of lease for the purpose of drawing an inference from it, the document was for that purpose inadmissible, being unregistered, and that the Court below, although admitting it originally as merely a piece of paper, was wrong in using it as evidence of the contract between the parties. *HURJIVAN VIRJI v. 49. — Instrument of hypothecation.—Endorsement of payment unsigned.—Admissibility of evidence of endorsement to show payment.—The plaintiff hypothecated certain land to the defendant by a duly registered instrument, and subsequently paid off the debt and received back the instrument. At the time of payment the defendant made an endorsement on the bond to the following effect: “25th Kartik of Sukla. Rupees two hundred and sixty-three, principal including interest, was received on account of this bond, and there is, therefore, no lien whatever.” Some time afterwards plaintiff discovered that what he had paid in redemption of the mortgage-claim was in excess of what was due, and he brought a Small Cause suit to recover the amount overpaid, tendering in evidence the endorsement on the bond. The objection was taken that the endorsement not being registered was not receivable in evidence, under section 49 of the Registration Act of 1866. The District Munsif dismissed the suit upon the ground that the endorsement was not signed by the defendant, and was, therefore, not admissible in evidence, but referred to the High Court the question whether the evidence was rightly excluded. Held by SCOTLAND, C J, and INNES, J., that the fact of there being no signature to the endorsement was no objection to its reception as confirmatory

The plant was filed on the 31st March 1873 No certificate of sale was filed with it, but plaintiff subsequently produced one, dated the 5th July 1873, and the Court admitted it in evidence. Defendant submitted that the suit should be dismissed, as no certificate was produced by the plaintiff with the plant. The first Court made a decree in the plaintiff's favour. The Court of Appeal reversed that decree, and dismissed the suit, holding that the certificate ought not to have been received in evidence by the lower Court. The High Court, on second appeal, confirmed the decision of the lower Appellate Court, on the ground that the plaintiff had no right of action, as he had no registered certificate of sale at the date of the institution of the suit. 54. ———— Priority—Deed of sale registered under Act VIII of 1871.—Section 50 of Act III of 1877 is not retrospective in its application; and, therefore, a deed of sale registered under Act VIII of 1871, and not having, under that Act, priority over unregistered documents relating to the same property, acquires no new rights of priority by the passing of Act III of 1877, though coming within the larger class of registered documents which, by section 50 of the later Act, have priority over unregistered documents. *KANITKAR v. 55. ———— Priority between registered and unregistered documents.—Optional and compulsory registration.—Acts XVI of 1864, XX of 1866, and VIII of 1871.—Interpretation of statutes.—The registration of documents under Act XVI of 1864, XX of 1866, or VIII of 1871, does not give them effect as against documents which might have been, but were not, registered under one of those Acts. Section 50 of Act III of 1877 has no retrospective operation upon such documents the preference which it gives to registered over unregistered documents is confined to documents registered under Act III of 1877. According to the registration law as it stood before Act III of 1877 came into force, there was no competition grounded upon registration between documents optionally and documents compulsorily registrable. The Legislature, while possessing the power to divest existing rights, is not (in construing statutes) to be understood as intending to exercise that power retrospectively to any greater extent than the express terms of, or necessary implication from, its language requires. A and B. (two brothers) purchased a house on the 19th July 1871, and mortgaged it to the plaintiff for Rs585, by a san mortgage, dated the 21st July 1871, and duly registered. In 1874 the plaintiff sued upon his mortgage and obtained a decree, directing satisfaction of his claim by the sale of the house. The house was accordingly sold by the Court and purchased by the plaintiff for Rs325. He obtained a certificate of sale, dated the 15th October 1875. The certificate was duly registered. On applying to the Court for possession of the house, the plaintiff was resisted by the defendant, on the ground that he was in possession under two mortgages, dated the 20th July 1871, and executed, the one by A and the other by B. These mortgages were not registered, both of them being for sums less than R100. The plaintiff's application having been rejected by the Court, he brought a suit for possession of the house. Both the lower Courts allowed his claim, holding that his mortgage and certificate of sale, being registered, were entitled to priority over the unregistered mortgages of the defendant under section 50 of Act III of 1877. On appeal to the High Court,—Held that the case was governed by the law of registration as it stood before Act III of 1877 came into force, and that the registration of the plaintiff's mortgage and certificate of sale, both of which were compulsorily registrable, did not confer upon them any priority over the defendant's unregistered mortgages, which were optionally registrable. *ICHHA RAM KALIDAS v. 56. ——— Sale under registered and unregistered deeds.—Innocent purchasers.—Per GARTH, C. J.—The only reasonable construction of section 50 of Act VIII of 1871 is, that where property under the value of R100 is purchased by two innocent purchasers, the one by a registered and the other by an unregistered deed, and there is no fraud shown, or other circumstances which in equity would protect the unregistered purchaser against the registered, the title of the latter shall prevail. The section contains no such qualification as that a purchaser under an unregistered deed, who has obtained possession, would have priority as against a subsequent purchaser under a registered deed, and the Courts are not at liberty to import such a qualification into the section. Per PONTIFEX, J.—Section 50 is intended to apply to the case of two innocent purchasers, giving the preference to the one who has taken the greater precaution to secure his title, but is not intended to apply to the case of a subsequent purchaser who registers, but who at the date of his purchase had actual notice of a prior unregistered purchase. *FUZULUDDIN KHAN v. Held by the Court (PRINSEP, J., dissenting), in a suit by the first vendee to recover possession, that the fact of a vendor having given possession to the first and unregistered purchaser, even if such possession continued to the date of the second conveyance, did not necessarily prevent the operation of that part of section 50 of the Registration Act, 1877, which enacts that "a registered document shall take effect, as regards the property therein comprised, against every unregistered document relating to the same property." The only case in which the title of the prior unregistered purchaser can prevail against the subsequent registered purchaser for value, is when the latter takes with notice of the title of the former. Both instituted suits on their bonds against the obligor, and obtained decrees for sale of the property, the decrees being passed on the same day. The property was attached in execution of both decrees on the 14th August 1882. Held that the registered bond of the plaintiff took effect, as regards the property comprised in it, against the defendant's unregistered bond, under section 50 of the Registration Act (III of 1877), which gave priority to the incumbrance created by the former bond over the incumbrance created by the latter, and this priority was not affected by the subsequent decrees obtained on the bonds, which only gave effect to the respective rights under the bonds. The meaning of section 295 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, is that when immoveable property is sold in execution of decrees ordering its sale for the discharge of incumbrances, the sale-proceeds are to be applied in satisfaction of incumbrances according to their priority. SHAHI RAM v. 80. ————— Registered and unregistered documents.—Priority.—The provision of the Registration Act, that a registered document shall take effect, as regards the property comprised therein, against every unregistered document relating to the same property, only applies where the two documents are antagonistic, not where effect can be given to each without infringement of the other: e.g., if A. mortgages or sells to B., and afterwards C. purchases at a Court's sale the then existing right, title, and interest of A., he (C.) buys in the first case the equity of redemption, and in the second nothing at all. Registration, therefore, cannot help him, for on the very face of his certificate of sale the property comprised therein is not the property previously conveyed to B., but only the residue of A.'s estate after such conveyance. SOBHAGCHAND v. BHAIKHAND. [I. L. R., 6 Bom., 193

his sale-deed. The sale-deed of S. was not registered. In 1879 S. sued N. to have N.'s sale-deed cancelled on the ground of fraud. The lower Courts held that N.'s sale-deed was executed collusively and fraudulently and decreed the claim. Held, on second appeal, that as there were grounds, apart from notice and knowledge of possession, for holding N.'s sale-deed to have been executed collusively, the decision was correct. *NARASIMULU v. 92. ————— Registered and unregistered mortgages.—Possession.—Priority.—Notice.—On the 10th December 1866 M. mortgaged certain immoveable property to the defendant for Rs95. The mortgage was neither registered nor accompanied with possession. On the 12th September 1869 M. executed a mortgage of the same property to K. for Rs200. That mortgage was registered, but not accompanied with possession. In 1876 K. sued M. on his mortgage of 1866. The defendant was not a party to that suit. While the suit was pending, M., on the 23rd February 1876, executed another mortgage of the property to the defendant for Rs200, including the amount then due to him (defendant) on his mortgage of 1866. That mortgage was registered and accompanied with possession. On the 3rd March 1876 K. obtained a decree against M., directing satisfaction of the mortgage-debt out of the mortgaged property. The property was sold under that decree, and purchased by K. himself for Rs50. He obtained a certificate of sale, dated the 8th March 1877, which was not registered. On the 25th July 1877 K. sold the property to the plaintiff for Rs75-4-0. The deed of sale was not registered. In 1878 the plaintiff sued for possession of the property. The defendant relied upon his mortgages of 1866 and 1876. Held that the defendant's unregistered mortgage of 1866, which was optionally registrable, was not overridden by K.'s mortgage of 1869, which was compulsorily registrable, and that, therefore, the plaintiff, whose title was derived from K., was not entitled to recover the property from the defendant without redeeming the mortgage of 1866, on which he (defendant) was entitled to rely. The registration of K.'s mortgage in 1869 could not have operated as notice to the defendant when he was taking his mortgage in 1866, and, therefore, was not such a registration in relation to the defendant's earlier mortgage as to fall within the scope of the rule that registration is equivalent

93. ——— Acts XX of 1866 and VIII of 1871.—Priority.—Registered and unregistered documents.—On the 14th February 1869 S and M. mortgaged a house and site to the plaintiff for Rs50. The mortgage was not registered. On the 15th June 1870 S. (M. being then dead) mortgaged the same property to the father of the defendant for Rs200. That mortgage was registered. On the 24th June 1871 S. further mortgaged the property to the plaintiff for Rs96, including the amount due on the previous mortgage. This second mortgage was not registered. Possession was not given under any of the mortgages. In 1873 the defendant obtained a decree on his mortgage against S, and in execution of it purchased the property for Rs20 at a Court sale. The certificate of sale, dated the 9th July 1874, was registered, and the defendant was put in possession of the property under it. The plaintiff sued S. on his second mortgage, and obtained a decree upon it in 1875. The defendant was no party to that suit. The plaintiff attached the property in execution of his decree, but the attachment was removed on the application of the defendant. In 1879 the plaintiff sued the defendant on his two mortgages, seeking to enforce them and his decree on the second mortgage against the property. The defendant contended that section 50 of the Registration Act, III of 1877, operated retrospectively and conferred priority on his mortgage of 1870, in virtue of its registration, even over the plaintiff's earlier mortgage of 1869. Held that the plaintiff's unregistered mortgages, being each for a sum under Rs100, were, under the Registration Acts of 1866 and 1871, optionally, and not compulsorily, registrable; and that the Registration Act of 1866, under which the defendant's intermediate mortgage of 1870 had been registered, did not bestow any priority on it. Held, also, that section 50 of the Registration Act III of 1877 was not retrospective in its application, and that, as registered purchaser at a Court sale, the defendant took subject to existing liens. Held, further, that the plaintiff's decree did not operate against the defendant, as he was not made a party to the suit in which that decree was obtained, although the plaintiff had constructive notice of the defendant's mortgage through registration. RUPCHAND DAGDUSA v. DAVLATRAM VITHALEAV . I. L. R., 6 Bom., 495

94. ——— Act XX of 1866, s. 50—Priority.—Notice of prior unregistered mortgage.—Possession.—Right to redeem.—Parties—On the 24th September 1869 G. mortgaged certain land to H. Subsequently, on the 14th June 1870, he mortgaged the same land to P. Both the mortgages were for sums less than Rs100. The mortgage to H was unregistered, but the subsequent mortgage to P. was registered. On the 21st June 1873, in a suit to which P. was not a party, H. obtained a decree on his mortgage, and at the execution sale he himself became the purchaser, and was put into possession of the land under his certificate of sale. On the 21st September 1874 P. assigned his mortgage to the plaintiff. The deed of assignment was not registered; neither P nor his assignee, the plaintiff, ever had possession under the mortgage of 1870. The plaintiff brought this suit to obtain possession of the land. Both the lower Courts dismissed the plaintiff's claim. On special appeal to the High Court,—Held that if P., at the time of taking his registered mortgage in 1870, had notice of the prior unregistered mortgage to H., he had that which it is the object of the registration law to give, and, consequently, the non-registration of H's mortgage could not, under Act XX of 1866, avail either P or the plaintiff who claimed under him by an assignment executed subsequently to the decree in H's mortgage-suit. A subsequent registered purchaser or mortgagee cannot avail himself of the registration of his deed against a prior unregistered purchase or mortgage of which he had notice. The High Court reversed the decrees of the Courts below, and remanded the case to the District Judge, to ascertain whether P., at or before the time of the execution of his registered mortgage, had notice of the prior unregistered mortgage to H. SHIVRAM v. GENU . . I. L. R., 6 Bom., 515

95. ——— Acts XX of 1866 and VIII of 1871.—Priority.—Effect of possession under earlier unregistered document.—Notice.—The plaintiff and the defendant claimed certain land, the latter under an unregistered deed of sale dated the 1st April 1877, the former under a registered deed of mortgage of later date, viz., the 19th September 1877. The defendant alleged that immediately after his purchase he was put into possession of the field, and had been in possession ever since. Both the lower Courts held that the plaintiff was entitled to the land. On appeal to the High Court,—Held that, assuming that the defendant had been in possession when the mortgage-deed was executed to the plaintiff, or that the plaintiff had otherwise notice of the defendant's prior purchase, the plaintiff could derive no advantage from the registration of his mortgage,—possession by, or registration of the title of, a purchaser or mortgagee prior in point of time being notice of that title to subsequent purchasers and mortgagees. DUNDAYA v. 96. ——— Priority of unregistered mortgage over subsequent registered sale.—Notice of prior conveyance.—It is only where notice of a prior conveyance, of which registration is not compulsory, is so clearly proved as to make it fraudulent on the part of a subsequent purchaser to take and register a conveyance in prejudice to the known title of another, that the Courts will suffer the registered deed to be affected. Where, therefore, a defendant holding an unregistered mortgage of certain property, dated the 23rd March 1867, which was not compulsorily registrable, had obtained a decree thereon on the 4th January 1881, and the plaintiff holding an absolute deed of sale of the same property duly registered and dated the 22nd June 1880, and, having had notice of the mortgage, claimed absolute possession of the property, irrespective of the mortgage,—Held that the plaintiff's purchase was subject

98. ————— Mortgage—First and second mortgages.—Registered and unregistered documents—Fraudulent transfer.—Transfer of Property Act, IV of 1882, s. 53.—Apart from any question of equitable estoppel, such as described by LORD CAIRNS in the Agia Bank v. Barry, where one person takes a possessory mortgage of property with full knowledge and notice that another is already in possession of such property under an earlier instrument of a similar kind, he cannot be said to be acting in good faith, and the principle of section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) is applicable to such a transaction. In such a condition of circumstances, quoad the prior title, though created by an unregistered instrument, the status of the second mortgagee under his registered document is affected by his own mala fides; and as, on the one hand, the first mortgagee might avoid it on the ground that it was executed in fraud of him, so, on the other, the second mortgagee cannot, on the strength of his own fraud, pray in aid the provisions of the Registration Law to give preference to an instrument which records a transaction that, in its inception, being fraudulent, was a nudum pactum. Such document would not be a "document" in the sense of section 50 of the Registration Act, 1877, which term as therein used means a document legally enforceable. Rahmatulla v. Sariatulla, 1 B. L. R., F. B., 58, referred to. In a suit for possession of immoveable property by virtue of a registered instrument of mortgage executed in 1883, against a defendant in possession of the same property under an unregistered mortgage-deed of 1881 (both deeds being instruments the registration of which was not compulsory), it was found as a fact that at the time of the execution and registration of his mortgage-deed the plaintiff was aware that the defendant was in possession under his mortgage. Held that, under these circumstances, the fact that the plaintiff's deed was registered did not entitle him to dispossess the defendant by virtue of the provisions of section 50 of the Registration Act (III of 1877). *RAM AUTAB v. The Registrar gave a copy of the will under section 46 of the Act, but refused to part with the original. On application by the executors for a citation to the Registrar General to bring the will into Court, and deposit it with the Ecclesiastical Registrar,—Held that the original should be brought into Court, where alone the factum of the will could be tried and determined, and that a copy, authenticated under section 65 of the Act, was not sufficient. The Registrar General should not, after the death of the depositor of a will, part with it otherwise than by order of Court. IN THE GOODS OF NAGINDAS [3 Bom., O. C., 135]

At this time he was possessed of a one-third share in a certain partnership business. As S. was unable to appear at the registration office by reason of sickness, N., his adopted son, on the same day presented such instrument for registration, and applied for the issue of a commission for his examination, which the registering officer issued. The Commissioner went to S.'s house on the next day, but before he arrived S. had died. He examined the attesting witnesses to such instrument, who stated that it had been executed by S., and he was informed by N. that it had been so executed. On the next day N. and the attesting witnesses and the writer of such instrument appeared before the registering officer, and the witnesses and writer were examined by him. Being satisfied that S. had executed such instrument, the registering officer admitted registration, recording that the execution was admitted by N. N.'s signature was not endorsed on such instrument. M., one of S.'s daughters, subsequently sued N. for one third of her father's property, including his share in such partnership business, basing her suit on such instrument. Held that, inasmuch as N. had admitted at the time of registration of such instrument that it had been executed by S., its registration was not invalidated by the mere fact that N.'s signature had not been endorsed thereon. *MAN BHARI v. it for registration having expired, the vendor, in order to avoid the effect of the deed of sale being unregistered, gave the purchaser a bond confirming such deed. The bond, with the deed of sale annexed thereto, was presented for registration. By mistake or for some other reason the particulars to be endorsed on a document admitted to registration, and the certificate showing that a document has been registered, were endorsed on the deed of sale and not on the bond. Held that, assuming that the bond had been registered, it was doubtful whether such an obvious attempt to defeat the provisions of the registration law should be permitted to succeed, that, whether there had been a mistake and the certificate of registration really applied to the bond or not, the provisions of sections 58, 59, and 60 of the Registration Act had not been complied with, and the bond was to all intents and purposes unregistered; and that the defect was not a "defect of procedure" within the meaning of section 87, which could be passed over. MATHURA DAS v. MITCHELL . . . I. L. R., 4 All., 206

In the same case on appeal to the Privy Council it was held, reversing this decision, that the bond was duly registered, and that the fact that the prior deed had not affected the property, being unregistered, was no reason why the deed afterwards registered should not be admitted as evidence of title. In this there had been nothing contravening the objects of the Registration Act. MITCHELL v. MATHURA DAS . . . I. L. R., 8 All., 6

In a suit to enforce such mortgage it was objected that such instrument, not having been properly registered, could not be received in evidence. Held, following the opinion of BROUGHTON, J., in SHEO SHUNKUR SAHOY v. HIRDEY NARAIN SAHU, I. L. R., 6 Calc., 25 : 5 C. L. R., 194, that when a document which purports to have been registered is tendered in evidence, the Court cannot reject it for non-compliance with the registration law: moreover, that the mortgagor could not be allowed to take advantage of an objection which would not have been available but for his own wrongful act. HAB SAHAJ v. Refusal to register.—Petition by vendor to have document registered.—Person "claiming" under document.—A deed of sale executed by the vendor alone, which recited that the vendor had received the purchase-money, and that the purchaser had been put into possession, was presented for registration by the vendor, the purchaser not being present. The Registrar refused to register the document, on the ground that the deed had not been delivered and no consideration had passed, the vendor having stated that he had not received the purchase-money. In refusing to register, the Registrar believed that the deed was of the vendor's own creation. The vendor applied by petition to the High Court to establish his right to have the document registered. The alleged purchaser repudiated the sale. Held (by the majority of the Full Bench) that as it appeared on the face of the document itself that the petitioner was not a person "claiming" under it, the petition could not be entertained under the provisions of section 73 of the Registration Act. Per STUART, C J—That the mere fact that it did not appear on the face of the deed that the petitioner could claim under it did not preclude the Court from entertaining the petition, but that, under the circumstances of the case, the registration of the deed should not be ordered. Per OLDFIELD, J—That it was the duty of the Court to order the registration of the deed, as it was duly executed and the requirements of the law fulfilled, without entering into the question whether or not the petitioner could claim under it. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF BISH NATH . . . 1. ———— Suit to establish right to registration—Act XX of 1866, s. 84—In an application for registration made on the 27th March 1866, before the new Registration Law (XX of 1866) came into operation, it was held that it was lawful for any person interested to institute a regular suit to establish his right to registration under section 15, Act XVI of 1864, notwithstanding the provisions of section 84, Act XX of 1866. BHEEMUL MAHTOCN v. OLIMUSSA alias BEGUM JAN

[8 W. R., 423]

2. ———— Suit to enforce registration.—Refusal to register—Section 15, Act XVI of 1864, was held to apply only to cases in which the Registrar had improperly refused to register an instrument. GOOROO DOSS DUTT v. DWARKA NATH MANNA

[6 W. R., Mis., 61]

3. ———— Suit to enforce registration.—Refusal to register.—Held, under section 15, Act XVI of 1864, that a suit to enforce registration lay where one of the parties to the deed refused to register it. KRISHEN KISHORE CHUND v. MAHOMED ZUKAHOOLLAH

[Agra, F. B., 148. Ed. 1874, 111]

4. ———— Suit to enforce registration.—Refusal to register—According to section 15 of Act XVI of 1864, a regular suit, and not a miscellaneous application, must be brought to compel a Registrar to register. MUTUKDHAREE LALL v. FUZUL HOSSEIN . . . 6 W. R., Mis., 131

INAYUT ALI v. FURZUND ALI . . . 2 Agra, 21

5 ———— Refusal to register—Suit for enforcing registration—Act XVI of 1864, s. 17—Where the Registrar for any cause refused to register a deed of sale presented for registration under the provisions of section 17 of Act XVI of 1864, the law did not provide that the applicant could bring a suit against the vendor to enforce registration, unless there was an express condition or contract to register. SOORNUM BUTTY v. BOODHESUREE . . . 10 W. R., 313

AHSUNA BEGUM v. KHEERUN SINGH

6. ———— Refusal to register—Suit for possession and for entry of money in register.—A party, after purchasing a property, applied to have his deed registered; but the vendor not attending to admit the execution, the Deputy Registrar refused, under Act XVI of 1864, to register, and referred the applicant to the Civil Court. Application was accordingly made, under section 15, to the Principal Sudder Ameen, who, after hearing the vendor's plea that the whole consideration had not been paid, ordered the registration to be made, and this was accordingly done on 2nd February 1866. Held that though the Deputy Registrar's order was a proper one, the application to the Civil Court was warranted by the terms of section 15, and the Civil Court had jurisdiction in the matter. RAM LALL SINGH v. THAKOOR DYAL. . . 9 W. R., 576

7. ———— Suit to compel registration.—Deed presented after time—Under Act XVI of 1864, a decree to enforce registration could not be passed in respect of a deed presented for registration four months after the execution of the deed. OJUL MUNDUL v. HERASUTOOLLAH MUNDUL [7 W. R., 150]

8. ———— Procedure in suit to enforce registration.—Where it was necessary to institute a suit under section 15 of Act XVI of 1864 (Registration Act) in order to enforce registration, the suit was limited to that object. The Court would not, after making the order to compel registration, suspend the further hearing of the case until registration had been effected, and then proceed to consider and decide upon the rights of the parties. KHADAR SAIB v. KHADAR BIBI. . . 3 Mad., 149

9. ———— (1871, s. 76).—Suit after application for registration is rejected.—Quære.—Whether, after an order has been made under section 76 of the Act rejecting an application for registration, it is open to the parties benefited by a deed to propound it in, and to obtain its registration by means of, a regular suit. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF ABDOOLAH. . . I. [26 W. R., 50; I. L. R., 3 I. A., 221]

10. ———— Denial of execution, What is.—Suit to compel registration.—Refusal to admit execution of a document is a denial of execution within the meaning of the Registration Act of 1877, and so also is a wilful refusal or neglect to attend and admit execution; and where such refusal or neglect occurs, a suit will lie under section 77 for the purpose of having the document registered. RADHAKISSEN ROWRA DAKNA v. CHOONEERLOLL DUTT [I. L. R., 5 Calc., 445; 5 C. L. R., 172]

11. ———— and s. 34.—Refusal to register.—Time for attendance before Registrar to admit execution.—Although section 34 of the Registration Act, 1877, lays down that no document shall be registered unless the persons executing the same, their representatives, assigns, or authorised agents, appear before the Sub-Registrar within the periods allowed for presentation, yet this section is directly subject to section 77, and that section nowhere provides any time within which the parties, their representatives, assigns, or authorised agents, shall appear to admit execution. All that is required in order to maintain a suit under section 77 is that there must be a refusal to register by the Sub-Registrar, an appeal within time to the Registrar, a refusal by the Registrar, and a suit filed in the Civil

Court within one month from the order of the Registrar refusing registration. SHAMA CHARAN DAS v. JOYENOO LAH. . . I. L. R., 11 Calc., 750

12. ———— Suit for registration of document—An application having been made under section 73 of the Registration Act, the Registrar passed the following order: "All the parties have not appeared; the appeal is struck off. It, however, seems to me that the order of the Sub-Registrar was quite correct." Held that the mere fact of the applicant not having adduced any evidence before the Registrar did not make his order one not refusing registration within the meaning of section 76, nor was the applicant precluded on that ground alone from pursuing his remedy under section 77 by a civil suit. SAJIBULLAH SIKRAR v. HAZI KHOSH MOHAMED SIKRAR. . . I. L. R., 13 Calc., 264

13. ———— and ss. 72 & 73.—Suit to compel registration.—Under the Registration Act of 1877, a suit to compel registration is maintainable only when the provisions of section 77 of the Act have been complied with. A person omitting to make an application to the Registrar as provided by section 73, within the time provided by section 72, cannot be said to have complied with the conditions precedent to a suit under section 77. Independently of section 77 of the Act, no suit will lie. Bhagwan Singh v. Khuda Baksh, I. L. R., 3 All., 397, followed. Ram Ghulam v. Chotey Lal, I. L. R., 2 All., 46, dissented from. EDUN v. MAHOMED SIDDIK [I. L. R., 9 Calc., 150; 11 C. L. R., 440]

14. ———— and s. 74.—Refusal to execute deed.—Suit to compel registration—If the non-registration of a deed has resulted from the refusal of one of the parties to it to execute it, that matter must be inquired into by the Registrar, as directed by section 74 of the Registration Act, before any right to sue under section 77 can arise; and unless the requirements of the Act have been complied with, no cause of action arises under section 77. Edun v. Mahomed Siddik, I. L. R., 9 Calc., 150, followed. LAKHIMONI CHOWDHRAIN v. AKBOOMONI CHOWDHRAIN. I. L. R., 9 Calc., 851; 12 C. L. R., 527

15. ———— and s. 73.—A Sub-Registrar having refused to register certain documents on the ground that their execution was denied, the plaintiff appealed to the Registrar, who rejected the appeal because it was not preferred within thirty days as required by section 73 of the Registration Act, 1877. The plaintiff thereupon brought a suit to have the documents registered. Held that, by virtue of the provisions of section 77 of the Registration Act, the Court was not competent to order registration. KUNHIMMU v. VIYYATHAMMA [I. L. R., 7 Mad., 535]

16. ———— Refusal to register on ground of denial of execution.—Suit for registration.—A Sub-Registrar refused to register a bond, as the obligor denied the execution of it. The obligee,

instead of applying to the Registrar under section 73 of the Registration Act in order to establish his right to have such bond registered, sued the obligor, claiming a decree directing the registration of such bond. Held that such suit was not maintainable. Ram Ghulam v. Chotey Lal, I. L. R., 2 All., 46, observed upon. BHAGWAN SINGH v. KHUDA BAKSH [I. L. R., 3 All., 397]

17. ————— Contract of sale—Sunt to enforce registration of conveyance—Held, where a person had agreed to sell to another certain immoveable property, and had conveyed the same to him by a deed of sale which, under the Registration Act of 1877, required registration, and the vendor refused to register such deed, that it was not incumbent on the vendee to take steps under that Act to compel the vendor to register before he sought relief in the Civil Court, but that he was at liberty without doing so to sue the vendor in the Civil Court for the registration of such deed. RAM GHULAM v. CHOTEY LAL

18. ————— and ss. 24, 73, 74, 75, 76.—Order for registration—Finality of order.—Refusal to register.—Application to establish right to registration—Sunt for registration.—Where an application for registration of a sale-deed had been presented after the expiry of the period prescribed by law for registration, and had been dealt with under section 24 of the Registration Act, and the Registrar had passed an order under that section directing that the document should be registered on payment of the prescribed fine, and such fine had been paid,—Held that the requirements of the law had been complied with, and that it was not competent for the successor in office of the Registrar, dealing with the document under section 74 of the Registration Act, to go behind the order of his predecessor, nor was it for the Court, in a suit instituted under section 77, to question the propriety of that order, which was given in pursuance of a discretionary power allowed to a Registrar to accept documents for registration after the time prescribed. DURGA SINGH v. MATHURA DAS I. L. R., 6 All., 460

The remedy, however, given by these Registration Acts by appeal, where a registry officer refused to register, did not affect the remedy by suit to compel the vendor to do all that is legally requisite to complete the sale, including the registration of the deed. RAMPHUL LALL v. CHUNDEE PERSHAD

19. ————— Sunt to compel defendant to register or give up deed to be registered—Right of sunt.—On the expiration of a zur-i-peshgi ticca granted to plaintiff by defendant, the latter executed a kobala of the property forming the subject of this suit for a consideration. The kobala was drawn up, signed by defendant, and delivered to plaintiff's servants to be registered with his consent, but the defendant subsequently got it away from them and never went to the registry office, and the deed could not be registered. The defendant denied these facts, and pleaded that he had given a mokrurari lease to a third party six days after the date of the alleged execution of the kobala. The lower Appellate Court found the plaintiff's case established, and ordered defendant to restore the deed of sale for the purposes of registration and use, and declared the sale good and valid, plaintiff having already obtained possession. Held that plaintiff had a right to the remedy sought, and that his suit was not barred by the Registration Act. SHUMSHARE ALI v. LUTAFUT KUREEM LALLA THAKOOR SAHOY v. MAHOMED LOOTFOOLLAH 18 W. R., 504

20. ————— Sunt to enforce registration on refusal of party who ought to register.—Implied contract to register.—Whether an action will lie against the maker of an instrument requiring registration to render it valid, for a refusal to get such instrument registered, depends upon the question whether there is a contract, express or implied, on the part of the maker to register it. Such a contract is not to be implied in every case. GIRDHAR DALPAT v. HARIBHAI NARAYAN

[7 Bom., A. C., 3]

21. ————— Refusal to register.—Sunt to enforce contract.—A. sold certain property to B., and received part of the purchase-money in advance, the rest to be paid after registration of the deed of sale. When the deed was executed, and taken to the registry office, A. objected to the registration, on the ground that the full price had not been paid, and the Deputy Registrar returned the deed to him, and he sold the property to other parties. Held, it was a suit to enforce a contract from which the vendor had receded, and, notwithstanding the subsequent sale to a third party, and registration of such subsequent deed, there was nothing in the registration law to prevent plaintiff from enforcing this contract. BHEEMUL MATHOON v. OLIMUSSA alias BEGUM JAN [8 W. R., 423]

22. ———— Suit for possession, for damages for refusal to register, and for enforcing registration—Effect of execution of deed required by law to be registered.—The owner of a share in a talook granted a se-putni thereof to the plaintiff, but before registration, granted a se-putni to the Bengal Coal Company. In a suit against the owner and the Company for possession of the se-putni talook, for damages caused by the refusal to register, and also for compelling registration of the se-putni pottah, — Held that the suit was not maintainable in a Civil Court, as the plaintiff's title rested upon an unregistered deed; that there was no cause of action as against the Company to enforce registration of the pottah, and that a distinct stipulation is not necessary to bind a person to cause registration of a deed required by law to be registered, but he virtually agrees to do so when he executes a contract, which by the law in force requires registration. *PRABHURAM HAZRA v. 23. ———— Suit on bond—Failure to register according to agreement.—Cause of action—A. executed a bond in favour of B., but failed to cause the registration of the same. Before the amount secured by the bond became due, B. sued A. for recovery thereof, on the ground that, as A. had agreed to get the bond registered, but failed to do so, B. was entitled to recover the amount advanced by him. Held that B. had no cause of action. *GURU PRASAD ROY v. 3. ———— Mistake by plaintiff as to relief to which he is entitled.—Special relief.—Where a plaintiff mistakes the relief to which he is entitled in his special prayer, the Court may afford him the relief to which he has a right under the prayer for general relief, provided it is such relief as is agreeable to the case made by the plaint. NISTARINI DASI v. MAKHANLALL DUTT [9 B. L. R., 11: 17 W. R., 482

4. ———— General prayer for relief.—Failure to establish right to special relief asked for—Although the plaintiff was found not to be entitled to the special relief prayed for, the Court considered he had established a case in which, upon the plaint and the general prayer for relief, he was entitled to a decree. GOBIND CHUNDER MOOKERJEE v. DOORGAPERSAD BABOO [14 B. L. R., 337: 22 W. R., 248

5. ———— Prayer for general relief.—Ignorance of exact relief entitled to—It may very well be that a plaintiff, being doubtful as to the precise form of relief to which the facts proved may entitle him, may ask the Court to give him such relief as, under the circumstances, the Court may think fit to give. GUNGARAM DUTT v. JUNMAJOY MULLICK 1 C. L. R., 144

6. ———— Specific relief.—Prayer for general relief—Under the prayer for general relief, specific relief may be granted of a different description from the specific relief prayed for by the bill, provided the bill contains charges putting in issue material facts which will sustain such relief. *COCKERELL v. to the plaintiff in respect of his interest in a portion of the property, the bequest of which was, in the opinion of the Court below, void for remoteness. HIRALAL MULLICK v. MATILAL MULLICK [5 B. L. R., 682]

8. ———— Relief inconsistent with pleadings—A party may have subordinate rights awarded when they arise out of the principal right which he pleads. But when a defendant pleads distinctly a jaghirdar's proprietary right against a malik's proprietary right, a Court cannot award a subordinate right of occupancy in no way arising out of a jaghirdar's proprietary right, but out of a ryoti right never pleaded by the defendant, and in fact incompatible with his case. PANDEY BISHONATH ROY v. BHEYRUB SINGH [7 W. R., 145]

9. ———— Alternative relief.—Prayer for relief beyond powers of Court.—Where the plaintiffs claimed possession, but in the event of the defendants being found entitled to hold as tenants, asked the Court to ascertain at what rate the defendants were entitled to hold, and direct a lease to be executed.—Held that whether the plaintiffs could obtain the alternative relief prayed for or not, their suit ought not to be dismissed, as they might succeed in proving their title to the substantial relief sought. LAND MORTGAGE BANK OF INDIA v. NERLOO BHUTTO 21 W. R., 125

BULDEO SINGH 21 W. R., 12

11. ———— Relief where plaintiff asks for two inconsistent rights—Quare.—Whether, where a plaintiff asks for the establishment of two rights, and it appears that he is entitled to one of them, it would not be sufficient to give him a decree for that one, and to insert in the decree a declaration which would bar his right to that which he has failed to establish. DEHNPUT SINGH v. 14. ———— Suit for possession after dispossession—Failure to prove whole claim—A plaintiff proving a wrong done to him, though not exactly to the extent of which he complains, is entitled to relief, though not to the extent or on the ground on which he asks it. Baigmath Chatterjee v. 15. ———— Prayer for relief which Court cannot give.—Land Registration Act, Beng. Act VII of 1876, s. 89.—The Civil Court has no power to set aside an order passed under the Land Registration Act, and when a prayer for such relief is contained in a plaint which also asks for a declaration of right and title to and confirmation of possession in property, such prayer may be treated as mere surplusage. LUCHMON SAHI CHOWDHREY v. KANCHUN OJHAIN I. L. R., 10 Cal., 525

16. ———— Failure to prove case.—Admission by defendants as to portion of claim.—Partial relief.—Held (STUART, C. J., and TURNER, J., dissenting) that the plaintiffs, having failed to prove the averments on which their suit was based, were not entitled to any relief in respect of that portion of the property in suit of which the defendants admitted their possession as mortgagees. RATAN KUAB v. RELIGION, OFFENCES RELATING TO—

——— Disturbing religious assembly—Penal Code, s. 296.—Mahomedan law.—Hanifa and Shafia schools—Right to say "Amin" loudly during worship—Beng. Civil Courts Act, VI of 1871, s. 24.—Evidence Act, I of 1872, s. 57 (1).—Mahomedan Ecclesiastical law.—Judicial notice.—A masjid was used by the members of a sect of Mahomedans called the Hanifis, according to whose tenets the word "amin" should be spoken in a low tone of voice. While the Hanifis were at prayers, R., a Mahomedan of another sect, entered the

masjid, and in the course of the prayers, according to the tenets of his sect, called out "Amin" in a loud tone of voice. For this act he was convicted of voluntarily disturbing an assembly engaged in religious worship, an offence punishable under section 296 of the Penal Code. The Full Bench (MAHMOOD, J., dissenting) ordered the case to be re-tried, and that, in re-trying it, the Magistrate should have regard to the following questions, namely. (1) Was there an assembly lawfully engaged in the performance of religious worship? (2) Was such assembly in fact disturbed by the accused? (3) Was such disturbance caused by acts and conduct on the part of the accused by which he intended to cause such disturbance, or which acts and conduct, at the time of such acts and conduct, he knew or believed to be likely to cause such disturbance? Held by MAHMOOD, J., that the discussion occasioned by the act of the accused having, presumably, taken place during the interval when the prayers were not going on, the assembly was not at that time "engaged in the performance of religious worship," and was not "disturbed" within the meaning of section 296 of the Penal Code; that in reference to the terms of section 39 of the Code, the accused did not disturb the assembly "voluntarily," that he was justified by the Mahomedan ecclesiastical law in entering the mosque, and joining the congregation in saying the word "Amin" loudly if he thought fit, and his conduct fell within the purview of section 79 of the Penal Code, and was therefore not an offence under section 296. Beatty v. Gullbanks, L. R., 9 Q. B. D., 308, referred to. Also per MAHMOOD, J., that, having regard to the guarantee given by the Legislature in section 24 of Act VI of 1871 (Bengal Civil Courts Act), that the Mahomedan law shall be administered in all questions regarding "any religious usage or institution," the Court was bound by section 57 of Act I of 1872 (Evidence Act) to take judicial notice of the Mahomedan ecclesiastical law, and the rules of that law need not be proved by specific evidence. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. RELIGIOUS COMMUNITY.

Suit relating to trust among a community.—Jurisdiction of High Court in charitable trusts.—Khoja Mahomedans.—Regulation of rights of dissident parties in a religious community.—In a suit by certain members of the Khoja community in Bombay for an account of all property belonging to, or held in trust for, the community, come to the hands of the treasurer and accountant of the community; for a declaration that the treasurer and accountant had ceased to be such officers of the community; for an order directing the treasurer and accountant to deliver all the property of the community in their hands; for a declaration that the property of the community was held and ought to be applied to and for the original charitable, religious, and public uses or trusts to or for which they were dedicated and to none other, for the sole benefit of the Khoja sect and none other; and that no person not being or having ceased to be a member of the same, and in particular no person professing Shia opinions in matters of religion, was entitled to any share or interest therein; for a scheme to carry such declaration into effect, and for an injunction restraining one of the defendants from interfering in the management of the property and affairs of the Khoja community or in the election and appointment of officers, from excommunicating any members of the community, from celebrating marriages, and from demanding or receiving any offering;—Held that the Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit. When the Court, in exercise of its charitable jurisdiction, is called upon to adjudicate between conflicting claims of dissident parties in a community distinguished by some religious profession, the rights of the litigants will be regulated by reference to the religious tenets held by the community in its origin, and a minority holding those tenets will prevail against a majority which has receded from them. History given of the sects of Sunis, Shias, and Shia Imami Ismailis; of Aga Khan; and of the Khojas and their relations with the hereditary Imam of the Ismailis. Relations of Aga Khan with the Jamat of the Khojas of Bombay discussed. The tenets of Mahomedanism to which the first Khojas were converted were those of the Shia Imami Ismaili sect. In order to enjoy the full privileges of membership in the Khoja community, a person must be one of that sect whose ancestors were originally Hindus, which was converted to, and has throughout abided in the faith of, the Shia Imami Ismailis, and which has always been and still is bound by ties of spiritual allegiance to the hereditary Imams of the Ismailis. There is no public property impressed with a trust, either express or implied, for the benefit of the whole Khoja community. Aga Khan, as the spiritual head of the Khojas, is entitled to exercise a potential voice in determining who, on religious grounds, shall or shall not remain members of the Khoja community. *ADVOCATE GENERAL, BOMBAY, ex-relations DAYA MUHAMMAD v. RELINQUISHMENT BY HEIR.

Relinquishment in consideration of grant of maintenance.—Where M. executed on behalf of N. a ladawinamah, or deed of disclaimer, disclaiming all right to an estate to which he was one of the heirs-at-law, upon consideration of receiving a monthly allowance for maintenance, and accepted a perwannah securing that allowance to himself and his heirs,—Held that the ladawinamah and the perwannah amounted to a valid contract by which the parties were respectively bound; and that ladawinamah, being founded on good consideration, was binding on the heirs, who could not set it aside except by returning the money which had been paid in advance on account of the maintenance allowance. *OOMBAO BEGUM v. 4. ——— Proof of relinquishment.—

Onus of proof.—Where a tenant is found to have taken steps required by law in furtherance of his intended relinquishment, it is for the landlord to prove his continued possession notwithstanding. But where it is found that the tenant has not gone through the necessary steps, it will be for him to prove that the landlord took possession of the land and enjoyed the profits by holding it khas, or by letting it to others. *ERSKINE v. Right of transferee.—Mortgagee's right.—Sale for arrears of revenue.—D, widow of a Hindu mirasidar, by a duly-registered deed, dated the 24th of November 1869, mortgaged the mirasi land of her deceased husband to R. M. for Rs150. Subsequently, on the 5th July 1872, D. executed a razinama of the land in favour of R. G. Held that the mortgage bound D's estate in the mirasi land as a Hindu widow; that whether the property was regarded as mirasi or as that of an ordinary occupant, it was transferable under section 36 of Bombay Act I of 1865; that when D. executed the razinama, there was nothing left in her to relinquish or otherwise deal with more than the equity of redemption; that, consequently, R. G. took nothing by the razinama executed in his favour by D., except this equity of redemption. TARACHAND v. LAKSHMAN, I. L. R., 1 Bom., 91, distinguished. The distinction

W. R., 1864, Act X, 9

12. ———— Act X of 1859, s. 19.—Section 19, Act X of 1859, did not imperatively require an application for service of notice of relinquishment of land by a ryot to be made to the Collector. The non-service of notice by the Collector cannot affect the rights of the tenant, if he can prove that, previous to his application to the Collector, he had given actual notice direct to the landlord himself or to his authorised agent. The application to the Collector is not bad because it was not made in the month of Chyot preceding. ERSEKINE v. RAM COOMAR ROY. . . . 8 W. R., 220

RELINQUISHMENT OR OMISSION TO SUE FOR PORTION OF CLAIM.

1. ———— Splitting cause of action.—Accidental or involuntary omission.—Mistake—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7.—The words "if a plaintiff relinquish or omit to sue for any portion of his claim, a suit for the portion so relinquished or omitted shall not afterwards be entertained," in section 7, Act VIII of 1859, plainly include accidental or involuntary omission, as well as acts of deliberate relinquishment. The correct test when a second suit is brought for something omitted to be sued for in a previous suit, is whether the claim in the new suit is in fact founded on a cause of action distinct from that which was the foundation of the former suit. Where a suit was brought for a large amount of property, consisting partly of Government paper which, it was alleged, had been fraudulently appropriated

2. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7.—Statement of intention not to relinquish.—The words of section 7 of the Civil Procedure Code were imperative against the splitting of a claim into parts. The consequences of an infringement of that direction were not, that the suit which does not include the whole claim shall for this reason be barred. The words "in bar of suit" referred to any subsequent suit brought for the portion of the claim omitted in the previous suit, and not to such previous suit itself. A plaintiff who omits to sue for a portion of his claim, stating that he does not relinquish it, but means to sue again for it, can gain nothing by such a statement. Neither can such a statement furnish a reason for holding the first suit to be barred. SOONDER BEBEE v. KHILLOO MULL alias RAM LALL. . . . 2 N. W., 90

3. ———— Suit for arrears of rent for successive years.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s 7.—Section 7, Act VIII of 1859, did not require a plaintiff having several distinct causes of action against one defendant to comprise them all in one suit subject to the hazard of forfeiting all those not included in the first suit. If a plaintiff, from negligence or other cause, omits to prefer a portion of his claim which seeks to charge the land, or, having preferred it, is content to accept an imperfect adjudication, or one which awards him only a portion of the relief claimed, he cannot afterwards bring forward in a fresh suit matter which might well have been then disposed of. *MULUK FUQUEER BUKSH v. 15. — Suit for receipt as security for advance.—Suit for balance of account —A. sued B. for recovery of a receipt which had been deposited by the former with the latter as security for a certain advance of money. Held that he was not thereby debarred, under section 7, Act VIII of 1859, from bringing a suit for the balance due on the whole account between them. MEDHI ULLEE KHAN v. 16. — Simultaneous suits for balance of account after settlement.—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 43 —Upon a settlement of accounts between plaintiff and defendants, R3,985-6-9 was found due by the defendants, who agreed to pay the same. They gave to plaintiff an order on their agents to pay R2,500 from the profits of certain land, and promised to pay the balance within a month. Plaintiff filed two suits, one for R2,500 and the other for the balance of the debt. Defendants pleaded that both suits should be dismissed, as brought in contravention of the requirements of section 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The lower Courts held that there were two distinct causes of action, and decreed both claims. Held, on second appeal, that plaintiff had only one cause of action, and that the decree in one of the suits must be reversed. APPASAMI v. 17. — Suit for sum due in account book.—Addition of claim for same sum due on hath-chitta.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7.—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 34 —Where a plaintiff originally sued for a certain sum upon his khatta books, and an objection was taken by the defendant that he ought to have sued upon a certain hath-chitta, whereupon the plaintiff amended his plaint by suing for the amount admittedly due upon the hath-chitta, in addition to the amount he claimed upon his khatta books, —Held that, when the plaintiff amended his plaint by suing upon the hath chitta, his causes of action, which when the suit was originally framed were distinct, became united; that there was no "relinquishment" in the original suit within the terms of Act VIII of 1859, section 7 (with which section 43, Act X of 1877, corresponds), and that the plaint was rightly amended. RAM TAREUN KOONDU v. 18. — Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 43.—Suit to cancel release, obtained by duress, of all claims against defendants, and to recover amount of one such claim no bar to subsequent suits upon other causes of action so released —On the 1st July 1878 there was a settlement of accounts between the plaintiff and defendants and a debt was acknowledged due by the latter to the former, and on the same day the plaintiff and defendants entered into a trading partnership which was carried on till August. On the 30th September the defendants extorted a release from the plaintiff whereby the plaintiff's claims against them arising out of the two transactions mentioned and all other transactions between them were released. On the 23rd November the plaintiff brought a suit against the defendants, and, in the plaint, after stating the fact of the settlement of 1st July 1878, the balance found due therein to the plaintiff, the extortion of the release, and the misappropriation of the sums due to the plaintiff by the defendants as the cause of action, prayed for cancellation of the release and for recovery of the amount due to the plaintiff by the defendants under the settlement of 1st July 1878. Held, in a suit to wind up the partnership of July and August 1878, that the plaintiff was not bound by section 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure to have included in his former suit his claim arising out of that partnership, and that the former suit being in substance a suit upon the account stated on 1st July 1878, and not for damages for extorting the release, was no bar to the present suit. SUBBAYYA v. 19. — Accretion to land.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 9 —The plaintiff sued for a certain specified quantity of land as being between specified boundaries. On measurement, however, it was found there was more land within those boundaries than the plaintiff claimed. He obtained only a decree for what he claimed, though he had claimed all the land up to the boundary (the river) on one side. The excess was deducted on that side. Held, reversing the decision of the High Court, that a subsequent suit in which he claimed land which had accreted to the excess portion which was not decreed to him in the former suit was not barred by section 7, Act VIII of 1859. PAHALWAN SINGH v. Such claims therefore, although arising under one and the same contract, may be sued upon separately, section 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure notwithstanding. Per WILSON, J. —Where there is one contract for the purchase of goods and the purchaser takes some of the goods, but breaks his contract in part by not paying for the goods he takes, and in part by not taking and paying for the remainder, and both breaches occur before any suit is brought, the claim of the person suing is one arising out of one cause of action, and the whole claim must be included in one suit. ANDERSON, WRIGHT, & Co., v. 22. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 43—Suit for damages for wrongful dismissal—A suit having been brought in a Small Cause Court for damages laid at Rs400 for wrongful dismissal, a decree was given for Rs75 per mensem, the amount of wages which had been agreed on, up to the filing of the plaint, the Judge intimating that for damages accruing after the filing of the plaint further suits month by month might be brought. Two suits were accordingly brought for the two months next succeeding the date of the first suit, and decrees were obtained. The High Court upon an application made by the defendant set aside these decrees on the ground that after the first suit no further suits could lie. SIMPSON v. CLEGHORN [6 C. L. R., 91]

23. ————— Suit for damages.—Subsequent suit against another wrong-doer for the same tort.—Where a plaintiff had sued for and obtained damages against one of several persons who had joined together in defaming his character,—Held (PEARSON, J., dissenting) that a similar suit by the plaintiff against another of such wrong-doers would not lie; and that the cause of action in both suits being identical, and satisfaction having been obtained in one, the other was barred by virtue of section 7, Act VIII of 1859. MADUD ALI KHAN v. SALEEM AHMED KHAN alias KUMMUN KHAN [4 N. W., 142]

24. ————— Suit for damages.—On the 27th Joist 1286 F. S (2nd June 1879) the plaintiff brought a suit to recover damages for the breach of a contract on the part of the defendant for not having made over possession to him of certain leasehold properties, the damages claimed being for the profits accrued due for the year 1283 F. S. (1875-76). In this suit he obtained a decree. On the 21st Joist 1287 F. S (14th June 1880) the plaintiff brought another suit against the defendant to recover damages for the profits accrued for the years 1284, 1285, and 1286 F. S (1876-77 to 1878-79). Held that the plaintiff should have included the damages for the years 1284 and 1285 (1876-77 and 1877-78) in his former suit, and that he was debarred by section 43 of Act X of 1877 from including in his second suit any portion of his claim for damages which had accrued due at the time of the institution of his first suit, and for which he had omitted to sue; but that he was entitled to recover damages for the year 1286 (1878-79). *Taruck Chunder Mookerjee v. 27. ————— Suit for mesne profits after setting aside sale for arrears of rent.—Subsequent suit for rents wrongly collected.—At a sale for arrears of rent, A. became the purchaser of a certain putni talook. B., whose putni right had been sold, sued for and obtained a decree for reversal of the sale on the ground of irregularity. In the meantime, A. had committed default, and the putni was again sold for arrears of rent. The zemindar drew out from the Collectorate the amount due to him. C., who had bought B's right, title, and interest in his decree, now sued A. for recovery of the surplus proceeds of sale in the hands of the Collector, and obtained a decree. He afterwards sued A. for mesne profits for the time during which he was in possession of the putni talook. This was a suit by C. against A. for recovery of the amount drawn out by the zemindar, on the ground that, in consequence of A. having collected the rents from the talook, which were to go towards payment of the rent due to the zemindar, and having fraudulently withheld such payment, he had sustained damage to the extent of the amount taken by the zemindar. Held that the suit was barred by section 7, Act VIII of 1859. *TARINI PRASAD GHOSE v. The defendants then instituted a civil suit for determination of title, in which the plaintiffs were successful. The plaintiffs on the 22nd Cheyt 1277 (3rd April 1871) instituted a suit for the recovery of the value of fish taken by the defendants on the 27th Bysack 1276 (8th May 1869), the day of dispossession; but the suit was compromised. by the defendants from 1st Bysack 1277 to 7th Bhadro 1278 (12th April 1870 to 22nd August 1871) Held that the present claim for the period preceding 22nd Cheyt 1277 (the date of the former suit) was barred by Act VIII of 1859, section 7; that the previous suit as well as the present were really suits for damages; and that the previous suit and compromise ought to have included all claims of the plaintiffs arising out of the dispossession. *SARM SIRDAR v. The plaintiffs subsequently sued the defendants for the value of the fruit upon such trees, alleging that on the 19th June 1879 the defendants had wrongfully taken such fruit. Held that as the cause of action—i.e., the taking of such fruit—was in both suits identical, and the plaintiffs not having claimed the value of such fruit as mesne profits in the first suit, the second suit was barred by the provisions of section 43 of Act X of 1877. *DEBI DIAL SINGH v. The defendants appealed, whereupon S. filed a solehnamah. The decree was upheld, however, by the lower Appellate Court. In special appeal the Sudder Court refused to give the renouncing plaintiff any decree for mesne profits of a share. The plaintiff, who had then come of age, was not represented in the litigation in the Court. Shortly afterwards he sued S. and M. to set aside the sale to M. and obtained a decree. On D.'s death M. obtained possession of the land which had been the subject of the suit by S. and D. The plaintiff now sued to recover a half share of the land sued for by S. and D., and of the mesne profits recovered or recoverable by M. under the decrees of the Sudder Court and the lower Courts, and to set aside the solehnamah. Held that as to M. the suit was not barred by section 7, Act VIII of 1859. *RAMLOCHUN LALL v. The mortgagor refused to deliver possession of the property, and the mortgagee sued him to enforce specific performance of the contract to deliver possession, and obtained a decree. At the time this suit was brought, the mortgagee had been kept out of possession of the property for two years, during which time the mortgagor had taken the mesne profits. The mortgagee subsequently sued the mortgagor to recover the mesne profits of the mortgaged property for those two years. Held that, as the mortgagee might in the former suit, in addition to seeking the specific performance of the mortgage-contract, have asked for such mesne profits by way of compensation for the breach of it; and as the claim for possession and mesne profits were in respect of the same cause of action,—viz., the breach of the contract to give possession,—the second suit was barred by the provisions of section 43 of Act X of 1877. *LALJI MAL v. A cause of action consists of the circumstances and facts which are alleged by the plaintiff to exist, and which, if proved, will entitle him to the relief or to some part of the relief prayed for, and is to be sought for within the four corners of the plaint. *Jibunti Nath Khan v. In February 1879, R, P, B, and S joined in suing N for a declaration of their proprietary right in two thirds of the estates and to have the deed of gift set aside. The Court treated the suit as one for a mere declaration of right, and dismissed it with reference to section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, on the ground that the plaintiffs had omitted to sue for possession, although they were able to sue for it. In November 1879, R, P, B, and S again joined in suing N, claiming possession of two thirds of the estate, and to have the deed of gift set aside. Per STUART, C. 43. — Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7.—Declaratory decree.—Suit for possession of immoveable property—Relinquishment of part of claim.—Act VIII of 1859, s. 15.—"Relief"—In 1868 B made, it was alleged, a gift of a zemindari estate to K. In 1869 B died, and K's name was recorded in the revenue registers in the place of B's name in respect of the estate. In 1870 K died, and her daughter S applied to have her name recorded in the revenue registers in respect of the estate. M, the illegitimate son of B, objected, claiming to have his name recorded. His objection having been disallowed and S's name having been recorded, M, in 1876, sued S for a declaration of his proprietary right to the estate, and on the 29th June 1878 obtained such declaration. In January 1880 M sold a moiety of the estate, and in December 1880 S sold the entire estate. In February 1881 M's transferees sued S and her transferee for possession of the moiety of the estate transferred to them by M. Held by the Full Bench (STUART, C. 45. — Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7.—*Separate causes of action.—Section 7 of Act VIII of 1859 required that every suit should include the whole of the claim arising out of the cause of action, meaning the whole of the claim arising out of the cause of action upon which the suit was brought, not that every suit should include every cause of action or every claim which the plaintiff had against the defendant. Accordingly, where a plaintiff had sued to obtain his share of an estate in land, in consequence of having been wrongfully dispossessed by the defendant, whom he afterwards in the present suit sued for his share of personal property, being entitled to both under a will, it was held that the subsequent suit was not barred by reason of the non-claim in the prior one. The claim in respect of the personalty had not arisen out of the cause of action which existed in consequence of the wrongful dispossession; the case was not like one of the conversion of several things, and the causes of action were distinct. *Buzlur Ruheem v. Subsequently he sued the same defendant for possession of the other, alleging that, at the time when he instituted the former suit, he had already been dispossessed of the house now in question, and by the same person. Held that, although the plaintiff's title to both houses rested on the title acquired by him under one and the same sale-deed, yet the cause of action—viz., his ouster from the two houses on different occasions—gave rise to two separate causes of action, which he was not bound to join in the former suit, there being nothing in the Civil Procedure Code to compel him to do so. *Jardine, Skinner, & Co., v. 57. ——— Different cause of action — Suit for share of undivided property. — Subsequent suit for partition of whole of the property — In applying the provisions of section 7 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1859, the first thing to be considered is whether the cause of action in the second suit is the same as the cause of action in the first. If the cause of action be the same, the second suit is barred in respect of any portion of the claim omitted from the first suit, but not otherwise. Accordingly where the plaintiff, as a member of an undivided Hindu family, sued for a share of a particular portion of the family property leaving the rest undivided, and his suit was rejected, as it had not been brought for his whole share, it was held that the suit was no bar to a second suit to have the whole property divided, as the causes of action in the two suits were entirely distinct. *KARAJI BIN RANOJI v. 59. ——— Omission of mortgaged field in suit for partition — Subsequent suit. — In 1861 the plaintiff brought a general partition suit (No. 1363) to recover his share of the family property in the possession of the first defendant and did not include in that claim a field then in the possession of a mortgagee. The field was subsequently redeemed by the first defendant, who again mortgaged it to the second defendant. The plaintiff then filed the present suit to recover his share in the field. The first Court allowed the plaintiff's claim, but the District Judge on appeal threw it out, on the ground that it was barred both by section 7 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1859, and by the "law of limitation." The Judge based the latter finding on certain allegations made by the plaintiff in suit No. 1363, and in another suit brought by him against the first defendant and the then mortgagee of the field, from which allegations the Judge inferred a separation between the plaintiff and the first defendant. Held in special appeal that the claim was not barred by section 7 of the Civil Procedure Code, because the mortgaged field was not available for an actual partition at the time of the former suit, No. 1363 of 1861. The true question for consideration in cases of this kind is whether the former suit was one in which the plaintiff might have recovered precisely that which he seeks to recover in the second, and where the former suit is one for an actual division of property, the plaintiff is not bound in it to ask for a declaration defining his right in property not then capable of division. *Balkrishna Vithal v. district of Bhagalpore. On the 19th September 1872 A. mortgaged a 1 anna 4 pies share of E to H. On the 20th September 1872 A., B, C, and D. mortgaged their shares in E and F, together with property in the district of Tirhoot, to the plaintiff. On the 24th March 1873 A mortgaged his share in E. and F to J. On the 13th November 1874 A and B. mortgaged their shares in E to K. On the 25th March 1874 J. obtained a decree on his mortgage, and the interests of A and B. were purchased on the 5th January 1875 by L. On the 17th April 1874 M, to whom the first mortgage had been assigned, obtained a decree and attached the property mortgaged. L objected that he had already purchased the interest of A, and on the objection being allowed, M instituted a suit against L. for a declaration of priority, and obtained a decree on the 9th August 1876. In execution of this decree the property first mortgaged was sold on the 4th March 1878, and after satisfying the mortgage a surplus of Rs. 7,664 remained. After the institution of the first suit and before L's purchase, the plaintiff instituted a suit upon his mortgage in the Tirhoot Court without having obtained leave to include that portion of the mortgaged property situate in the Bhagalpore district. On the 17th July 1874 a decree was made in this suit. On the 17th January 1877 K. obtained a decree on his mortgage, and the shares of A. and B. in E. were sold, and purchased on the 3rd September 1877 by N. The plaintiff had his decree transferred for execution to the Bhagalpore Court, and he attached the surplus sale-proceeds and a 1 anna 9 gundas share in E. This attachment was withdrawn on the objection of L, who drew out the surplus sale-proceeds. The share purchased by N was also released from attachment. The plaintiff now sued L, N, and the mortgagors for a declaration that his decree of the 17th July 1874 affected the E property, to recover the surplus sale-proceeds from L, and in case the decree should not be valid to the extent mentioned, for a decree declaring his prior lien on the property in E. Held that the cause of action had been split. *Grish Chunder Mookerjee v. of mortgaged property to mortgagor.—Hypothecation of mortgaged property as security for rent.—Suit for rent in Revenue Court.—Suit for enforcement of lien in Civil Court.—The usufructuary mortgagee of certain land granted a lease of such land to the mortgagor, the latter hypothecating the land as security for the payment of the rent. Arrears of rent accruing, the mortgagee sued the mortgagor for the same in the Revenue Court and obtained a decree. Subsequently the mortgagee sued the transferee of such land in the Civil Court to recover the amount of such decree by the sale of the land, claiming under the hypothecation. Held, following *Banda Hasan v. While this suit was still pending, B., in March 1872, drew the compensation-money out of the Collectorate. The heirs, after obtaining a decree against B. for possession of the mouzahs, on the 13th September 1875 instituted a fresh suit against him to recover the compensation-money wrongfully drawn out by him from the Collectorate. Held that the suit was not barred by section 7 of Act VIII of 1859. Held, further, that the claim of the heirs was a proper subject for a regular suit, and could not have been heard and determined in the course of the proceedings in execution of the decree which they had obtained against B. for possession of the mouzahs. *NUND LALL BOSE v. quired by a railway company under the Land Acquisition Act in 1874, and that the compensation, R460 (claimed by M.'s mother, who sold the land to the company), was lodged in the treasury of Kumbakonam in the name of M.'s mother. K. having applied to the Subordinate Court for an order for payment out of this sum, the Court, by order dated 28th February 1880, directed that the question of title to the money should be decided by suit. K. then sued M., as the sole heir of his deceased mother, in the District Munsif's Court of Tiruvadi (where M. resided), for a declaration of right to and to recover the said sum of R460. The suit was filed on the 4th September 1880. On the 16th April 1880 M. assigned his interest in the money sued for to V., who was made defendant in the suit on his own application, and pleaded that the land having been acquired by the railway company in 1874, before the suit upon the bond was filed, this suit was barred by section 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held that K. not having known, at the date of his suit on the bond, of the acquisition of the land by the railway company, the suit was not so barred. VENKATA VIRABAGAYA VAYYANGAR v. 81. — Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 43.—Bond with alternative conditions for repayment of loan.—Decree for interest.—Second suit for further interest.—A bond provided for the repayment of a loan with interest by a stated time. In default of payment by that time it was provided that the loan might be added to an existing mortgage for a term of years, and repaid at the end of the term, together with the mortgage-debt. After the expiration of the time fixed for the repayment of the loan, the obligee sued and obtained a decree for the interest which had accrued due at the date of the suit. He now sued for the further interest which had since become due. Held that the second suit was not barred by section 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure, for that the first suit being for interest merely, and not for principal and interest, which were then both due, the plaintiff must be taken to have elected, under the bond, to add the principal sum to the previously existing mortgage-debt, in which case he forfeited nothing by suing merely for arrears of interest as they became due. SHRI SHAILAPA v. There is nothing in section 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure which would justify this Court in going behind the bonds to consider the circumstances out of which they sprang, albeit those circumstances might themselves at the time have constituted a cause of action. UMED DHOLCHAND v. He recovered the full amount of the first instalment under the first decree, and a portion of the second instalment in execution of his second decree. He now sued for the unpaid portion of the second instalment, and for the whole of the third instalment, including the interest. In July 1879 B. sued D. upon such instrument for the balance of the first instalment. The Court trying this suit refused to receive such instrument in evidence, on the ground that it was a promissory note, and as such was improperly stamped. Thereupon B. applied for and obtained permission to withdraw from the suit, with liberty to bring a fresh one for the original debt. In October 1879 B. again sued D., claiming the balance of the first and second instalments, basing his claim upon the note made by him in his account book. He obtained a decree in that suit for the amount claimed by him. In 1880 B.

On the latter applying for mutation of names, B objected that he was in proprietary possession under a deed of gift executed by M, and the objection was allowed. In virtue of a clause in the deed of mortgage that, in case any demand was made in respect of the property within the mortgage term, the mortgagee was entitled to sue for the mortgage-money notwithstanding the term had not expired. J sued to recover the money by the sale of the hypothecated property. B, in addition to an objection to the validity of the mortgage based on the deed of gift, pleaded that it was invalid under Hindu law, as against him, the next reversioner to the property, there being no legal necessity for the alienation. The lower Appellate Court held that the mortgage was valid as against the deed of gift, but invalid as against the next reversioner. Finding that B was not the next reversioner, it remanded the case to the Court of first instance, with instructions to make certain persons who had applied to that Court to be made parties to the suit, on the ground that they were the nearest heirs to M's deceased husband, but whose application that Court had rejected, defendants in the suit, as also any other persons who might claim to be near heirs, and to

The proper course for the lower Appellate Court would have been to join the parties whom it found to be necessary, and then to raise the proper issues as between the plaintiff and those parties, and, if necessary, to refer the issues to the Court of first instance for trial under section 566. GANESH BHIKAJI JUVEKAR v. 12. ———— Examination of witness.

Application to have witness examined—Omission to make order.—Where in the first Court the defendant applied for a witness to be examined, but no order was made on the subject, and on the case coming up on appeal, the Appellate Court, on its notice being called to the omission, remanded the case to the lower Court to entertain the application,—Held that there was nothing illegal in such a remand, though the remand sections of Act VIII of 1859 did not expressly apply to it. BONOMALEE CHURN MYTEE v. HAFIZ-UDDEEN. 13 B. L. R., 247, note: 12 W. R., 317

13. ———— Refusal to summon witnesses.

—If a defendant's case is not closed, he has a right to have his witnesses summoned and to get an opportunity of producing them if he can do so in time. Where such right was refused to a defendant by the first Court, and his objection on that score was not noticed by the lower Appellate Court, the High Court, on special appeal, remanded the case for a fresh hearing. BRORO NATH MOOKHOPADHYA v. 14. ———— Insufficient examination of witness—Bad legal advice.—Where the oral evidence taken fell short of the requirements of the Evidence Act, section 63, only because the witnesses were not properly questioned, the High Court, on special appeal, held it to be unjust to let the plaintiff suffer on account of the inefficiency of his legal adviser, and so remanded the case for re-trial. LOCHUN SINGH v. HET NARAIN SINGH [24 W. R., 232]

15. ———— Local inquiry, Order for.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss 351, 354.—Further evidence.—A Judge on appeal in a suit to open roads leading to a kotee, expressing an opinion that the facts had not been sufficiently ascertained, directed a further local inquiry to be made, and remanded the case to the lower Court to be again decided there after such local inquiry. Held that he had no authority upon such a ground to remand the case for re-decision, there being no suggestion under Act VIII of 1859, section 351, that the lower Court had erroneously decided a preliminary point excluding evidence, and the reference not being of an issue framed by the Appellate Court under section 354. NUNDO-COOMAR BANNERJEE v. 16. ———— Necessity of further evidence.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss 351, 352.—Cases heard together—Quære.—Whether, under sections 351 and 352, Act VIII of 1859, when several cases are tried together, remand can be allowed for a new trial, on the ground that the plaintiff's evidence had not been completely heard, and that it was an error in the Court below to determine all the cases at once. SNADDEN v. 17. ———— Defect in pleadings.—Jurisdiction.—When it did not appear on the face of the pleadings, or on the evidence, under what kind of bastu the land in dispute fell, and no plea to the jurisdiction of the Court under Act X of 1859 had been taken in the Courts below, the High Court would not remand the case to inquire under which class of bastu land the subject-matter of the suit fell, nor entertain the point of jurisdiction on appeal. NAIMUDDA JOWARDAR v. settled in a suit, the High Court will remand the case for re-trial. JOGESHWAR RAE v. DOOLUN RAE [2 N. W., 183]

20. ——— Omission to raise material issue.—Suit for arrears of rent.—Parties—A case was remanded for re-trial on its merits because it was found, on special appeal, that material error had been committed in consequence of the omission on the part of the lower Appellate Court to frame issues between the parties,—g., the suit being for arrears of rent, the issue inter alia whether the plaintiffs, who were shareholders with others, were entitled to claim the fraction of the rent for which they sued. SHEO SAHOY SINGH v. BECHUN SINGH. 22 W. R., 31

21. ——— Improper demand by Appellate Court—Raising fresh issues—A sued to eject a ryot on the ground of his holding over after the term of his pottah had expired. The ryot denied that he had ever held under a pottah from A, and alleged that the jote belonged to B. Plaintiff's allegations were found to be false, and his suit was dismissed. The lower Appellate Court directed B to be made a defendant, and remanded the suit to have the question of ownership tried between A. and B., at the same time agreeing with the Court of first instance that the allegations in the plaint were false. Held that the lower Appellate Court should have dismissed the case, and was wrong in so remanding it. Per CUNNINGHAM, J.—The right of framing new issues arises where the issues framed are insufficient to dispose of the matters raised in the plaint. Ram Dhun Khan v. Haradhun Puramanik, 9 B. L. R., 107, note 12 W. R., 404, cited and distinguished. BHOOBUN DASS MUNDUL v. BILASHMONEY DASSEE [1 C. L. R., 415]

22. ——— Raising fresh issues.—Appellate Court—Reference of issues for trial—An Appellate Court cannot remand a case for trial with instructions to frame new issues. It may refer any issues for trial by the lower Court, whose finding and evidence are to be returned to the Appellate Court for a final decision. CHUNDERNATH SURMA v. ROMANATH SURMA. 1 W. R., 69

23. ——— Appellate Court—Defective or insufficient issues—Where no preliminary point has been wrongly decided by the Court of first instance, and no evidence has been excluded, and the Appellate Court considers the issues, nevertheless, to have been defective or insufficient, it is the duty of the latter not to remand the case, but to re-settle the issues and to determine the case itself. FUTTEHOLLAH v. OOMDANISSA BIBEE [14 W. R., 69]

lower Appellate Court, as a Court of Equity, should, of his own motion, have sent the case back to the Munsif, directing him to try it on its merits, and pointing out that he had taken a wrong view of the law. GURU PRASHAD ROY v. RAS MOHUN MUKHOPADHYA. 1 C. L. R., 431

25. ——— Illegal remand.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 354.—In a suit for a declaration of plaintiff's title to and possession of a share of certain property, she alleged that her title was derived by purchase from one B, who held under a deed of gift from T, the wife of the original holder. Defendants' case was that then title was derived from the three grandsons of one R. K. by his daughter C. The first Court dismissed the suit, considering that the defendants' title was proved, and that T. was not competent to dispose of the property by gift to plaintiff's vendor. The lower Appellate Court, finding that it was not satisfactorily proved that the defendants' alleged three vendors were really the daughter's sons of R. K., remanded the case for a finding on that issue. Held, with reference to section 354, Act VIII of 1859, that the order of remand was illegal. HUROSOONDURIE DEBIA v. UNNO POORNA DEBIA. 11 W. R., 550

26. ——— Dismissal of case on point not arising.—Suit under s. 230, Civil Procedure Code, 1859.—Where a lower Appellate Court found that a suit falling substantially under section 230, Act VIII of 1859, which had been received and numbered as such, had been subsequently dismissed by the Court of first instance upon a point which did not properly arise under that section,—Held that it should have remanded the case to the first Court for trial and decision under that section. SABIR KHAN v. RAM LUCKHEE CHOWDHRAIN. 10 W. R., 438

27. ——— Remand for further evidence.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 352, 354—Held by JACKSON, J. (whose opinion prevailed), that where a lower Appellate Court is of opinion that further evidence should be taken, it may take such evidence itself, or require the first Court to do so, but it is not competent to remand a case for a second decision upon any of the issues, such a course being forbidden by section 352, Act VIII of 1859. Held by MARKBY, J. (dissenting), that a lower Appellate Court has power, under section 354, to send back a case for trial upon an issue not satisfactorily tried by the Court of first instance. UMBIKA CHURN MUNDUL v. RAMDHUN MOHURRIE. 11 W. R., 35

28. ——— Remand for re-trial on particular issue.—Improper remand.—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, ss. 562, 566, 567.—Decision by lower Court on the merits—A decree in a suit having been passed on the merits by the Court of first instance, the Court of Appeal, being of opinion that an issue not tried by the former Court ought to have been tried, reversed the decree, and, under section 562 of the Civil Procedure Code, remanded the case for trial upon that issue. Held that the order reversing the decree and remanding the case for trial of the issue was improper, and that the proper course for the Appellate Court to have taken was that laid down by sections 566 and 567 of the Code. MOKUND LAL v. HURBULLBH NARAIN SINGH 12 C. L. R., 136

29. ———— Obscurity in judgment.—

Affirming judgment of lower Court—Where an Appellate Court has considered a case and come to the same conclusion as the Court of first instance, occasional obscurity in the judgment of the former does not constitute a proper ground for a remand. BROJO NATH SEN v. SOORJA KANT SEN . 25 W. R., 276

30. ———— Omission to try ground of appeal taken.—Review of judgment—Where a ground of appeal stated in the written memorandum is not alluded to when the appeal comes on for hearing, the Court is not at fault if no decision is passed upon it. If, having had his attention called to it, a Judge fails to decide such point, the proper course for the parties aggrieved is to ask him to review his judgment. In neither case is the omission ground for remand on appeal. YUSOOF ALI CHOWDHRY v. FYZONISSA KHATOON CHOWDHRAIN . 15 W. R., 296

31. ———— Omission to decide point raised.—Issue, though trifling, left undecided.—Where the lower Courts have come to no decision on a point raised, the plaintiff in special appeal has a right to a remand for the point to be tried, even though very trifling. MULLICK AMANUT ALI v. UK-LOO PASEE . 25 W. R., 140

32. ———— Improper reception of evidence by lower Court.—Ground for decision, Consideration of.—On second appeal, the High Court has, generally speaking, no right to look at the evidence to decide whether the remaining evidence, in a case other than that which has been improperly admitted, is sufficient to warrant the finding of the Court below. The only cases which can be, with propriety, disposed of under such circumstances without a remand, are those where, independently of the evidence improperly admitted, the lower Court has apparently arrived at its conclusions upon other grounds. WOMES CHUNDER CHATTERJEE v. reversed, on the ground that the claim had not been properly valued, and plaintiff was permitted to bring a fresh action. At the trial of the second action the Munsif recorded his previous decree and some additional evidence, which the District Judge on appeal considered to be insufficient. Held that, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, the Judge, if not satisfied with the evidence taken at the second trial, should have allowed the plaintiff to give again the evidence adduced at the former trial. The lower Court's decree was therefore reversed, and the suit remanded in order that this might be done. JOTI BIN NIMBAJI v. SOMAJI BIN BAPAJI GURAV

65. ———— Decision as to admission of evidence.—Additional evidence—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s 354—The defendant pleaded payment and produced a letter of acknowledgment said to have been written by the plaintiff. The plaintiff denied its genuineness, and the Principal Sudder Ameen rejected the testimony of two pyadas who deposed to the payment. On appeal the Judge remanded the case, requiring the lower Court to give the appellant the opportunity of proving the letter, and after recording a fresh finding to return the case to his Court. Held that the lower Court was bound to pronounce a distinct opinion as to the value of the evidence, and not to have rejected it altogether. Held, also, that the Judge was wrong in remanding the case under section 354, Act VIII of 1859, as he could have decided the case himself, taking such additional evidence as might appear necessary. RUNPAL SINGH v. JOY MUNGUL SINGH 11 W. R., 106

66. ———— Finding on evidence.—Improper remand—Duty of Appellate Court—Where the ground of regular appeal to the lower Appellate Court was that the Court of first instance ought to have found that an ijara existed, it was the duty of the Appellate Court to determine whether that fact had been proved, and not to remand the case for re-trial. MAHOMED AHSAN v. MAHOMED YASIN [9 W. R., 106]

67. ———— Issue of minority raised on appeal.—Facts entitling mortgagee to decree—Where, in a suit to make absolute a conditional sale, and to obtain a share in a certain village mortgaged to plaintiff (the usual year of grace having been given and money been paid into Court in satisfaction considerably after the term allowed by law), there is no issue respecting the minority of some of the mortgagors, the case will not be sent back to the Appellate Court for inquiry whether certain of the mortgagors were minors, or whether the others mortgaged for such purposes as would bind the minors, notwithstanding one of the lower Courts has found the fact of the minority of one of the mortgagors. SUBDUL v. 3. SECOND REMAND.

70. ——— Power of Appellate Court.—Decree reversed on appeal.—Error or defect affecting merits of case or jurisdiction.—An Appellate Court can remand a case a second time on account of error, defect, or irregularity of procedure in passing a decree or order, provided the error, defect, or irregularity be such as to affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. When a suit has been regularly heard and determined, and on appeal the decree is reversed, the Appellate Court has the discretionary power to remand the case only if the decree should have been upon a preliminary point, and have the effect of excluding the consideration of evidence essential to the rights of the parties MUNIAPPAN NAIDU v. CHUTTUR PAUL SINGH

86. ————— Reopening of case.—Under an order of remand in a boundary suit in which the Privy Council had made an order in a former appeal,—Held that the High Court had no power to go behind the order of the Privy Council, and that so much of the High Court's decision as reopened on fresh evidence what had previously been decided must be set aside, but that the evidence that had thus been brought to bear on the case was entitled to consideration so far as it bore on those portions of the suit in respect of which the former decision of the Privy Council was not conclusive. COURT OF WARDS v. An Appellate Court, because it remands issues, does not therefore, in the absence of subsequent objection by either or both of the parties to the findings when returned, divest itself of its power to exercise its judicial mind as to the propriety of such findings; but, apart from any objection by the parties, it should examine and test them to see whether or not they ought to be accepted. *Akbari Begam v. The Court of first instance tried such issue and made a decree in accordance with its finding thereon. On appeal against the decree of the Court of first instance, the defendant again raised such preliminary point. The then Judge of the Appellate Court, Mr K., dismissed the suit upon such preliminary point. Held that as although Mr B. had irregularly remanded the suit under section 562 of Act X of 1877, his decision disposed of such preliminary point, and only left open for trial the issue which he had directed to be tried, Mr K. was not competent to re-try and decide such preliminary point. *SURAJ DIN v. REMAND—continued.6. CASES OF APPEAL AFTER REMAND—continued.*Appeal from order of remand—continued.

The case was remanded on special appeal by the High Court to the District Judge (who had meanwhile returned to his appointment), who reopened the whole case, and passed a decree directly opposed to that of his predecessor, in which he confirmed the Munsif's decree. Held that the decree of the Judge should be reversed, and the suit again remanded, in order that he might pass a decree for the plaintiff, in accordance with the view of the case expressed by the Acting Judge, with which the High Court saw no ground, upon the special appeal before it, to interfere. BABAJI BIN RAMJI v. KASIMBHAI VALAD AZAMBHAI [3 Bom., A. C., 60]

116. ——— Procedure when case comes on appeal after remand.—Erroneous order of remand—A Subordinate Judge on appeal, having framed an issue, remanded the case under section 351, Civil Procedure Code, 1859, to the first Court for trial thereof, but instead of directing that the finding should be returned to his own Court, he directed the Munsif to give the plaintiff a decree in accordance with the finding at which he might arrive. The Munsif having decided the case accordingly, it went up on appeal to the Additional Judge. Held that the proper course for the Additional Judge was simply to confine himself to considering whether the decision of the Court below on the issue directed was correct or not. He had no power to go behind the order of the Subordinate Judge on the previous occasion. BODUN BUREOAH v. ABDOL GUNNY [19 W. R., 281]

117. ——— Object of remand.—Criminal Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1869), s. 422—Act X of 1872, s. 282—Power of Appellate Court—A remand of a case under section 422, Act VIII of 1869, could only be for the purpose of taking further evidence, and certifying the result thereof to the Appellate Court, and not for the purpose of re-trying the case upon such fresh evidence. After remand under this section, the Appellate Court could only try the case as an ordinary appeal, and had no power to enhance the punishment. ANONYMOUS [3 B. L. R., A. Cr., 62]

31. ———— Suit for rent from a toll on river or canal—Act X of 1859, s. 23, cl. 4.—A suit to recover rent on lease of toll arising from a canal or river navigation was not cognisable under clause 4, section 23, Act X of 1859. GARLAND v. RAI MOHUN HAZRAH . . . 1 W. R., 15

32. ———— Suit for tolls for use of a ferry—Act X of 1859, s. 23, cl. 4—A suit for tolls for the use of a ferry belonging to the plaintiff was not maintainable under Act X of 1859, section 23, clause 4. FURLONG v. TREERLOCHUN SINGH [Marsh., 504: 2 Hay, 598]

33. ———— Beng. Act VIII of 1869—Suit for dustoorut.—Objection on appeal—A suit for dustoorut is not a suit for rent, and is therefore not cognisable under Bengal Act VIII of 1869. The ground that, even supposing the suit was not a suit for rent, it was not liable to be dismissed in order that a fresh suit might be instituted under Act VIII of 1859, not having been taken in the Court below, nor in the grounds of special appeal, was overruled at the hearing of the special appeal. RAM CHURN BANERJEE v. 36. ————— Usufructuary mortgage.—Huqajiri.—Reserved rent.—The plaintiff had borrowed money on security of a zur-i-peshgi lease of property which, after some years, he sued to redeem by payment of an alleged balance, claiming credit for huqajiri of the hypothecated land owing to him for the intervening period. Held that huqajiri is not rent (see Hyder Buksh v. Hossein Buksh, 4 W. R., 103), and if it were, it was not claimed as such in this case moreover, there being a rent reserved would not alter the essential character of the arrangement, which was one of usufructuary mortgage. Held that the words of section 25, Act X of 1859, imply that a suit by a zemindar to recover a rent reserved on land which has been let out on a zur-i-peshgi lease should be brought in a Civil Court. Held, also, that the plaintiff was justified in bringing his suit in a Court where he could obtain substantial relief although the remedy sought by him involved in its details different jurisdictions. SHEO GOLAM SINGH v. ROY DINKUE DYAL 12 W. R., 215

37. ————— Deposit as security for rent.—Huq-i-zemindari.—The fact that a sum of money was deposited by the lessee with the lessor as security for the payment of the rent did not remove a suit for rent from the jurisdiction of the Revenue Courts. A claim for huq-i-zemindari was not cognisable under Act X of 1859. JOWAHUR LALL v. SULTAN ALI 12 W. R., 214

38. ————— Suit for zemindari dāk charges—A suit by a zemindar against a putnidar for zemindari dāk charges, under Bengal Act VIII of 1862, for which the latter is liable under his kabulhat, was not cognisable under Act X of 1859. RUTTUNMONEE DOSSEE v. JOTENDROMOHUN TAGORE 6 W. R., Act X, 31

39. ————— Act XIV of 1863, s. 1, cl. 4—Suit for sum in nature of rent-charge—Nuzzerana.—A certain sum was paid to Government as nuzzerana during the existence of the maafee grant through a lumbaradar. After the maafee was resumed and a Government jumma assessed upon it, the nuzzerana continued to be paid until the interest of the holder of the resumed maafee was confiscated for rebellion and sold at auction. After the confiscation the Government allowed the amount to the lumbaradar by deducting it from the amount of Government revenue paid by him. Held that, under the circumstances, the payment of nuzzerana being a present in acknowledgment of proprietary title in the nature of a rent-charge, the suit was cognisable under clause 4, section 1, Act XIV of 1863. ZAHOOB HOSSEIN v. ASSUD ALI 2 Agra, Pt. II, 178

41. ————— Suit for arrears of cess.—A suit for arrears of a cess, which is not in the nature of rent, could not be brought under Act X of 1859. KASIM ALI v. SHADEE 3 N. W., 21

42. ————— Suit to recover lumbardari right.—Act XIV of 1863—Held that a suit to recover lumbardari right, or 10 per cent. allowance provided for in the administration paper, being other than a commission on actual collection, was not cognisable under Act XIV of 1863. KHOODEE v. AKBAR 2 Agra, 322

43. ————— Suit for price of trees.—Act X of 1859, s. 23, cl. 4.—A suit for half the price of trees cut down by the tenant, and claimed by the landlord by right of usage, was not cognisable under clause 4, section 23, Act X of 1859. TOHUL ROY v. MAHADRO DUTT [W. R., 1864, 327]

44. ————— Suit for rent of zerait lands.—A suit for rent from a party holding lands as zerait in his own possession was one for rent as between landlord and tenant, and cognisable under Act X of 1859. CROWDY v. SREE MISSEER [12 W. R., 4]

45. ————— Suit for rent of land covered by buildings.—L. having claimed certain lands as lessee from the zemindar, and A. having pleaded that he held them under a mirasi tenure from the same zemindar, the Court held that the two leases could co-exist, and that L. was entitled to recover actual possession and to pay to A., as an intermediate holder, the rent due to the zemindar. In execution of the decree, L. was put in possession of all the land except a portion covered by factory buildings in the possession of A., which buildings the Court held did not go with the land. Unable to get possession, L. brought a suit to recover rent for the land covered by the building. Held that no suit for rent could lie, A.'s representative being a trespasser, and his mere statement of willingness to pay rent being insufficient to constitute the relation of landlord and tenant. LYONS v. BETTS 13 W. R., 94

48. ————— Suit against co-sharer for share of rent—Act X of 1859, s. 23—Section 23, Act X of 1859, was not applicable to a suit in which the plaintiff claimed as entitled to a moiety of the rent of certain land in the possession of his co-sharer. MITTUNLAL SAHOO v. NADUR [1 W. R., 53]

KALEE PERSHAD v. LUTAFUT HOSSEIN [12 W. R., 418]

49. ————— Suit for share of rent against tenant and co-lessors—A suit for a share of rent against a tenant and co-lessors was not cognisable as a suit for rent within the meaning of clause 4, section 23, Act X of 1859. LALLA ISREE PERSHAD v. STUART . . . W. R., 1864, Act X, 28

50. ————— Suit for rent and damages against co-sharers for sub-lease—Suit against co-sharers and dur-ijaradar for rent and damages in respect of a mehal of which a sub-lease was granted by the defendant co-sharers. As plaintiff did not get possession of his share until after the expiry of the sub-lease, and then only by the aid of the Civil Court, and as his title during the subsistence of the lease was merely nominal, and as he exercised no rights of a landlord during this period, and could not have sustained against the dur-ijaradar an action for rent under Act X of 1859,—Held that his suit was properly brought in the Civil Court. RADHAJEEBUN MUSTAFEE v. DENONATH BANERJEE [W. R., 1864, Act X, 49]

51. ————— Suit by putnidar for his share of rent—A suit by one of a body of putnidars against his co-putnidars for his share of the rents collected by them was cognisable under the Rent Act. SOOBHUL SINGH v. MEETO SINGH [W. R., 1864, Act X, 12]

and a suit by a manager of an estate to recover such advance was cognisable by the Revenue Courts. RAM DYAL BANERJEE v. COURT OF WARDS [12 W. R., 269]

54. ————— Suit for profits of misappropriated property—A suit for profits of property alleged to have been appropriated by a wrong-doer was cognisable by the Civil Court, and not by the Collector. ROOP MUNGUL SINGH v. ANUND ROY . . . 3 W. R., 111

55. ————— Suit on bonds secured by assignment of rent—A lent money to B. on bonds, payment of which was secured by assignment of the rents of B.'s estate. A., instead of liquidating the bonds from the collections of the estate assigned, brought a suit on the bonds, and obtained a decree. B. then sued for a refund of the collections made and not appropriated to the payment of the bonds. Held that such a suit was not one for rent, and was not cognisable under the Rent Act. ALI MAHOMED v. KENARAM GHOSH [8 W. R., 128]

56. ————— Purchase of crops on condition that they were subject to claim for rent.—Suit against purchaser to recover amount of rent—Where a party purchases crops belonging to a ryot at auction sale with notice, and assenting to the condition of sale that the crops were subject to the landlord's claim for rent, and the landlord also being aware of the terms of sale allows the purchaser to remove the grain on the understanding that the purchaser assented to, and became liable to pay, the rent, a suit to recover the amount from the purchaser is a suit as an implied contract between the landlord and the purchaser, and was not cognisable under the Rent Act. ACHUL v. GUNGA PERSHAD . . . 2 Agra, 73

57. ————— Default of sezawul.—Suit against sezawul to recover loss—A lease empowered the landlord, on default of payment of any of the kists by the tenants, to appoint a kuruk sezawul, the tenants being responsible for any loss accruing. A default having occurred, and a kuruk sezawul having been appointed, the landlord sued to recover the loss sustained by him. Held that such a suit would not lie under the Rent Act. ANUND MOYEE DEBIA v. 60. ———— Suit to collect rents as a sharer or representative of sharer—The Civil Court had jurisdiction in a suit which involved the right to collect rents as a sharer or representative, or as deriving from a sharer, and the decision of which depended on proof of a certain alleged partition. HURROCHUNDER ROY v. OBHOY CHUBEN SIRCAR 2 W. R., Act X, 72

61. ———— Suit raising question of extent of share as kutkeenadar—Where the kutkeenadar of an alleged share sued the kutkeenadar of the remaining portion for a proportion of rent, and defendant, while admitting himself to be plaintiff's tenant, disputed the extent of the alleged share,—Held that the question of the extent of the shares of the parties as co-kutkeenadars could only be decided by a Civil Court, which could give complete relief on the whole case with reference both to shares and rent. VERASUT HOSSEIN v. JUGEDHAREE SING

Act VII of 1876 for the registration of their names as proprietors of the land purchased having been rejected, the decree-holders brought the present suit to establish their title to, and to recover possession of, the land. Held that the plaintiff's title was bad, on the ground that the decree did not purport to bind the surety for the payment of the money awarded, and on the ground that a Revenue Court is not competent to entertain a suit against a person who has become surety for payment of rent. BUGWAN CHUNDER ROY CHOWDHRI v. 88. ———— Suit for arrears of rent.—Benami lease.—Landlord and tenant.—Act X of 1859.—A. brought a suit in the Collector's Court against B., C., D., and E., for arrears of rent in respect of land demised under a pottah to F. He joined G and H as defendants. According to the terms of the pottah they were sureties for F. It was admitted that F.'s name was used benami in the pottah, and that he took no interest. A. sued B., C., D., and E. as the parties interested and in possession. C. objected that a new settlement had been made and a new pottah granted; that he held a moiety only of the lauds, and was not liable for more, and that D. was his ryot, and ought not, therefore, to have been made a defendant. D. and E. contended that they were liable in respect of the lot comprised under the pottah, and had already paid rent for it to A. under a decree, but objected that they ought to have been sued separately from B., and B. did not appear. The lower Court held that C. had failed to make out his case, and that D. and E. were liable in this suit, and passed a decree ordering them to pay the amount admitted by them to be due from them, and the other defendants to pay the remainder of the claim. C. appealed. On the appeal, PEACOCK, C. J. (MITTER, J., contra), held that the plaintiff's suit must be dismissed, the lease being to H, and not to the defendants; that the Court below had founded its decision on matters extraneous to the lease, which it had no jurisdiction to inquire into. Held per MITTER, J., that the suit was properly brought against the actual tenants and not against the benamidar, and that the Collector had jurisdiction. Held by both Judges that the suit should be dismissed as against the sureties, who could not, as such, be sued under Act X of 1859. ROY PRIYANATH CHOWDHRY v. BEPINBEHARI CHUCKERBUTTY

C appealed under section 15 of the Letters Patent. Held by KEMP and JACKSON, JJ., that the Collector had full jurisdiction to entertain the suit, which was properly brought against those who were in the actual possession of the land, and that these persons were really the tenants, that the form of the decree passed by the Collector was correct, the plaintiff having consented to the decree being given in that form; that the sureties had really made themselves responsible for those who were really interested under the lease, and not for F. Prosunno Coomar

Pal Chowdry v. Koulash Chunder Pal Chowdry, B L. R., Sup. Vol., 759, distinguished. Held by NORMAN, J. (dissenting), that the terms of the lease under which F. was alone interested could not be contradicted by oral evidence; that F. alone was bound to the lessor under the lease; that the defendant could not be sued as tenant, unless subsequent to the pottah and kabalat something had occurred creating the relation of landlord and tenant between them and the lessor, that no such relation or any contract creating such relation between the parties could be implied from the circumstances of the case, and the suit should be dismissed. The Revenue Court had therefore no jurisdiction. But whether in the Revenue or Civil Court, D. and E. could not be sued jointly with B. and C., nor could G. and H.

89. ———— Suit for arrears of rent—Question relating to rent.—In execution of a decree of the Revenue Court in a suit brought by K. for arrears of rent of a certain putni, the putni was put up for sale and purchased in the name of G. The rent having again fallen into arrear, K. took proceedings against G., under Regulation VIII of 1819, for the sale of the putni; but the arrears having been paid, the putni was not sold. In a suit for arrears of rent of the same putni subsequently brought by K. against G., P., and B. (the wife of P.) jointly, on the allegation that the putni had been purchased by G. benami for P. and B.,—Held that the Collector had no jurisdiction to try questions relating to rent depending upon equitable rights and liabilities arising from circumstances other than those of the relationship of landlord and tenant. 90. ———— Benami lease.—Beneficiary interest.—In a suit for arrears of rent on a lease granted to one of two defendants in the name of the other, where the former admitted benami execution of the agreement, but the latter denied that any relation of landlord and tenant existed between himself and the landlord,—Held that the question whether the latter defendant was the party beneficially interested in the lease was not one which was intended by the Legislature to be tried by the Revenue Court. KISHEN BUTTEE MISRAIN v. HICKEY 11 W. R., 406

91. ———— Suit for arrears of rent—Title.—A. died, leaving four sons, B., C., D., and E., by a wife deceased, and a widow, K., and three other sons, F., G., and H., by her. K. brought a suit against B., C., D. and E., and against her three sons, F., G., and H., to establish her title to a certain

talook which she alleged had been conveyed to her by A. under a deed of gift. B., C., D., and E. set up a prior deed of partition, whereby the property of the deceased, including this talook, was divided between all his sons in the proportion of ten annas to B., C., D. and E., and six annas to F., G., and H. The High Court, on appeal, held that the deed of partition was genuine, and rendered the subsequent deed of gift inoperative. Afterwards B., C., D., and E. instituted a suit in the Collector's Court for arrears of rent in respect of another talook, also included in the deed of partition, against the ryots and F., G., and H. The ryots admitted that they held at the rent claimed, but stated that they had not paid their rent on account of a dispute between the brothers as to the shares in which they were entitled to the same. F., G., and H. raised the defence that this suit could not be maintained in the Collector's Court a suit in the Civil Court should be brought for the determination of their shares, and the decision in their prior suit was no evidence against them. Held that the question was really one of title between the brothers, and such suit could not be maintained in the Revenue Courts. 92. ———— Suit for arrears of rent.—Question of joint title.—In a suit for arrears of rent under Act X of 1859, where defendant, admitting plaintiff's interests in the land, alleged that it was the ijmali property of himself and the plaintiff, the Revenue Court dismissed the suit on the ground that it had no jurisdiction. The Judge on appeal reversed the decision and gave plaintiff a decree. Held that even if the Judge had gone simply into the question of title and decided whether the estate was joint or separate, and on that decision based a decree, he would not have been wrong. [16 W. R., 82

93. ———— Suit for arrears of rent and for possession.—Where a claim for arrears of rent was joined to a claim for recovery of possession, the suit could not be brought under the Rent Act. a party in such a case was entitled to ask the Court

3. ———— Hindu estate, Person taking possession of.—Liability for debt—Executor de son tort—Where a Hindu died leaving a widow and brother, and the brother took possession of the deceased's estate during the widow's lifetime,—Held that the brother was liable to pay a debt of the deceased out of the estate come into his hands Held, also, that he was liable as legal representative of deceased, the widow having relinquished her rights as heiress. Quare,—Is any stranger who takes a deceased's estate liable, under Hindu law, to pay his debts as executor de son tort? JOGENDER NARAIN DEB ROYKUT v 'LEMPLE

[2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 234

4. ———— Subsequent proof of will by executor—Liability of estate in hands of executor—Creditor's right to execute decree or bring suit against executor—The person taking possession of the estate of a deceased Hindu (who has left a will, of which, however no probate has been granted) must, in the present state of the law, be treated for some purposes as his representative, until some other claimant comes forward. A judgment obtained against such a person, even if it cannot be executed against the estate in the hands of an executor when he has taken out probate, is at any rate sufficient to enable a plaintiff to bring a suit against the executor in order to have the decree satisfied PROSUNNO CHUNDER BHUTTACHARJEE v KRISTO CHYTUNNO PAL . 5. ———— Heir of deceased Hindu allowing stranger to enter into possession of deceased's property—Effect of decree against party in possession.—If the heir of a deceased Hindu stands by and allows a stranger to enter into possession of the deceased's property, every person claiming under him will be bound by the decree in a suit of which he had notice, instituted bonâ fide against the party in possession for the recovery of a debt due by the deceased to the plaintiff UMA SUNDARI v NITYA-NUND SHAHA RAI . 3 C. L. R., 157

6. ———— Liability of representatives.—Money-debts.—Damages for breach of contract—The heirs and representatives of a deceased person are liable, according to equity and good conscience, to pay not merely the actual debts of the deceased, but also the damages which arise from his breaches of contract. DELANNEY v BIBEEJAN . 22 W. R., 494

7. ———— Widow of deceased Hindu.—Creditor's right on decree against widow as representative—Where a Hindu died leaving a childless widow and a separated brother, it was held that, until a legal representative was appointed to the deceased's estate, his widow was the only person who could defend a suit as his representative, and that while a decree obtained against the widow would enable a creditor to attach and sell, not only the widow's life-estate in the immoveable property, but also the reversionary estate of the remainder-man, yet a decree obtained against the remainder-man would not enable the creditor to touch the estate in the hands of the widow. NATHA HABI v. JAMNI

8. ———— Sale in execution of decree against estate of deceased—Suit against representatives of deceased husband's estate—In 1862 a suit for mesne profits was brought against certain persons as being the heirs of one R. L., deceased, among whom were his widow and two infant sons. During the pendency of this suit the two infant sons died, and the widow was made a defendant as representing the estate of her deceased sons. The suit was decreed in favour of the plaintiffs in 1875; and on the plaintiffs applying for execution, the widow objected that 5 16ths of the properties, against which execution was sought, was the property of her adopted son, whom she alleged to have adopted in 1874. The adopted son was not made a party to the suit. This objection was overruled, but the same objection was taken by the adopted son through his natural father as his guardian and next friend, and the Court released the 5-16th share from attachment, and allowed the objection. Against this order some of the plaintiffs appealed, but pending the appeal another of the plaintiffs applied to the High Court under section 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure to have the order set aside. The Court, whilst refusing to interfere with the order, inasmuch as there appeared to be no material irregularity therein, pointed out to the lower Court that the decree of 1875 having been obtained on account of a debt of R. L.'s, and being against the widow as representing her husband's (R. L.'s) estate, the estate would be answerable for the debt, whether the widow or the adopted son represented the estate, supposing the decree to have been properly obtained. The principle in Ishan Chunder Mitter v. Buxsh Ali Soudagur, Marsh, 614, followed SOTISH CHUNDER LAHIRY v. NILCOMUL LAHIRY

9. — Son as representative of father.—Suit against son—Assets—Where a suit is brought against a Hindu son, personally and as representative of his father, to recover a debt due by the father, a decree ought to be given against his son, whether he has inherited any property or not, the result of such a decree in the case of non-inheritance being that it cannot be executed against the non-inheriting son. BAPUJI AUDITRAM v. UMEDBHAI HATHE SING . . . 8 Bom., A. C., 245

10. — Suit against legal representative.—Assets—Decree—Execution—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 252—A plaintiff is entitled to sue the legal representative of his deceased debtor, and to obtain a decree against him, without proving that assets have come into his hands. It is sufficient if there are assets of which he may become possessed. The decree should mention that it is against the defendant in that character, and should be executed as directed by section 252 of the Civil Procedure Code, Act XIV of 1882. Rayappa Chetti v. Ali Sahib, 2 Mad., 336, followed GIRDHARLAL v. BAI SHIV . . . I. L. R., 8 Bom., 309

11. — Suit against heir for debts of ancestor.—Onus probandi.—In a suit against an heir for debts of his ancestor, in the absence of special circumstances, it lies upon the plaintiff in the first instance to give such evidence as would prima facie afford reasonable ground for an inference that assets had or ought to have come to the hands of the defendant. Plaintiff having laid his foundation for his case, it then lies upon the defendant to show that the amount of such assets is not sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's claim, or that he was entitled to be satisfied out of them, or that there were no assets, or that they had been disposed of in satisfaction of other claims. KOTTALA UPPI v. SHANGARA VARMA [3 Mad., 161

12. — Liability of representative with assets to account.—Mesne profits—When a party is proceeded against as the representative of a deceased judgment-debtor, and it is proved that property which belonged to the deceased judgment-debtor has come into his hands, it lies upon him to account for such property and to include in his accounts mesne profits, whether accruing in the shape of rents or of interest. ASEEMOONNISSA v. AMBERONNISSA . . . 15 W. R., 285

13. — Denial of assets.—Decree against estate—Costs—In a suit brought against the representatives of a deceased Mahomedan, alleged to be in possession of his estate for recovery of the amounts of a bond-debt due by the deceased, the plaintiff should first be allowed to establish his right of suit against the estate, although the defendants plead that they possess no property belonging to the deceased to satisfy the claim. Such a plea, if established, is one to be regarded in framing the decree. The decree in such a case should be for payment out of the property of the deceased. And ordinarily the Court should not direct payment of the costs by the defendants personally, but out of the estate MADHO RAM v. DILBUR MAHUL . . . 2 N. W., 449

14. — Person in possession of estate without assets.—Act VIII of 1859, s. 203—The plaintiff sued the defendants on the ground that they were in possession of his deceased debtor's property. It being found that the defendants received no assets from the deceased,—Held, the suit was rightly dismissed. If the suit had simply been against the defendants as heirs or personal representatives of the deceased, and if they had alleged that no assets had come to their hands, the plaintiff would have been entitled to a decree against them as representatives of the deceased (if he had prayed for such a decree), without going to a trial on the question whether or not the defendants had assets; and in that case he might have proceeded, in enforcement of his decree, under the provisions of section 203, Act VIII of 1859. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF HIRALAL MOOKERJEE

SOORJOMONEE DEBIA* . . . 8 W. R., 101

16. — Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 203—Right to have decree executed out of property coming to hands of representative—Plaintiff sought to recover the amount of a bond executed by the father of the defendant, and prayed for a judgment against certain land which belonged to the defendant's father and the right to which passed by succession to the defendants. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for payment by the defendants of the amount of the bond out of any property which passed to them as the representatives of their father; the plaintiff, in execution of the decree, being at liberty to proceed in respect of the immoveable property, if there should be no moveable property left, or if it should prove insufficient when sold to satisfy the decree. RAYAPPA CHETTI v. ALI SAHIB [2 Mad., 336

17. — Execution of decree against son.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 203.—Issues—Where the defendant in a suit for the payment of money died before decree, his sons were made parties and a decree for the debt due by the deceased was given against them. In execution of this decree the decree-holder attached certain property in the hands of one of the sons, who objected on the ground that it was his self-acquired property. Held that the proper issues to be determined were (1) whether the property attached by the decree-holder had formed a part of the estate of the deceased debtor, and if not, (2) whether it was separate property of the son, that son had misapplied any property received by him from his father, and if so to what extent. MOORAREE SINGH v. PURYAG SINGH 2 C. L. R., 189

18. ———— Responsibility of representative—Rights of creditors.—When a defendant against whom a decree was passed in his representative capacity has made payments in satisfaction of the decree to the full value of the property of the deceased which has come, or but for the default of the defendant might have come to his hands, the decree can no longer be executed even although the decree-holder may be able to prove that the defendant still has in his possession property which originally belonged to the deceased. If the heir of a deceased Hindu or Mahomedan has sold to a bona fide purchaser property which he has inherited, he is responsible for the assets received, but the property cannot be followed in the hands of the purchaser. RAM GOLAM DOBEY v. AYMA BEGUM [12 W. R., 177

19. ———— Liability of representatives. Onus probandi.—Mode of accounting.—Before judgment-debtors can claim exemption from a decree-holder's claim, on the ground that they only received a small sum from their ancestor's estate, or that what they have received has been paid in satisfaction of their ancestor's debts, they should prove and file an inventory of the whole estate descended to them, and prove how it has been applied. In a claim of this kind, the onus of proof is on the judgment-debtors, and, on their failure to sustain it, a presumption arises in favour of the decree-holder. JOOGUL KISHORE SINGH v. KALBE CHURN SINGH [25 W. R., 224

20. ———— Payment of debt to representative—Refusal to pay uncertificated representative.—The defendant gave a bond on unstamped paper to the plaintiff's eldest brother. On the obligee's death the succession was disputed, and the obligor refused to pay the subsequent interest to the plaintiff. Held that, as the plaintiff had failed to take out a certificate of succession to the obligee, the obligor was justified in such refusal. Held, also, that the plaintiff could not recover the stamp penalty from the obligor. *GABUDA REDDI v. 7. ——— Power of Courts.—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s 529—The power given by section 329 of the Civil Procedure Code to make such order as the Court shall see fit must be construed with regard to the circumstances in respect of which the power is to be exercised. An order under section 329 should be the result of the fact that the defendant in the suit, who is precluded by the decree from disputing plaintiff's right, unjustly instigates a third party, who has no real interest in the property, to prevent the plaintiff from getting the benefit of his execution. A Court has no power under this section to determine, as between the judgment creditor and a third party obstructing the execution of the decree, important questions on the merits which are wholly unconnected with, and cannot be affected by, the fact that the obstruction is made at the instigation of the defendant. *GOVINDA NAIR v. Upon investigation the first class Subordinate Judge made an order staying execution of the decree. The plaintiff appealed to the District Judge, who held that no appeal lay to him, as the subject-matter of the original suit, out of which the execution suit arose, exceeded Rs. 5,000. The plaintiff appealed against this decision to the High Court. Held that the investigation of a claim under section 229 of Act VIII of 1859 was not to be regarded as a fresh suit, but was merely a continuation of the original suit, and that there was, therefore, no appeal against the order in question to the District Judge. *RAYLOJI TAMAJI v. The sale was confirmed and a writ of possession directed. After the decree, but prior to attachment, the original judgment debtor had executed and registered a putni pottah for a three annas share of one of the zemindaris in dispute, and granted it to D, who having objected under section 246, Civil Procedure Code, 1859, to the above sale, an order was made at the time of the auction sale that it should be proclaimed that D claimed a putni right, and this was accordingly done. Before M was put into actual possession she was required to find security. Delaying to do this, the lands were attached and sold under a judgment obtained by others who purchased and entered into possession. M, having furnished security, petitioned to be put into possession, but her petition was rejected. She then brought a suit to cancel the order refusing her possession. In her plaint she claimed khas possession, but did not refer to the putni claimed by D. Her plaint was decreed, the decree was appealed, and it was finally upheld by the Privy Council, but throughout the litigation no issue was raised as to the putni. In the proceeding to execute the decree M claimed actual possession. Before process had been issued, D. objected to khas possession being given of his putni mouzah. The Judge ruled that the objection fell within the spirit of section 269, Act VIII of 1859, and that he had therefore jurisdiction to entertain it. Held that section 269 did not apply, inasmuch as no attempt had been made to deliver possession. Held, also, that the only intention of the decree was to confirm the plaintiff in the position which she occupied when the property was sold in execution of her original decree, after proclamation of D's claim, and that she was not entitled to khas possession. *SHARODA PERSHAD MULLICK v. 48. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 269 and 246.—Order as to right to possession.—An application under section 246, Act VIII of 1859, having been disallowed on the ground of unnecessary and improper delay, the attached property was sold, but on the attempt to take possession the purchaser was obstructed by the applicant, who alleged himself to be in possession. The Court made an investigation under section 269, and determined that as applicant's claim had been disallowed under section 246, he had no right to remain in possession. Held that this order was judicious and proper. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF BANEEMADHUB ROY . . . 13 W. 49. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 269 —Limitation.—"Suit to establish his right"—Right contradictory to summary order or consistent with it—The words "suit to establish his right" in section 269 of the Civil Procedure Code meant a suit to establish his right to present possession; but where there was a subsisting right which was contradicted by the summary order under that section, and which was to be properly asserted by such a suit, the suit, by the person dispossessed or refused possession to establish his right, had to be brought within one year from the date of the order, failing which he could not sue afterwards on any portion of such right. It was otherwise where his right was consistent with the order and the possession given under it. RANGO VITHAL v. RIKHIVADAS BIN RAYACHAND . . . 11 Bom., 174

50. ———— Order not made against parties to proceedings.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 268, 269—A purchaser of immoveable property at a Court sale having been obstructed by the defendant, made an application to the Court under section 268 of Act VIII of 1859 for the removal of the obstruction, but subsequently withdrew his application. The Court thereupon made an endorsement on the application to the effect that as the applicant did not wish to proceed further no investigation was made. Held that no such order had been made as was contemplated by section 269, that section contemplating at least an order against one party or the other. BHIKA v. IN HARASATOOLLAH v. BROJONATH GHOSE

a case governed by the Civil Procedure Code, 1877, it was held that there being no provision in that Code similar to that contained in section 269 of Act VIII of 1859, enabling the Court to do so, the Court could not enquire into a complaint made by a person other than the defendant on the ground of dispossession in the delivery of possession to the purchaser of immoveable property sold in execution of a decree; and therefore the only remedy of a person so dispossessed was by regular suit. This omission in the Code of 1877 was rectified by the amending Act XII of 1879, and under the present Code, Act XIV of 1882, a person other than the defendant may make an application for an inquiry.

Parties—Subject-matter of suit and cause of action

be the same or their representatives, that the subject-matter of the suit should be the same, and the cause of action the same. MAHARAJ SINGH v. BEELA

2. ESTOPPEL BY JUDGMENTS.

4. ——— Rule as to estoppel by judgment.—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2—The doctrine laid down in the Duchess of Kingston's case, 2 Smith's, L. C., 6th Ed., 679, as to estoppel by judgment is applicable to cases tried under Act
VIII of 1859, the second section of which is consistent with that rule. But the Judicial Committee, reversing the decision of the Court below, considered that the doctrine had no application in the present case, the judgment relied on not being the judgment of a Court of concurrent jurisdiction directly upon the point upon the same matter, and, after an examination of the whole evidence, restored the judgment of the first Court. KHUGOWLEE SING v. HOSSEIN

in evidence in a subsequent suit, either as a res judicata, or as proof of the particular point which it decides, unless between the same parties or those claiming under them. In a suit between A. and B. the question was, whether C. or D. was the heir of H. If C. was the heir of H., then A. was entitled to succeed; otherwise not. The same question had been raised in a former suit brought by X. against A. and decided against A.; and this former judgment was admitted in evidence in the suit between A. and B., and dealt with by the Courts below as conclusive evidence against A. upon the point so decided. Held (MITER, J., dissenting) that the former judgment was not admissible as evidence in the suit between A. and B. either as "a transaction" under section 13, or as "a fact" under section 11, or under any other section of the Evidence Act. 6. ————— Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss 13, 40, 41, 42, and 43.—Onus probandi.—Judgments and decrees recognising rights between parties to a suit or between persons whom they represent, although they are not conclusive under the Evidence Act (I of 1872), as they were before that Act came into operation, are yet admissible in evidence under section 13 of the Act, even if the parties in the former suit be entire strangers. Where the parties are the same, or representatives of those in the former suit, such judgments and decrees may be evidence so nearly conclusive as, when produced by the party in whose favour they are, to shift the burden of proof from him to his opponent. Semble.—Under section 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), the law is now the same as it was under Act VIII of 1859 prior to the passing of the Evidence Act. 8. ————— Suit for arrears of rent.—Onus probandi.—In a suit for arrears of rent of a half-share of land, the plaintiffs relied upon an ex parte decree for rent at a certain rate, which they had obtained in 1869 against the tenants of this share. The defendants relied upon a subsequent decree in a contested suit by the plaintiffs against the tenants of the other half-share, in which a lower rate of rent had been given. No other evidence than the decrees was produced on either side. It did not appear whether the ex parte decree had ever been executed. Held that it was open to the defendants to dispute the rate of rent claimed, and that the plaintiffs were bound to prove that they were entitled to recover it. 10. ————— Decrees in rent suits.—Suit for arrears of rent—Subsequent suit for enhancement.—The plaintiff sued the defendant in the year 1873 for arrears of rent at a certain rate per bigha. The defendant pleaded that the land had been held by him at an uniform rent for more than twenty years, and this contention was supported by the Court. The plaintiff then gave the defendant notice of enhancement, and sued to recover rent for two years at the rate stated by the defendant, and for one year at an increased rate. To this suit the defendant raised substantially the same defence. Held that the decision in the previous suit was not a bar to the present suit, there being two questions for consideration,—one, whether there had been an uniform payment of rent for twenty years; and if so, whether the presumptions which the law directs to be drawn from an uniform payment of rent for twenty years had been rebutted by the plaintiff, neither of which questions were concluded by the previous decision. 11. ————— Decision as to amount of land held as tenant.—In an action for rent defendant pleaded, by way of estoppel to part of the plaintiff's claim, that, in a prior action for rent previously due, brought by the plaintiff against the defendant, it had been found that the defendant was tenant to the plaintiff of a less quantity of land only than that in respect of which the plaintiff claimed rent in his suit. Held that there was no estoppel, and that the plaintiff might show, notwithstanding such previous judgment, that the defendant was in occupation of the larger quantity. 14. ————— Suit for refund of excess of rent after suit for arrears of rent.—The defendant (a zemindar) refused to receive rent from the plaintiffs, talookdars, at the rate asserted by the latter, who therefore deposited the amounts from time to time in the Zillah Court. The zemindar having drawn out these amounts, sued for arrears of rent, alleging that the money paid into Court covered only the principal and interest for a certain period, and obtained an ex parte decree. In a suit brought for a refund of the money paid into Court, which had without the plaintiffs' consent been irregularly carried to the account of interest,—Held that the claim was barred as res judicata. *GOBINDNATH SUNDYAL v. 15. ————— Decision as to right to rent—Dismissal of former suit for rent.—Held that the plaintiff having failed in a regular suit in 1853 to establish his right to rent, a subsequent suit for rent was not admissible, unless since that date rent was paid or his title recognised in some way. *SOOKHNUND v. 16. ————— Decision as to amount of rent—Subsequent suit for abatement of rent.—The plaintiff obtained a putni lease of certain villages from the defendant in 1861 at an annual rent, and in 1865 was evicted from a portion of the property. She took no steps to obtain an abatement; but inasmuch as she did not pay any rent for the year 1871, the defendant brought a suit against her for the rent of that year. The plaintiff set up the defence that she was entitled to an abatement of Rs155 from her rent, the Rs155 representing the annual value of the property which she had lost in consequence of the eviction. In that suit it was decided that the amount of abatement she was entitled to was Rs42. No appeal was made against that de-

In a suit brought by the plaintiff for the purpose of obtaining a permanent abatement of her rent she claimed the precise measure of abatement, viz, Rs155, which she had claimed in the suit brought against her by the defendant. Held that the question was res judicata, it having been raised and decided in the former suit. NOBO DOORGA DOSSEE v. Foyz Buksh Chowdhry, 1 L. R., 1 Calc., 200, that the decree in the first suit determined the amount of rent due from the defendant to the plaintiff. Held, further, that the decree was properly admissible as evidence, though the plaintiff had not taken out execution upon that decree and his right to take out execution was barred by limitation. *BIRCHUNDER MANICKYA v. 18. ————— Decree as to amount of rent payable in former years—Decree on admission.—The plaintiff in a suit for rent having failed to prove the amount of rent claimed by him, the Court in trying the issue "What is the proper amount of rent payable to the plaintiff?" gave the plaintiff a decree for the amount admitted by the defendant, that amount being less than that claimed by the plaintiff. In a later suit the plaintiff sued the defendant in respect of the same holding for the rent of a subsequent year, and he claimed at the same rate as he had claimed in the previous suit. Held (MITTER, J, dissenting) that the decree in the former suit was res judicata as to the proper rent payable by the defendant. *Punnoo Singh v.
